The Rev. Dr. Bellows, in his sermon at the commencement at Harvard, intimates a New Church movement—a catholic ground of fellowship, or broad church with a ritual; but if the object be to establish a pure church and simple worship,—to exhibit apostolicity itself,—why not go back to the simplicity of the apostles? The apostles do not direct any ritual; they do not bind a man even in form, much less in conscience, to any precise liturgy. We could hail Dr. Bellows as a true reformer, and with many more could unite upon liberal church principles; but who would bear the idea of a new hierarchy? It is denied that this is intended; but how could the plan eventuate else? Man has been considered a religious being—admitted to possess a nature adapted to religion. But this is only shown in the fact that he seeks worship; in which he proposes to propitiate; by which he seems to be aware of religious need, and would secure supply; that supply he finds in the satisfaction of having done that which was demanded; and, dependent upon a gracious providence and care, which his imagination or his faith has secured to him, he feels confident; this much is gained; and in the real fact, the divine providence over the truly devout worshiper.

Now each man's religion is, to him, a heritage; but a heritage sometimes with encumbrances. If a man have no religion, he must be exceedingly impoverished; yes, extremely, absolutely impoverished! For all things else will soon surrender before the ancient religious heritage. Each man will value his inheritance in proportion as certain considerations weigh upon him. This fact is no less true in [illegible]

[illegible] another, from love of gain. Religion [illegible]

[illegible] a great claim in the world, and still may be divided into various classes. Outside of christianity, there are many, even, whose devotion to the modes of worship, which are founded, as we believe, entirely on fables, would shame the languid and frigid homage of the professor of the christian religion, whose great claim for their conceptions of the divine, and manner of approaching divinity, is an ancient and time-honored position, with universal consent. It should be remembered that all idolaters invest the objects of worship with divinity, i. e., divinity is the ideal. Hence, as we have said, the god, whatever it may be, must be intended to exhibit the conception of divinity; and the worship, of necessity, should be the attempt to approach the ideal. The whole, without the light of christianity, is a miserable abortion; but still the best possible production from the sources employed.

Theology is the great bulwark of society, from whatever source and in whatever age. If heathen nations have been bad and deeply depraved with their idolatry, and under the darkness of mythology; it were a grave question—would they not have been worse off without any religion—without any idea of the gods or divinity? The Pagan and Mohammedan, being defective, especially in the great conceptions of Deity, have given but little improvement; yet I must contend that so far as the really theological has prevailed, it has been the stay of the social structure, and support of social order. Many heathen have been far from infidel; indeed, the inquiry of philosophical minds with them should naturally lead them to reverence and worship, which, as we must all agree, is the way to faith. Under the christian system, faith comes before enlightened worship; but in the religion of christianity generally, worship first. And in the dependence of the young mind upon example for the direction and force of its action, this must almost necessarily be the case; how much more so with the heathen mind, without the authority of revelation! All nations claim authority, in morals and politics, from their theology. In the Jewish, God himself made the social and political structure depend upon the knowledge of himself, which is the true idea in genuine theology. But in the religion of the Jews, based as it was upon knowledge, and exhibited in certain ceremonies, which, while they gave the credit to the divine wisdom and power, gave distinction to the people who were called to practice the rites and observances, and thus gave them precedence, we have an example of others and as they did, so each will do—they will refer to the great principles of their theology as the authority in their religious system. It is well that it should be so, yet the stationary position results from it. If Christians and even Protestants would not imitate Jews, Pagans and Mohammedans, then the whole civilized world might rejoice, for the Jew, as such, cannot be improved in his theology; his religion arising therefrom, his religion is stationary too. What another dispensation may assert for him is another question. The same is true of a Mohammedan or Pagan. He is mainly the creature of arbitrary circumstances and conditions. He then cannot deviate widely from his original bent. Not so with the christian, from the nature of the influences; and in one word, the whole power by which he, as a believer, is constituted. His position, not being limited by circumstances,—being a centre stand itself,—his knowledge of God may continually increase; hence his theology is improved. Then he progresses, not only in his religion, but in the apprehension of the divine.

Theology is indeed stationary, and religion too, with the classes referred to, aside from christianity; and it is to be feared that it is being made so by many christian sects after the Catholic exhibition of blind zeal, with adherence to the past in all things. Rather in Protestant sects, the effort is to improve religion, give it the true impetus of progression; while the great basis of a scriptural religion—genuine theology—would be wrapped in the swaddling bands of infancy—a juvenile giant, lying in the sleep of ages.

W. S. C.

(To be continued.)

For the Crisis.

Notice to the Scattered ones in the West.

I would like to have you send me your address and that of those that you know of, that I may give you a call if I come near you. Those that write, be particular to give me the state of affairs in your place, then I can judge where I am the most needed. I intend to travel the most of this year and hold quarterly conferences in several places, the object of which will be to enter into order, so that brethren that cannot go to the Annual conference may be accommodated with a home within their reach. I expect to start for Howard Co., next month—shall be glad to call and visit all the brethren. I expect to go forth at my own expense, and wish to know of all the pilgrim homes. I am glad that some preachers who have traveled West give the [illegible] of places and names. I wish others [illegible]

[illegible] come this way soon, and if those East could [illegible] would start these little preachers. There are many large places that could be reached, and now is the time, when the towns are easily to commence and grow with them. The people emigrate from all sections, with different religious views. Neither one can support their cause, and they will not unite together. We have long prayed for help. We hope now an opportunity has been presented, that you all will take hold.

By the way, I acknowledge those papers sent me by Bro. G. W. Frisbie, Forestville, Ct. Thank you; they are at work. I hope to see more, especially those containing the Minutes of our Conference, so we can let the people know what we are doing.

PETER S. W. DEYO.

Strawberry Point, Iowa.

"Thy Word is a Lamp unto my Feet."
Ps. 119: 105.

How glorious the light that around us is beaming,
Our hopes, O how cheering, our prospects how bright!
What radiance from God's blessed word now is gleaming
On the path of the pilgrims who walk in the light.
Time's darkness and shadows are fading—are ending!
Before the bright day-star in glory ascending!
The glow of the morning through heaven is extending!
'Tis guilding the mountains and banishing night.

We come from a world that is lying in darkness,
For sin hath cast round it her mantle of gloom,
No tongue can portray half its terrible blackness,
'Tis cheerless and dark as the shades of the tomb;
Yet still midst the darkness and gloom so uncheering,
The light brings to view our blest Savior's appearing,
It tells of the kingdom of heaven that 's nearing,
It gladdens the pilgrims with prospects of home!

Then, pilgrims, whilst traveling this journey so dreary,
We'll praise Him who gave us his word as a light,
In this we'll rejoice, though we're downcast and weary;
'T will guide us the remnant of this far-spent night
We'll heed the monitions that by it are given,
While o'er time's rude billows by tempests we're driven,
Be guided by it to the kingdom of heaven,
There know the fruition of glory and light!

R. L. H.

For the Crisis.

Take Care of Your Reputation?

Certainly you ought, reader, or rather let God take care of it. What is a man or woman without a good reputation—a reputation for probity, honest integrity, uprightness of purpose, a wish and will to do good and communicate?

"A good name," says Solomon, "is rather to be chosen than great riches." Careful, prayerful caution, should be evermore, not to injure our reputation by thought, word or deed. Give no just cause of offense to any one. "Provide things honest in the sight of all men." "Do nothing through strife or vain glory." Beware of officiousness and self-conceit. Do your utmost to gain a patient and profitable hearing, that God may be glorified. A man with a lost reputation, what can he do for God, to benefit his fellow men? "Confidence in an unfaithful man . . . is like a broken tooth, and a foot out of joint."

While we lay infinite stress upon the value of a good reputation, we do not fear of losing it, by declaring all the words of this life; by being "in season and out of season," by reproving, rebuking, exhorting with all long-suffering and doctrine—by doing our whole duty.—"Stand for Jesus" everywhere—face the foe. The sure way of losing a good reputation, is by stooping and crouching, bowing and scraping to a man-fearing, time-serving policy—shrinking from declaring boldly God's whole truth, come life, come death. "He that saveth his life shall lose it."

God never pledges Himself to take care of our reputation, save in the discharge of our duty, except we honor him by a faithful, unflinching adherence to every known precept. "Them that honor me will I honor." Beloved reader, do you wish a good name, imperishable—a reputation unsullied, evermore? "Confer not with flesh and blood." Speak out, cry aloud, spare not; hold up your head; look the enemy full in the face; fight the good fight, clear your skirts of blood. Suffer not sin to rest upon your neighbor. "Stand for Jesus, and Jesus will stand for you." Go forward, stem the current—"follow on to know the Lord." "Be steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord."

Very many lose their reputation by fearing to lose it. Look at the false prophets, false priests, the Scribes, Pharisees, hypocrites, who tithed mint, anise and cummin, and "omitted the weightier matters of the law—judgment, mercy and faith!" who loved the praise of men more than they did the praise of God! Where now their good reputation? And where the good reputation of those at the present day who follow in their steps?

"The memory of the just is blessed: but the name of the wicked shall perish." Whoever lost a good reputation by being faithful, bold in the cause of God? Did Moses, Joshua, Elijah, Daniel, Nehemiah, Paul the apostle? Did Luther lose his good reputation by his holy boldness, in fighting against the "Mother of Harlots?" Did Whitfield, Wesley, Bunyan, Baxter, lose their reputation, by their faithfulness [illegible] God's [illegible] Did the beloved Dudley Tyng lose his good reputation by opening his lips wide for the dumb? For this very thing his name is embalmed forever and ever in the memories of the blessed! Has the beloved Cheever, of our own city, lost his good reputation by standing boldly for Jesus on the auction block, and in the prison house? His name will be had in everlasting remembrance, with that of Wilberforce, and Clarkson, while his opposers and slanderers will sink into oblivion! "The righteous shall be in everlasting remembrance." Reader, are you seeking a good reputation? Stand boldly for Jesus then.

"When the retinue of heaven
Shall in matchless grandeur come,
And the countless hosts of mortals
Stand to hear their final doom—
Jesus smiling—saints rejoicing—
You will then be welcomed home!"

D. F. N.

New York.

Selections.

Workers.

Most of the great and beneficent operations of nature are silent. How quietly the sun diffuses his beams of genial light and heat. How gently does the dew distill upon the earth; in the morning its pearly drops adorn the fields and moisten the thirsty earth: but so imperceptibly have they gathered, that no one can hardly tell how or whence they came. But their service is none the less appreciated on this account. So in all the various departments of nature, Most of its processes are so silent and hidden that few know or comprehend them. They are known almost wholly by their results.

So in society, it is not always or generally those who make the most noise that accomplish the most. The practical worker has little time or disposition for boasting and pretension. 'Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven, but he that doeth the will of my Father who is in heaven.' It is very easy for some to talk and boast of their plans. Persons of an ardent temperament and strong imagination can easily get up almost anything on speculation. But practical people very soon understand the difference between planning and executing. Ardent and enthusiastic men are often very useful in carrying forward an enterprise, doing much to infuse life and vigor into the less hopeful. But they can rarely be trusted to plan any new work.

In our school days, we recollect hearing of a professor in the natural sciences, who used to make a great display of his experiments beforehand. He would tell his class of the wonders he was about to bring to their view, and so raise their expectation to a high pitch. On the trial he often failed, and only got a laugh on him for his pains. Our old professor was a plain, practical man, and remarkably successful. He would never promise anything, often warned us of failure, yet scarcely ever failed. Thus his experiments pleased us, and more than satisfied our hopes. We have often made the comparison, and reflected that this is very much the way of the world. Those who boast and promise most, usually bring the least to pass; while the still, earnest, patient worker, often unobserved, brings out the mightiest results, and ere we are aware, has obtained a most noble and enduring reputation.

What the ministry, the church, and the world want is workers. There is a vast amount of work to be done, and it must be done little by little, a grain at a time. It cannot be wrought in the mass. True, we must take large and extensive views; there must be liberal and comprehensive plans. But these must be executed step by step, action by action. Another thing is essential. Do one thing at a time. It is great folly to be perpetually devising new schemes—leaving one half finished to commence another, and so complete nothing. Undertake nothing without first counting the cost, when commenced, earnestly persevere until the work is done. Then you may be ready to enter on another. In this way you turn what you do to the best account, and insure success."—Morning Star.

Family Music.

Yes! there is music all around us
If we only list awhile.
And there is beauty everywhere.
The home of childhood to beguile.

Music, as well as the reading of our language, should be taught in every family, in every school and seminary. Its beautiful results are many.

1st. Singing improves the voice, takes away harshness, sweetens its tone, and gives it greater compass.

2d. Singing improves speaking.

3d. Singing refines the taste, elevates the affections, improves the heart, assists devotion.

4th. Singing is a delightful, interesting and profitable part of worship—especially domestic.

5th. Singing is an element of power.

Parent, teach your children to sing; commence early. Teach them to sing hymns of praise, of a pure and elevated character.

A more delightful scene cannot be presented this side of heaven, than when parents, with their sons and daughters, surrounding the domestic circle, devoutly unite their voices in sacred song.

"Domestic happiness, thou only bliss
Of Paradise that has escaped the fall.
—Golden Rule.

RIDING A HOBBY.—The Archbishop of Dublin tells of a horseman, who, having lost his way, made a complete circle; when the first round was finished, seeing the marks of horses' hoofs, and never dreaming that they were those of his own beast, he rejoiced, and said, "This, at least shows me that I am in some track." When the circuit was finished, the signs of travel were doubled, and he said, "Now, surely, I am in a beaten way;" and with the conclusion of every round the marks increased, till he was certain that he must be in some frequented thoroughfare, and approaching a populous town; but all the while he was riding after his horse's tail, and deceived by the track of his own error. So it is with men that ride a hobby.

[illegible] very few beams that are bright all the time.

[illegible] "THUS SAITH THE LORD." [illegible]

For the Crisis.

Diet—The Ministry.

"To the law and the testimony; if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them."—Isa. 8: 20.

The usual word in the Greek Scriptures for meat is Broma; (that which is eaten, and derived from Brosko, to eat,) and is used interchangeably with the most precise of all terms, to express the distinctive idea of "flesh."—Rom. 14: 15–21; 1 Cor. 8: 1–13. Another word is Trophe, from a word to nourish, and embraces the usual food eaten at that time. Of course, it included animal food, almost universally eaten throughout the whole range of Patriarchal, Prophetic and Apostolic times.—Matt. 3: 4; 6: 25; 10: 10; John 4: 8.

Note I. This food—flesh—was allowed by Jehovah—created "to be received with thanksgiving."—1 Tim. 4: 3. Nay; it was ordained and most solemnly sanctioned by God, as an essential part of Patriarchal and Mosaic worship. "The Passover," was a feast on flesh. It was one of the holiest of all memorial services among God's chosen people.

Note II. Abraham, the father of the faithful, the friend of God, ate flesh. He killed a calf to feast his celestial visitants! Thus did other godly worthies.

Note III. Jesus and his holy apostles "ate the Passover"—ate flesh—the sacrificed lamb.

Thus the purity of their persons—the efficiency, spirituality, and success of their ministry did not depend on their abstinence from animal food. They ate for nourishment. They ate what God appointed. They were sustained like other men, in their most spiritual approaches to God, by flesh that had been "salted with salt" and offered in sacrifice.

It is then a great mistake to assume for ourselves or others any "spiritual gift" on the ground of abstinence from what God has "appointed to be received with thanksgiving!" Abstinence on the ground of prudence and of christian charity is acceptable.—Rom. 14: 15; 1 Cor. 8: 13. But no dietetic rule that reflects on the goodness of God, or the holiest habits of his most honored servants, or that "puts a stumbling block in the way of the disciples," can be christian or even humane; because—

Note IV. It is the distinctive character of the false teachers whom the Holy Ghost saith should arise in Rome and the Romish earth—inclusive of the whole apostasy—that they should "forbid to marry and command to abstain from meats."—1 Tim. 4: 1–5. This is a bad place to put ourselves in—the company is bad too. Let us avoid it.

Note V. Christ's first miracle made water into first rate wine. John 2: 11–23. The apostle enjoins wine on a worthy minister as a drink instead of water, in a case of infirmity.—1 Tim. 5: 23. There is no reverse command from God—no miracle where wine was converted into water, as if water could be better than wine in all cases to clergymen.*

It has been my privilege to preach and reason of "righteousness, temperance and the judgment to come," but never to "go beyond the word of the Lord," as if God and the history of all the holy of all dispensations could be at fault!

Note VI. The Essenes and other anchorites at the first advent, the Monastics of Rome and of modern times, are not taken up into the catalogue of worthies with Abraham in Hebrews 11. History and holy scripture harmonize here.

The conclusion is, that we may eat wholesome food—"whatsoever is set before us, asking no questions, as the Holy Ghost" hath directed. Other "spirits" make other rules. Where christian charity demands abstinence from things even lawful, it is reasonable, right and acceptable to God. Amen. Monkery has no place in christianity.

J. B. C.

* Of course the writer is not to be understood as advocating the habitual use of wines.—ED.

Change of Clothing.

Change of clothing is a subject of vast importance, because, being injudiciously done, it has cost the life of thousands. One of the best, most useful, and humane men in our country, respected and admired at home and abroad—Abbot Lawrence, of Boston—brought on the illness which prematurely terminated his life by an injudicious change of clothing. Rachel, the great tragedienne of modern times, attributed the sickness which cut short her life to the same cause, on the occasion of going in the cars from New York to Boston. The general rule for daily changes should be to put on additional clothing the very moment we are sensible of a feeling of chilliness, irrespective of the time of day, or night, or season, or year. But, on the other hand, it is always hazardous to lessen the clothing for warmer weather, at any time during the day. Many lives will be saved if it be made a standing regulation never to diminish the amount of clothing after having first dressed in the morning; change to a cooler dress for warmer weather on the morning of the succeeding day. Persons are generally too eager to put on lighter clothing as spring advances, and on the coming of summer. It is safer and more philosophical to regulate the heat by [illegible] and let the clothing remain the [illegible] until the spring [illegible] and then [illegible] arrived, for in the latitude of New [illegible] are is sometimes very comfortable on the [illegible] first day of June, and families very greatly err in removing grates and stoves from the general room at an [illegible] [illegible] condition for hours together on an unexpectedly cool morning, rather than the summer arranged fire-place or stove should be soiled with ashes and [illegible] thus running the risk of giving a [illegible] less robust member of the family which may cause a sickness of weeks and months following. The same inconsideration and fear of trouble [illegible] and convenience of fire-making until late in the fall, and rather than have a bright cheerful fire the very first fall morning that is cool enough to make fire agreeable, they will sit shivering in the [illegible] for hours, in shawls and overcoats, or blankets piled on their laps. Shame on us for thus tampering with glorious good health, for thus inviting spirit-breaking and body-destroying disease.

Wearing flannel is another most important subject. It is worn next the skin winter and summer for the purpose of regulating the heat of the body, and preventing the effects of those sudden changes between in and out-doors, which are necessary to most persons in following the daily avocations of life. Woolen flannel is worn for this purpose because it is a "non-conductor," least calculated of any ordinary article of clothing to transmit heat, to carry it from one thing to another; that is to say, it takes a long time for a particle of heat to travel from one side of a blanket to the other; therefore, we say that flannel confines the heat to the body, "it keeps us warm," keeps the warmth about us in cold weather, and in very hot weather keeps the greater heat on the outside of us. Thus, in our changing climate, it aids in keeping the temperature of the body the same, and should be generally worn by all children, old, and weakly persons all the year. A much thinner article should be worn in summer. That the changes as to the feeling of heat and cold are less severe in connection with the "non-conductor," woolen flannel, than as to other articles, called conductors, may be tried any moment by placing the hand on a blanket, and then on a piece of cotton sheeting, or Irish linen, or an article of silk, for in all these things we must appeal to our own convictions from actual experience, rather than to the philosophical argument. Still, it is always gratifying to the reflecting to understand the reason of things, as it aids to their remembrance and is a stimulus to their observance. Flannel next to the surface has another important advantage; its fibres are sticky, they irritate the skin, and each one, by its constant titillation, induces a redness not quite so apparent to the eye as the intolerable itching, which it causes in some, is evident to the senses when a garment is first put on. The effect of this irritation, as physicians term it, is to draw the blood to the surface as certainly as a scratch of a pin, or the application of a blister plaster, but in a more moderate way, and the keeping of blood toward the surface is the health and the life of all. It is when it tends inwards that the wheels of the complex machinery are clogged, and men begin to die. As long as blood can be kept freely and fully on the surface, there is no death by disease.

But since the incessant application of an irritant tends at length to make the skin callous, hard, unfeeling, the flannel should be removed on retiring at night, and a cotton garment worn so as to give the skin rest during sleep, thus aiding sound repose. This should be done for motives of personal cleanliness, that by throwing the flannel over a line or on the back of a chair, it may have a thorough airing, and thus by shaking it well in the morning, before putting it on, again, it may be dry, fumigated, clean; with the additional advantage, that if not worn during the night, it is more serviceable during the day, making less clothing necessary, which should be a study, for the more we bundle ourselves up, the more we may, the more is the skin debilitated by the constant enervating warmth and need of ventilation. Thus it is that those who wear a great deal of clothing, and muffle themselves up so very carefully, whenever they put their heads out of doors, are always ailing, the "slightest thing in the world" gives them a cold, according to their own confession, and they are invalids for life. The reader who has been in the habit of sleeping in flannel, and from the statements made, is convinced that a change is wisdom, can do it the first night, the coldest of the winter though it may be, with entire impunity, if for a night or two he is at extra pains to heat his feet before the fire, stockings off, for half an hour, rubbing them with the hands meanwhile, until every part is perfectly dry and warm, and in addition will have an extra cover over the lower limbs. And even if he should take a little cold by the change, persevere resolutely, and the system will soon feel the benefit of the practice.—Health and Disease.

☞ Always have your room well ventilated.

THE CRISIS.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION,

Payable in advance.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.00
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address, 6 months	15.00
Thirty copies to one address, 6 months	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the paper within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability, when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send as much in addition to their subscriptions as they are willing to give, for distributing the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication [illegible]

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to us, give name, Post Office, County and State in which they reside, and direct to [illegible] GRANT, Boston, Mass.

[illegible]

The World's Crisis.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 218. | BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 16, 1859. | VOL. X. NO. 11.

The World's Crisis
IS PUBLISHED
EVERY WEDNESDAY MORNING
AT
No. 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
HENRY V. DAVIS, JOHN COUCH, | MILES GRANT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

MILES GRANT, Editor.

☞ The Crisis is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially, the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and the final destruction of the wicked.

For terms, see fourth page.

Original Contributions.

For the Crisis.

Longing for Rest.

Come, Savior, quickly come,
And take thy people home
With thee to rest!
Long thou hast absent been,
O, come to earth again,
Thy saints to bless!

Fain would thy waiting bride
Be seated near thy side,
No more to roam;
She would thy glory see,
And live and reign with thee,
In thy blest home!

She has been waiting long,
And thou hast been her song
By night and day,
Until thy glorious light
Breaks in upon her sight,
She'll watch and pray;

Knowing that her dear Lord,
According to his word,
Will soon appear;
Hailing with joy each sign
That speaks in tones divine—
Jesus is near! R. M. F.

West Killingly, Ct.

For the Crisis.

The Golden Symbols.—A Discourse.

BY ELD. O. R. FASSETT.

"This is the word of the Lord unto Zerubbabel, saying, not by might, nor by power, but by my spirit, saith the Lord of hosts."—Zech. 4: 6.

II. The means to be employed, or influences furnished the church for the accomplishment of her work on earth, are evidently the preaching of "the word of the Lord" through the agency of the Holy Spirit. "Preach the gospel," was the instruction of Christ. "Preach the word," was that of the Apostle. The command is one and the same. And "the word of the Lord" preached by the ministry and the churches, with the unction of the Holy Spirit, is the appointed instrumentality to enlighten and convert men to God. "No man, when he hath lighted a candle, covereth it with a bushel, or putteth it under a bed; but setteth it on a candlestick, that they which enter in may see the light." So the Lord never lit up a church or attached her to the word of the Lord,—or the "two sons of oil,"—not to give light; but the very object of their having his word is, to give light; i. e., the church, and not simply the minister:—the "lamps" or the "churches."

There are several things indispensable to the obtaining of a good light.

1. A perfect lamp. A broken lamp, or an imperfect one, can be of no use. Broken cisterns can hold no water, or oil.

2. A clean lamp. One would not put pure oil in an uncleansed lamp. A lamp must first be cleansed. When once cleansed, it must be kept clean and constantly trimmed while in use, every day, or it will refuse to burn.

3. The lamp must have oil, or some burning fluid. No one could expect a lamp to give light with no combustible material within it. And to burn well it must have pure oil. An impure article may impart light, because there is some oil within; but it will gender smoke and emit a disagreeable odor, because of extraneous ingredients.

4. A lamp constantly in use must have an unfailing supply. It may be filled, and in one night all, or nearly so, will be consumed. It must be continually replenished, or its light will go out.

5. A lamp must have a wick, to bring the oil in contact with the air, so that the inflammable material within when set on fire, may feed upon the oxygen in the atmosphere. The oil and air must be brought together.

6. Fire is needed. A match must be applied and the wick ignited, and as it communicates with the oil in the lamp, then the lamp will burn, until it is quenched by violence.

Six things are also necessary in a church to make her give light to the world.

1. A perfect church. One perfect in its organization; scripturally organized, with its proper officers and ordinances; perfect in its discipline and order; for a distracted, broken, and divided church can give no light; for it hold not all the [illegible] oil."

"For where envying and strife is, there is confusion and every evil work." "This wisdom (light) descendeth not from above" (the golden bowl), "but from beneath, and is earthly, sensual, devilish." "Keep the unity of the Spirit in the bonds of peace," if you would hold the golden oil, and give light to the world.

2. A clean and pure church. These lamps were "all of gold," and churches must be sanctified by the word, and cleansed by the working of regeneration, and be kept constantly in this pure state to give light to the world. "Be ye clean." "Be ye holy." "Sanctify them through thy truth," was the prayer of our Lord. "And the very God of peace sanctify you wholly," was that of the apostle.

3. A church must have "oil in her vessel with her lamp." And pure oil to burn brilliantly in the dark world. "The golden oil" furnished from the "golden bowl" and "olive trees." The light of some churches may be compared to some old lamps, uncleaned, and filled with bad oil; if they burn at all, it is with a dim light, and a bad odor. They are neither sanctified mediums nor have they but little of truth and the Spirit. There are also many lights in our world, the scintillations and sparks of men's own kindlings. "Satan" often transforms himself into an angel of light, and, with blazing theories and "doctrines of devils," lies in wait to deceive. The church of God must have the Holy Spirit and word in her body to give the "true light." And when her "whole body is full of light, with no part dark," then she will impart light to the world.

4. A church must have a constant supply of the holy oil, to give a continued light. She must be constantly supplied from the "golden bowl" and the "two olive trees"—unfailing resources which are provided. If not continually and daily furnished, her "lamp will go out," and the region will become dark. Some churches shine as do meteors, with sudden, flashing light, and then go out in darkness. They are periodical in giving light, as comets, which come and go, frightening some people with their sudden light, and causing levity with others, and the more grave and serious give learned speculations and theories, as moral philosophers, over the anomaly. True churches shine as do the stars, with a continued and steady light, guiding the periled mariner on earth's stormy ocean to the haven of eternal rest.

5. We remarked that "a wick" was needed in a natural lamp, to bring the oil in contact with the common air, so that the flame might feed upon it. So the church needs a temple and temple service, by which to communicate her inward light to the hosts. As the light and flame comes in contact with "the common people," who "heard Jesus gladly" and who always hear the gospel with the most interest, it separates them, feeding upon the good, which goes to increase her light and heat in christian zeal, while they are offered up a holy sacrifice to God, and the bad left alone, degenerate and fall to the earth as pestilential vapor, breeding moral death to destroy all around.

6. And lastly, A church needs the fire. It is not enough that the fire be latent in the oil in the lamp, it must be set on flame. So with a church, the Holy Spirit and word in her body must be baptized with the outward manifestation of the Holy Spirit, as though coming direct down from heaven, and sitting on the countenances and persons of her members; thus lit up as with a heavenly match from on high, then her oil within is consumed for the benefit of the world. Your "bodies must be full of light," and your tongues and countenances set on fire, and then the utterances of divine truth will be signal to the good of the world.

Do we as a church, and as individual members, hold such relation and union to God, his word, and Spirit, as here symbolized? Are we the golden channels, and the mouth and organ of the Holy Spirit and word of God to the world? Are we "the light of the world?" Let us cry mightily unto the Lord that he will thus make us, that he will send down his Spirit from on high and set on flame the word and Spirit in our body; then thus related and thus baptized, we shall be laborers together with him in adding "precious stones" to the spiritual building, which will ere long be completed with the bringing forth of the "Head-stone thereof with shoutings, crying grace, grace unto it." Remember, this is the word of the Lord,—"Not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord."

☞ If you love others, they will love you. If you speak kindly to them, they will speak kindly to you. Love is repaid with love, and hatred with hatred. Would you hear a sweet and pleasing echo, speak sweetly and pleasantly yourself.

[illegible] person who hates the [illegible]

For the Crisis.

Reasons for Believing the Advent Near.

BY ELD. A. ROSS.

No. II.

In a former article I endeavored to define our position in the prophetic calendar by an exposition of the metallic image. Our object in this is, to show that the event symbolized by the stone smiting the image upon the feet is, the personal advent of Christ and the opening of the dispensation of judgment. I am aware that on this point there is a diversity of opinion; for while all agree that we are in the iron and clay age of the world, many argue that the next great change is to be of a moral nature, and that the political contortions, which have from time to time, since the French revolution, threatened the social interests and quietude of every nation, are the sure precursors of a spiritual millennium, in which the gospel will be universally received, and its principles become the frame-work of every civil code.

But a proper understanding of the present dispensation, its opening, course, and end, will show that impossible. The present divine administration is purely one of mercy, in which God sends his rain upon the evil and the good, he opens wide his hand of beneficence to supply the wants of every living thing wherein is the breath of life, the seasons perform their revolutions with precision, and come laden with tokens of divine love and parental care. He sends abroad his word to sanctify the hearts of his people, accompanied by his Spirit, to enlighten the eyes of our understanding. Well might the Psalmist exclaim, "How manifold are his blessings!" To be sure, the present dispensation is disciplinary, yet, associated with the rod of correction is a merciful design. The punishments inflicted upon cities and nations in the past were of a judicial nature, in which the innocent suffered with the guilty. All these were but hints to the disobedient, that God was a God of justice as well as of mercy, and that justice would at length dislodge itself from mercy's grasp to redress all wrong and pour upon the heads of the impenitent the judgments written.

While mercy is thus performing its work upon the earth, what does the word of God teach us the disposition of the wicked will be, embracing the great majority of the human family? Read Isa. 26: 9, 10, 11.—"With my soul have I desired thee in the night; yea, with my spirit within me will I seek thee early: for when thy judgments are in the earth the inhabitants of the world will learn righteousness. Let favor be shewed to the wicked, yet will he not learn righteousness: in the land of uprightness he will deal unjustly, and will not behold the majesty of the Lord. Lord, when thy hand is lifted up they will not see; but they shall see, and be ashamed for their envy at the people; yea, the fire of thine enemies shall devour them."

We see by the above, although God has lavished his mercies upon the world, the hearts of the children of men are set on doing evil. The past furnishes no argument in favor of man's moral worth; disobedience and apostasy have marked his steps from the beginning. But it may be urged, the future beams with brightness; so it does, to the church; but the sun of this world is to set in obscurity.

In the action of the stone upon the image, no mention is made of a change of character of the statue; it is a blow—a sudden one—a blow which breaks in pieces, destroys, leaves not a trace of the existence of the statue, as it is said—"No place was found for them." The Roman empire—the feet—and with the feet all the rest, disappears. By this one blow the whole is pulverized, destroyed, annihilated, and after this judgment the stone which fell upon the statue becomes a mountain which fills the whole earth.

Did christianity break to pieces the fourth monarchy, or will it be the destroying element of the political governments of our own time? No. Christianity has a mission, but not to destroy. Jesus of Nazareth exhibited a loyalty to the Roman government. He respected its civil claims by rendering to Cæsar the things that were Cæsar's, and enjoined his disciples to do the same.

The design of the gospel is not to overthrow existing governments, but to take out of the Gentile nations a people for Christ's name. The act of destruction which is marked in the fall of the stone upon the feet of the image, by no means represents the grace of the gospel, nor has it any reference to the work which the gospel accomplishes. Besides, it is after the destruction of the statue that the stone becomes a great mountain and fills the whole earth; which signifies that the knowledge of the glory of God, which is to fill the earth, will not be till after the judgment and destruction of the fourth monarchy. But it represents the work brought to view in Ps. 2: 8, 9.—"Ask of me, and I will give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession. Thou shalt break them with a rod of iron; thou shalt dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel." Forasmuch as all this is a work of judgment, it cannot take place during the present dispensation of mercy. From one end of the Bible to the other, the event which is to close the present age and open that which is to come, is the coming of Christ. Let us be watching.

For the Crisis.

"Cannot Sin."

"Whosoever is born of God sinneth not; for his seed remaineth in him; and he cannot sin, because he is born of God."

When does this scripture have an application, in this life, or in that which is to come? Since the birth here brought to view is connected with freedom from sin, we might in our haste throw it forward into the resurrection state, and thus relieve our consciences from the obligation of living without sin now. I fear there is too much inclination to postpone blessings till the "ages to come." I believe in having something to do, to be, and to enjoy, in this life. It may be that this scripture belongs to us here. We must not put it in the future because we believe the "New Birth" is future. The word rendered "born" is sometimes translated "begotten." In 1 John 5: 1, it is rendered "born," "begat," and "begotten." In 1 John 5: 18, it is also rendered "begotten," and evidently refers to present experience. In 1 Cor. 4: 15, also Philemon 10, it is rendered "begotten" and had an application in Paul's day, since then it often refers to an experience in this begotten state. Why may it not in the passage before us?

But, it is further urged, "the text declares that one 'born of God doth not commit sin.' Every body commits sin now, therefore the 'birth' must be future." Not too fast, brother. We read also, 6th verse, that "whosoever abideth in him sinneth not." Are we not to abide in Christ now? Yea, it is our only hope. John 15: 6,—"If a man abide not in me, he is cast forth as a branch and is withered, and men gather them and cast them into the fire and they are burned." Hence there must be some—if any are saved—who abide in Christ now, and will abide, consequently some do not now commit sin, for "whosoever abideth in him sinneth not." Thus far we may have an application of the passage to the present time. "But, it says one cannot sin because he is born of God. Certainly, it is not impossible for the best christians to sin now, therefore it must have a future application." Very true, absolutely speaking. If we speak of the absolute impossibility of sinning, I doubt whether the text will apply either here or hereafter. I, in my ignorance, question whether it will be absolutely impossible to sin in the world to come. That there will be no sin THERE, I believe; but why? Simply because it will be absolutely impossible? No. This would end all virtue. It may be because there will be no disposition to sin, but a controlling delight in serving God. Now as we are to have the future state BEGUN in us, as far as character is concerned, it may be that the apostle John refers to this holy state of mind as being always connected with one "begotten of God," and that he did not speak of the absolute impossibility of sinning, which does not exist now, and, I think, never. Indeed, the word which he employs seems to indicate as much.

Schleusner renders the passage—"cannot delight in wickedness;" i. e., one who is begotten of God has no disposition, no relish, for sin while God's seed remaineth in him, not that he cannot apostatize; that would be employing the absolute sense, which evidently is not intended.

There are other passages which cannot be taken in the absolute sense. For instance, 1 Cor. 2: 14,—"The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: neither CAN he know them, for they are spiritually discerned." Taken in the absolute, this would make it impossible for man to know or be taught the things of God; yet we know, by the Spirit's help, he can not only know them but GROW in the knowledge of them.

How then shall we understand this? The natural man, as long as he remains under nature alone, cannot know the things of the Spirit. Again, Rom. 8: 7,—"The carnal mind is enmity against God; for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be." Taken absolutely, it would make it impossible to convert a sinner to God; for it declares the carnal mind cannot be subject to the law of God. Now we certainly know, that there is such a thing as bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ." How, then, shall we understand Rom. 8: 7? Why, that the mind, while subject to the flesh, cannot be subject to the law of God, which is spiritual. If this be true, the reverse is also true; and as one subject to the flesh (carnal) cannot be subject to the law, so one subject to the Spirit (law of God) cannot sin (or violate the law.) One passage, therefore, explains the other; one is to be taken in the same sense as the other; and neither of them will bear the absolute force of the letter.

Again. We read that God "cannot lie." Considered absolutely, this is not true. If God pleased he could as readily lie as anybody. What do we mean then? That he cannot lie consistently with his character and attributes. So in 1 Jno. 3: 9, the apostle means to say that a christian cannot love sin consistently, or while under the Spirit. We often speak in this way. Suppose it my duty to preach in Bristol, Ct., Oct 30th. Some one comes to me and requests me to preach in Worcester at that time. I reply immediately—"I cannot;" not that it is absolutely impossible, but I cannot consistently with my engagement. So the christian's engagements with God are such, he cannot sin.

Suppose some one urges me to go and repay vengeance upon my enemy. I say at once, "I cannot go, because I am a christian, and christians do not do so." So one begotten of God "cannot sin." Paul gives equally as strong meat, when he says we are "dead to sin." A dead man cannot sin. "There is no work or device in the grave whither thou goest." Sin has no power over him there. All its deceitfulness cannot excite one sympathy in a dead man's heart. You may place him in the midst of sin, you may clothe it with all its false charms, he will make not one single effort to engage in it. "Likewise reckon ye yourselves dead indeed unto sin." "How shall we who are dead to sin live any longer therein?" The inference is, that if we be "dead to sin," we cannot live any longer therein—we shall have no relish for it. Thus Paul corroborates the testimony of John, and both have an especial reference to our experience now.

Have we the seed of God remaining in us? Is there a darling sin for which we have a relish? When tempted to the least sin, can we, do we, reply instantly—"I cannot?" Let us become so "dead to sin" that we cannot "live any longer therein."

H. F. C.

"The Union Movement:"

A MEETING OF THE LAY-MEMBERS OF THE VARIOUS CHURCHES OF THE TOWN OF UNITY ON DEC. 3, 1858.

CHAPTER V.

A meeting of the preachers in the town of Unity, May 27th, to discuss the subject of Christian Union. Present, a Baptist, Methodist, Presbyterian, Lutheran, Episcopalian, and a Christian. Prayer by brother M. Brother E. in the chair, and brother L. secretary.

Pres. I have felt a strong determination to bring my church to an acknowledgment of the injustice of their course in depriving me of my support. I yet feel that it ought to be done, but how to do it is the matter.

Meth. Yes, sir, how to do it, is the matter! I have thought the same, but I find that my church is in good solid earnest. I find, too, that they can do as well without my preaching as I can do without their support.

Lu. I am not prepared to admit that I am driven into measures by the withdrawal of my stipends.

Ep. I am not willing to make any such admission either, but I am willing to admit, that having the subject of union forced upon my attention, and having leisure to read upon the subject, and give it a thorough examination, I have seen the evils of division more clearly than ever before.

Bap. Brother E. has expressed my mind pretty fully. Having my salary withdrawn, my pastoral labors being suspended, affording me abundant opportunity to examine the whole premises, I have been led to see things that I never thought of. I felt this at the close of our last meeting, and consequently expressed myself favorable to union.

Chris. Brethren, I have attended the prayer-meetings of the private members of our churches, and I am sorry you could not have all been present to have seen the love, piety, and zeal manifested at these meetings. I am sorry that you were not present to hear them pray for us, in these deliberations, that we might agree upon the scriptural basis for union, unite upon it, and enter into the great work of converting the world to the "one Lord, one faith and one baptism," formerly delivered to the saints! They are already united, and determined never to be separated again, in this world or the world to come.

Pres. I suppose they are making a great show, in repudiating all ministerial authority!

Bap. I was present at their meeting, a few evenings since, and, from remarks in several spirited exhortations, I gathered that they do not repudiate all ministerial authority. They say, that they repudiate our authority, because it conflicts with the authority of Christ, and the authority of his apostles. They insist that Christ and the apostles required them to be one—to be perfectly joined together, in the same mind and in the same judgment, and that there be no division among them, and that we interpose our authority, and prohibit them from being one; and, consequently, that they were compelled to repudiate our authority, or the authority of Christ and his apostles. They prefer repudiating our authority, and bowing to the authority of Christ.

Pres. And did you listen to such an imputation and make no reply?

Bap. I did, for I knew of no reply that could be made. I could not deny that Christ and the apostles required them to be one, and that they were willing to yield to the requirement. On the other hand, I could not tell them that we were willing that they should be one. Yet, when I saw them all united in worship, I could not but wish that we were indeed and in truth, one. Beside, the Word of God thundered it in my ears, that the Lord broke down the middle wall of partition between the Jews and Gentiles, and of the two made one new man, so making peace—that there is one body or one church, one Lord, one faith, and one baptism. I thought of the holy prayer of Jesus, for the oneness of believers, and the command of the apostles, to be of the same mind; and, as Peter once said, "What was I, that I should withstand God?"

Pres. They have converted you then! and I suppose you will join Mr. C., and uphold them, in their repudiation of ministerial authority!

Bap. I have not said what I shall do, I do not know that I can, at present, say what I shall do, I desire to do right! What would you, sir, have replied, had you been in my place, when our brethren showed that the authority of Christ required them to unite, and that our authority required them to remain divided?

Pres. What would I have done? Why, sir, I should——I——should have shown that Christ did not mean that.

Bap. That he did not mean what?

Pres. That we should be one in that sense.

Bap. But he prayed that we should be one, as he and his Father are one. The union is the same as that existing between him and his Father. How could you get over it?

Pres. The passage does not mean that.

Bap. What does it mean?

Pres. It means—the Greek—I am not to be caught in the "gull-traps of Campbellism," the fact is—

Meth. Brethren, I do not know why it is, but this subject is a very exciting one. I feel, much of the time, almost afraid to speak, lest I should say something wrong. On the one hand, I agree with Bro. P. that it is intolerable that our ministerial authority should be so trampled under foot; but on the other hand, when I have attended the meetings of our brethren, witnessed the love that prevails among them, the ardor, the zeal, the piety, and the large numbers that attend, I can not but feel the conviction almost like a revelation from God, that the work is of God and that we can not withstand it. And I confess with brother B., that when I have heard these plain passages of Scripture quoted, setting forth the authority of Christ for Christian union, I could scarcely retain my seat. I thought I would reply, but what to say was the difficulty. And now, since this matter has been put before brother P., whom I respect, as a man of decided learning and ability, and he has shown himself incompetent to answer, I begin to suspect that no man can answer. I at first suspected my own ability, but finding brother B. in the same predicament, and now finding that brother P. can make no answer, I am well convinced that no answer can be made. What to do is another thing, but it is no use to try to withstand Scripture. That Christians are required to unite is as certain as that the Bible is true.

Lu. I am well satisfied that the union of the children of God is required by our Savior, and that we can not serve him acceptably, and continue our present unhappy divisions. The truth is, I love men of God wherever I find them, and I desire to be in full fellowship with all the followers of Christ. I love my [illegible] denomination [illegible]

Ep. I fully accord with the sentiments of the brethren just advanced, and am determined, by the grace of God, not only solemnly to pray for the union of Christians, and labor for it, but to look for the basis upon which it rests. It can do no good to maintain division, and I am satisfied that the more of the love of Christ we enjoy, the more interest we shall take in the union of the followers of Christ.

Pres. Gentlemen, you certainly are not looking where you are going. There are a thousand difficulties in the way of our uniting. I am astonished that you have made such concessions in favor of Mr. C. This is just what he has been contending for all the time. He must have converted you all.

Chris. I hope we shall have no appeals to prejudice, to pride nor to worldly ambition. The concessions made, are no more in favor of myself than of you all. Our interest in being right is the same, and our interest in being united is the same. It is as much advantage to each of you as to myself. You all see where we are. We are doing nothing and have been doing nothing, not only since our brethren suspended our support, but for years before, or at least we have been doing nothing that could render us acceptable to the Lord. The cause of this is, not that we have not labored hard, for we have all labored perseveringly. But when one church labored, the others opposed it; when one church pushed forward, others pulled back. The cause is not that we are not talented, zealous, and honorable men, for all admit that we are such. The reason is not that the members are not honorable and devoted. It is not a want of liberality on their part, for they have been liberal. We can accomplish comparatively nothing in our present divided state, though we had the talents of angels, and though our desires were as pure as theirs. We must be engaged in the same cause and co-work with God. We can do this in no way, without standing complete in one brotherhood.

Pres. Who do you think, sir, will come to you and submit to your dictation?

Chris. No one, I presume, and no one is called upon to do such a thing. I am willing to come to the Lord and submit to his dictation, and we had all as well come to him first as last, for we shall have to come to him in the end.

Pres. I know how you speak of coming to the Lord and his dictation, but you always have to explain the Lord's meaning to suit yourself.

Chris. No, sir, you are wrong again; we desire every man to think for himself, and to understand for himself, as he must account for himself to the Lord.

Pres. I, for one, can never adopt your views.

Chris. I have not asked you to adopt my views! We can not unite upon any man's views.

Pres. What shall we unite upon, then?

Chris. We must unite upon Christ, if we unite at all.

Pres. Who will explain Christ to us?

Chris. The apostles. We must receive Christ first, with the whole heart, and when we have received him—not some man's views of him—we must listen to him, and consider who he has authorized to preach him, to explain him, and receive their explanation of him. I ask you not, gentlemen, to give up your consciences, or to sacrifice them, but to exercise them to the utmost extent. I ask you not to receive some dangerous dogma that you can not sincerely accept, but I ask you to receive and act upon great Bible truths that you can not conscientiously deny, when once you look at them. I desire you to have solid truth—pure, heaven-born truth, and nothing but truth. I desire you to believe such truth as professors of religion will be compelled to admit. I wish you not to leave a sure foundation and stand upon an uncertain one, but I desire for us all to unite upon a basis that shall stand unmoved and immovable when all things that can be shaken shall crumble into atoms. We have a Savior that all will have to admit to be the only Savior. We have a book that all will have to admit the best creed—the only infallible creed. We have a [illegible] be regarded as the only [illegible] We have a faith, a [illegible] tism, that will [illegible] most again, I [illegible] sand difficulties [illegible] more substantial [illegible]

☞ Make the right use of [illegible] terday cannot be recalled. [illegible] thou hast no [illegible] thing. [illegible]

The World's Crisis.
BOSTON, NOVEMBER 16, 1859.

For the Crisis.

Work For God.

Those that work for God will [illegible] something done, however small his talent. Tal[illegible] creates an appetite for imitation, and tends to throw into the back ground those working elements of the church that God has always owned and blessed. If we work for God we shall see others encouraged to work in their sphere. The members of a church are the body, or machinery that does the work. Success will follow a working church, and sinners will be converted to God. I have seen in five weeks over twenty resolve to serve God. Glory to God! salvation is free, when we work down [illegible]

Getting up in the estimation of the world is working for ourselves,—that does not pay in God's coin,—takes too much study to do it, and too long to deliver it, and wears out the throat—kills the church, and displeases God, and he wont pay. We must go in more for the old fashion work of God, to please him. Splitting hairs will not quarry rock. Climbing trees will not dig wells. What if Squire Squint-eyes does not like the preaching, and you see two or three converted to God, you make a good change and please God.

Do not try to see how long you can preach. I notice that long sermons do not take as well as you expect. You are deceived. A little shorter and stronger will do double the good. Strive to have some blest in every meeting. Aim at it, work for it, and you will do it. Such the congregation understand, when they do not your long, tedious sermons, as you might expect. The following is good:

"A Tedious Preacher.—Baron Yelverton, when Chief Baron of the Exchequer in Ireland, went to a Lent Circuit, and one of the assise towns happened to be a place of which one of his college cotemporaries held the living; at his own request, the Chief Baron's reverend friend preached the assise sermon. The time being the month of March, the weather was cold, the Judge chilled, and unhappily the sermon long and the preacher tedious. After the discourse was over the preacher descended from the pulpit and approached the Judge, smirking and smiling, looking fully satisfied with his own exertions, and expecting to receive the compliments and congratulations of his quondam chum.

'Well, my Lord,' he asked, 'and how did you like the sermon?'

'O, most wonderfully,' replied Yelverton; 'it was like the peace of God—it passed all understanding; and like his mercy, I thought in would have endured forever.'" Hiram Munger.

For the Crisis.

Missionary Fund.

Bro. Grant:—The Crisis now appears to breathe a healthy missionary spirit. The communications upon this subject are more interesting to me than any others. Without flattery, I doubt whether there is any other paper in the country that has taken hold of this subject with more zeal and determination than this. And this spirit is the main spring to christianity. It is what brought Christ from heaven to this lost world, and what has kept a healthy state of religion in the hearts of christians and churches in all ages. Without this they soon settle down into doctrinal and theoretical subjects, which often eat out the life and soul of vital christianity, and leave a dry form of godliness without the power thereof. But let a church or individual get interested in behalf of others, and he has no great desire to dispute or theorize upon doctrinal points.

And while the great event is occupying the attention of the church, let us not forget the sailors, for an effectual door is now opened for sowing the seeds of truth among them; and can there not be something done immediately in their behalf? Why would it not be judicious to organise a society for this purpose? We know the power of united action, and I think some simple plan of co-operation could be established with great success.

My idea would be to have all who are so disposed to join hearts and hands and employ some one to furnish tracts and also see that they are distributed, for the channels through which these little messages circulate do not often reach the sailor. There are Seamen's Bethels in almost every seaport for their benefit, and we seldom see them in any other church. So in order to get these gems of truth into their hands, they must be visited on shipboard, and in the streets, etc. One sailor may carry these glad news to the other side of the globe. Let each be up and doing. Give, and it shall be given to you. Yours,

D. N. Smith.

Private Labor with Sinners.—One of the most effective instrumentalities employed in the conversion of men is the labor of private christians, to persuade them to come to Christ or to bring them to the house of God, where they will hear the gospel preached. This is always a prominent means in operation in every powerful revival of religion. In this way alone can multitudes be reached.—[illegible]

☞ "Patience is a sublime virtue. The [illegible] private [illegible]

Gehenna.

Gehenna is a Hebrew, or Syriac word, signifying the valley of Hinnom, and is used twelve times in the New Testament, being rendered hell in every place. It is defined as follows in the Polymiorian Greek Lexicon to the New Testament: "Gehenna, properly the valley of Hinnom, south of Jerusalem; once celebrated for the horrid worship of Moloch, and afterwards polluted with every species of filth, as well as the carcasses of animals, and dead bodies of malefactors; to consume which, in order to avert the pestilence which such a mass of corruption would occasion, constant fires were kept burning." Let it be remembered that nothing was ever cast into the valley of Hinnom, or Gehenna fire, for the purpose of preserving it. On the contrary, whatever was thrown there, was put in for entire consumption and destruction. The fire was kept burning there to consume the filthy objects placed therein; yet those fires might have been quenched, and a portion of the burning bodies taken from the fire; but in case the fire should be rendered unquenchable, all within its reach must of necessity be consumed. Hence when the Savior would illustrate the final destruction of the wicked, he referred the Jews to the fire in the valley of Hinnom, where they burned up their filth; and to show them that no part of the wicked would be preserved, he says the fire that will burn them is unquenchable. This is a very strong expression to denote their entire extinction, and corresponds with all the plain Scripture on this subject. Says the prophet Malachi:—"Behold the day cometh that shall burn as an oven; and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be stubble; and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch."—Mal. 4 : 1. "The wicked shall perish, and the enemies of the Lord shall be as the fat of lambs; they shall consume; into smoke shall they consume away."—Ps. 37 : 20. "If a man abide not in me, he is cast forth as a branch, and is withered; and men gather them, and cast them into the fire, and they are burned."—John 15 : 6. "The tares are the children of the wicked one . . . As therefore the tares are gathered and burned in the fire; so shall it be in the end of this world."—Matt. 13 : 38, 40. "He will burn up the chaff with unquenchable fire."—Matt. 3 : 12.

We cannot conceive how any one can believe that human beings will live and be preserved in an "unquenchable fire." For what purpose are they cast into the fire? The Bible answers, to "burn them up." How can they be burned up, and be preserved entire? The fire either affects them, or it does not. If it has no effect upon them, why is it applied to them? If it affects them at all, what is that effect? If it does not consume them at all, it can produce no pain or torment; but if it does, then in process of time they would be entirely consumed away, as David declares. It involves an absurdity to say men are "burned up," when they are not burned at all, but existing in full strength and vigor.

We are told by theologians that the soul is an "immaterial substance," and that "an immaterial, uncompounded spirit cannot be affected by material fire, any more than it can by frost; it could dwell alike in the sun or in the polar regions." "If God himself has made the soul immaterial, he cannot destroy it by bringing material agents to act upon it. God cannot destroy that which is uncompounded, or divide that which is indivisible."—See on the Soul.

Mr. Drew, a very able writer on the immortality of the soul, quoted by Mr. Lee, says:—

"As an immaterial substance has no surface, it is a contradiction to suppose that matter can ever be brought in contact with it. To suppose such a contact possible, is to suppose a surface in an immaterial being, which at the same time is excluded by its natural immateriality. Whatever has an exterior must have an interior, and what has both must be extended. An immaterial substance has no surface, and that which has no surface can never be brought into contact with that which has; it therefore follows that the soul must be inaccessible to all violence from matter."

This being true, it follows that material fire can never affect the soul, and therefore can cause no suffering, from the fact that it cannot "be brought in contact with it." The soul being "immaterial," with neither "exterior" nor "interior," the attempt to burn it would be equivalent to an effort to consume or destroy nothing. If material fire cannot affect the soul, how can immaterial fire, which has neither "exterior" nor "interior," consume another immaterial thing, that has neither outside nor inside? If a material fire can never come in contact with an "immaterial substance," because the latter cannot "be extended," how can two immortal substances meet? and how can one burn and destroy the other? We will leave the reader to solve this problem.

We are glad to turn away from such theological absurdities to the plain teachings of the Scriptures, which declare that man—the accountable being—was made of the dust of the ground," [illegible]

he [illegible] sin he will finally be destroyed," "consumed," "burnt [illegible]." We learn from Peter that God made Sodom and Gomorrha . . . an ensample unto those that after should live ungodly."—2 Pet. 2 : 6. Were those cities destroyed by immaterial fire and brimstone? If so, we may expect the lake of "fire and brimstone," which is to be employed for the destruction of the wicked, will be immaterial; but we learn that the fire in the "ensample" turned the cities of the plain into "ashes." The fire and brimstone that consumed those cities was certainly literal, and as this is the "ensample," it follows that literal fire will finally burn up the wicked. This view harmonizes with the statement of the prophet Malachi, in connection with his declaration that they shall be burnt up root and branch. He says the proud and wicked "shall be ashes under the soles of your feet." As the fire is "unquenchable," there is no possibility for any part of them to escape unconsumed. Hence it follows that, when the Savior would illustrate to the Jews the future punishment of the wicked, and referred to an unquenchable gehenna fire, he used one of the strongest expressions denoting their complete destruction and extinction of being.

If a house should take fire, and one should say, "the fire is unquenchable," none who heard would suppose that the one who made the remark believed the fire would burn eternally, but that the house could not be saved from being burnt up. Jerusalem was destroyed in such a fire. Says the Lord, by the prophet Jeremiah, "If ye will not hearken unto me to hallow the Sabbath day, and not to bear a burden, even entering into the gates of Jerusalem on the Sabbath day; then will I kindle a fire in the gates thereof, and it shall devour the palaces of Jerusalem, and it shall not be quenched."—Jer. 17 : 27. The Jews did not hearken to the Lord, the fire was kindled in the temple by the Romans, A. D. 70, and notwithstanding the most earnest efforts were made to save the magnificent buildings, they were burnt to the ground by an unquenchable fire. Is the fire burning now? Eusebius, the father of church historians, speaks of martyrs who were burnt in an unquenchable fire. Does he intend to teach us that they are to burn eternally?

We see nothing in the expression, "pur to asbeston," the unquenchable fire of Mark 9 : 43–48, to indicate that the wicked will be eternally preserved for unending torture. This "hell fire," or fire of gehenna, is employed solely to burn up whatever is cast within the sphere of its influence.

We will now give all the examples where the word gehenna occurs. The words in italics in the following texts are translated from this word.

"Whosoever shall say thou fool, shall be in danger of hell fire."—Matt. 5 : 22. "If thy right eye offend thee, pluck it out and cast it from thee; for it is profitable for thee that one of thy members should perish, and not that thy whole body should be cast into hell. And if thy right hand offend thee, cut it off, and cast it from thee; for it is profitable for thee that one of thy members should perish, and not that thy whole body should be cast into hell."—Matt. 5 : 29, 30. "Fear him which is able to destroy both soul and body in hell."—Matt. 10 : 28. "If thine eye offend thee, pluck it out, and cast it from thee; it is better for thee to enter into life with one eye, rather than, having two eyes, to be cast into hell fire."—Matt. 18 : 9. "Woe unto you, scribes and pharisees, hypocrites! for ye compass sea and land to make one proselyte, and when he is made, ye make him twofold more the child of hell than yourselves."—Matt. 23 : 15. "Ye serpents, ye generation of vipers! how can ye escape the damnation of hell."—Matt. 23 : 33. "And if thy hand offend thee, cut it off; it is better for thee to enter into life maimed, than, having two hands, to go into hell, into the fire that never shall be quenched. . . And if thy foot offend thee, cut it off; it is better for thee to enter halt into life, than, having two feet, to be cast into hell, into the fire that never shall be quenched. . . . And if thine eye offend thee, pluck it out; it is better for thee to enter into the kingdom of God with one eye, than, having two eyes, to be cast into hell fire."—Mk. 9 : 43, 45, 47. "Fear him which, after he hath killed, hath power to cast into hell."—Lk. 12 : 5. "The tongue is a fire, a world of iniquity; so is the tongue among our members, that it defileth the whole body, and setteth on fire the course of nature; and it is set on fire of hell."—Jas. 3 : 6.

Fort Edward and Sandy Hill.

In company with Bro. S. G. Mathewson, we commenced our meetings at Fort Edward, about the middle of Oct., in the house now occupied by the Presbyterian congregation. This building was erected by the citizens of Fort Edward, for a Union House, and first occupied by the Methodists, who subsequently built another, and offered this for sale, contrary to the instructions in the deed, which specified that it should be used as a free house, for all christian denominations. The present occupants (the Presbyterians) were admitted by forcible means, after the Methodists left, some four years since, during which time the two churches have been in law with each other. Last July, Eld. Parry applied for it for our use, for only one evening, at a time when no one else wanted it, but was shut out by the Presbyterians. This dissatisfied some of the citizens and resulted in opening it for our use on our return in Oct., when not wanted by the Presbyterians. We continued our meetings here some two weeks (a week longer than we first intended,) and came to the conclusion that it was the hardest place in which we have ever labored. Not that the citizens were the most openly wicked, but the mass of professors had lived so, that the people had lost their confidence in christianity. Notwithstanding all this, and the strenuous efforts made by the churches to keep people away, considerable interest was awakened, and from small beginnings, the house was finally well filled. Several church members and unconverted persons became deeply interested, and four were baptized in the noble Hudson, which passes through the village.

Monday evening, Oct 31st, we commenced our meetings at Sandy Hill, in Matthews' Hall, about two miles from Fort Edward, where we have continued them every evening till the present time, Nov. 10th. This is also known as a hard place, on account of the poor lives exhibited by many professors. A minister, residing here last winter, was invited to Poultney, for the purpose of breaking up the glorious work at the Stone church, in that place. Considerable interest was awakened by his labors, but did not prove to be very lasting. He has since left Sandy Hill, convicted of great imprudences with the other sex. This, and many other things have caused the people to harden their hearts, and lose their confidence in the religion of the day. In addition to these things, many professors, in company with their ministers, are doing all they can to keep people away from the hall. Yet, notwithstanding all these discouragements, and the great political excitement consequent upon the N. Y. state election, just passed, we have our place of worship well filled, and deep interest is felt by many church members and non-professors. Several have requested prayers, and three were baptized last Lord's day. The work is onward. A church has been formed consisting of fourteen members, and several others are about to join. Proper officers have been appointed, and our better prospects are brightening.

There are some noble hearts in this place, associated with us; who have fully counted the cost, and are willing to buy the truth at any price. They are unmoved by the finger of scorn, and the cry of "infidel." We have rarely seen a better nucleus for the establishment of a true christian church.

Bro. S. G. Mathewson returned home to Ct., yesterday, to arrange his business so as to come back within a week or two, and spend the winter in laboring here and in the surrounding country. His brother, Dr. D. Mathewson, resides in this place, and has become deeply interested in the truths of the Bible. He will probably spend a part of the time during the coming winter, in laboring with his brother in the adjoining towns. Two other promising young men in this vicinity purpose to enter the gospel ministry soon. Praise the Lord for what he is doing.

We have preached two Lord's day evenings in the Baptist meeting-house, at Glens Falls, a flourishing village about three miles from Sandy Hill. We had very interesting and attentive audiences, and were assisted in our exercises by Bro. Eastwood, the preacher in charge. He manifested a christian spirit.

During our stay at Sandy Hill, we have been kindly entertained in Bro. J. Parry's happy family, which has suffered cheerfully for the truth's sake, and seem willing to lose all things if they can only win Christ. Bro. Parry was a pastor in the Dutch Reformed church, but has received the "cold shoulder" from his brethren in the ministry, who have cast him out of their number. He is now rejoicing in the truth, thankful for the persecution which has brought him nearer than ever to the dear Savior. He has learned to glory in the cross of Christ. He and two of his daughters were baptized a few days since, and were blessed with sweet peace from our approving Lord. They are resolved to follow Christ through evil as well as good report.

We shall long remember the kindness received at this christian home.

The Six Thousand Years.

It has been the faith of the church in all ages, that the earth would stand in its present state six thousand years, when the great Sabbath of rest would commence, being introduced by the coming of the Lord and the resurrection of the righteous dead.

It was understood by the Jews and primitive christians, that the six days of creation were each typical of a thousand years, making six thousand in all, which are assigned for the time of labor upon the earth in its present state, at the end of which the curse is to be removed, the sanctuary cleansed, the kingdom of God established and given to the saints of the Most High.

Says Rabbi Ketina, "The world endures six thousand years."

Rabbi Manasse says:—"As for my opinion, I think that after six thousand years, the world shall be destroyed; . . . . that there will be no more generation or corruption, and all things by the resurrection shall be renovated, and return to a better condition. . . . . This, out of doubt, is the opinion of the most learned Aben Ezra, who looked for it in the new earth of Isa. 67 : 17."

Rabbi Moses Nachmanides says:—"Man shall be restored in that time, viz., in the days of the Messiah, to that state in which he was before the first man sinned."

Says Rabbi Becai: "In that time the whole world shall be changed for the better and shall return into its perfect and pure state, as it was in the time of the first man, before he had sinned."

Rabbi Simai says:—"The early Jewish church . . . commonly received the opinion that the world was to last in its present state during six thousand years; and that in the seventh millenary it was to be renewed, and all the promises of God made to the fathers, accomplished at that time."

It appears to be the universal faith of the Jewish church, that the earth will remain in its present state six thousand years from creation, and then be renovated and restored to its primal state of beauty for the abode of the righteous. Let us look at the testimony of the early christian writers. Barnabas, a fellow laborer with Paul, who is denominated in the Scriptures "a good man, and full of the Holy Ghost and of faith," when speaking of the creation and the Sabbath says:—"In the beginning of the creation he makes mention of the Sabbath: 'And God made in six days the works of his hands, and he finished them on the seventh day and sanctified it.' Consider, my children, what that signifies.—'He finished them in six days.' The meaning is this: that in six thousand years the Lord will bring all things to end. For with him one day is a thousand years, as himself testifieth, saying: 'Behold this day shall be as a thousand years;' therefore, children, in six days shall all things be accomplished. And what is that he saith, 'He rested on the seventh day?' He meaneth that when his Son shall come, and abolish the wicked one, and judge the ungodly, and change the sun, moon and stars, then he shall gloriously rest on the seventh day."—Epistle of Barnabas, Sec. 14, 15.

Papias, Bishop of Hieropolis, one of St. John's auditors, and a martyr, taught the same doctrine, and also that Christ is coming to reign a thousand years with his saints on earth, in glory, which will be the antitypical Sabbath.

Irenæus, bishop of Lyons, who flourished in the second century, and was a disciple of Polycarp, says:—"In as many days as this world was made, in so many thousand years it is perfected; for if the day of the Lord be as it were a thousand years, and in six days those things that are made were finished, it is manifest that the perfecting of those things in the six thousandth year, when anti-christ . . . shall have wasted all things in the world, etc., then shall the Lord come from heaven in the clouds, with the glory of his Father." In speaking of the promise made to the fathers, he says:—"Inasmuch as the blessing promised to Jacob from his father Isaac, was not made good to him in this life, therefore," he says, "without doubt, those words had a farther aim and prospect upon the times of the kingdom, when the just, rising from the dead, shall reign, and when nature, renewed and set at liberty, shall yield plenty and abundance of all things, being blessed with the dew of heaven and a great fertility of the earth, according as has been related by those ecclesiastics or clergy who saw St. John, the disciple of Christ, and heard of him what our Lord taught concerning those times."

This appears to be good authority. Irenæus received it from the elders of the churches in Asia, who heard it from John the Revelator, who learned it from Christ.

Justin Martyr, a cotemporary with Irenæus, confirms this doctrine, showing it to be the belief of the early christians.

Cyprian, Bishop of Carthage, who flourished in the third century, and whose "writings are held in great esteem among all the godly," speaks of the Sabbath of rest which is to follow the end of the six thousand years. He also says:—"In the creation of the world seven days were spent, and in those seven days, seven thousand years were figuratively included."

Bishop Latimer observes:—"The world was ordained of God to endure, as Scripture and all learned men agree, six thousand years."

Lactantius, who lived in the fourth century, says:—"Because the works of God were finished in six days, it is necessary that the world should remain in this state six ages—i. e., six thousand years." Again, he observes, "Let philosophers know, who number thousands of years, ages since the beginning of the world, that the six thousandth year is not yet concluded or ended. But that number being fulfilled of necessity, there must be an end, and the state of human things must be transformed into that which is better."

The learned Joseph Mede says:—"The Jewish Doctors" and "many in every age of the christian church" have adopted the belief "that this world will attain to its limit at the end of six thousand years."

Thomas Burnet says in his "Theory of the Earth," published in London, A. D., 1697, that "it was the received opinion of the primitive church from the days of the apostles to the council of Nice, that this earth would continue six thousand years, when the resurrection of the just and conflagration of the earth, would usher in the millennium and reign of Christ on earth."

We are indebted for the foregoing extracts, to a work by E. R. Pinney, entitled "The Purpose of God."

A question of interest here arises in the mind, how old are we in this dispensation [illegible] of the six thousand years? All [illegible] must terminate [illegible]. According to Archbishop Usher's chronology, the earth lacks about one hundred and thirty-seven years of being six thousand years old, but a mistake is shown in his reckoning for the time of the Judges. He allows but about two hundred and ninety-five years, while Paul says:—"And after that, he gave unto them Judges about the space of four hundred and fifty years, until Samuel the prophet."—Acts 13 : 20. Then it follows that, if Usher's chronology is correct elsewhere, we are as much nearer the end of the six thousand years, as the difference between Paul and Usher. We learn that a distinguished chronologer in Europe claims that he can demonstrate that the six thousand years terminate in less than eight years. Other chronologers have come to the same conclusion. All the signs of the times seem to harmonize with such a conclusion. We see no room for doubt that the end is near, very near. Dear reader, are you ready to welcome the Savior back to this world? If not, be entreated to prepare at once. No time now for delay.

A Challenge.

We clip the following from the editorial columns of the Christian Repository, a Universalist paper, edited by Eli Ballou, and published at Montpelier, Vt.:—

"We learn that there is a certain 'Elder Grant' who preaches that all will be raised from the dead, but that a part are simply raised up to life for the purpose of beirg tertured or burned up into a state of entire destruction and eternal unconsciousness! We may safely challenge him to prove the truth of any such idea by the language of the Bible. We do not deny that the Bible says much of destruction, etc., but is it subsequent to the resurrection of the soul to immortality? It makes no difference whether man has within him now an immortal soul or not. The question is, are not all to be raised from the dead to a future existence? Are not all who die in Adam to be made alive in Christ? Now we deny that the Bible furnishes the least evidence of the destruction or annihilation of any after they are made alive in Christ."

We would say to our friend Ballou, we accept his challenge, and will endeavor to sustain our position by a Bible argument; providing we can agree upon conditions, such as time, place and the form of question, etc.

Election Riots in Baltimore.

At the late state election in Maryland, there was much excitement, especially in the city of Baltimore, where the rowdies took possession of the polls and prevented many respectable citizens from voting, while others who favored the rowdies were allowed to vote several times. During the day some twenty or thirty were either killed or wounded. Truly, "we have fallen upon strange times." Says the New York Herald:—

"The local elements of ruffianism not being deemed strong enough for the work, armed gangs of rowdies from Washington were brought in to their assistance. The consternation and terror into which the whole city was thrown by these proceedings may readily be imagined. The houses of business were closed, and the streets presented all the aspects of a beleaguered town. Everywhere that the reformers showed themselves individually, they were shot at or pursued with drawn swords."

We may well inquire to what are we coming? We know one thing, the Bible declares that "evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse." Facts are abundant to sustain this Scripture.

Harper's Ferry.

The Harper's Ferry insurrection bids fair to result in a very serious conclusion. Says one of our leading journals of the day:—

"The Harper's Ferry affair is, therefore, but the sharp skirmish before the general battle. It would indeed be a very unimportant and contemptible affair if it stood isolated and alone. But it does not so stand. It is the beginning of the end; the first act of war; the first of a series of hostilities, the end of which may be the dissolution of the Union and the division of the country into two or three fragments."

"From all appearances there is only one thing that can prevent this dire catastrophe, which hangs over the Union like two dark thunder-clouds, which are approaching each other and at any moment may explode. Nothing can prevent it but the interposition of the conservative element between the antagonistic forces, keeping them both in check by firmness and discretion, and rallying around itself the public virtue and the patriotism of the country."

"But blood is already shed; civil war is begun, and the Southern journals as well as the Northern, are fanning the flames. Wendell Phillips and the other panegyrists of Brown insist that Harper's Ferry is the Lexington of the revolution of 1859, and will bear to it the same relation in the page of the historian as the event at the little town in Massachusetts bore to the seven years' war of Independence."

"Once the sword is drawn, who can tell where or when it will be sheathed? Never will it be returned to the scabbard till the whole of this fair soil is an aceldama—one field of blood."

"The Next Congress will be the most important body that has assembled in the United States for the past fifty years. Its members will be called upon to discuss the present condition of our national affairs, which have lately assumed a very grave, not to say alarming and dangerous phase. The debates of the next Congress may go far to demonstrate whether or not our governmental experiment is a failure, and they will be watched with the [illegible] the whole civilized world."

"Southerners in Virginia are organizing for the purpose of preparing frontier defences against the forays of the Northern invaders, and establishing a system of passports for all travelers crossing Mason and Dixon's line. The times are out of joint, and some terrible calamity is visibly hanging over the destiny of the United States."

"The Crisis in Italy."

This is the heading of the latest news from Italy. All hopes of peace appear to be given up. The battlefield must decide whether the Pope shall longer continue a temporal sovereign. We think the handwriting on the wall will soon declare, "Thou art weighed in the balances, and art found wanting." The hour for rewarding the harlot for her filthy corruption seems rapidly approaching. Says the London Observer, Oct., 15th, "Italian peace is now manifestly impossible without Italian freedom." The London Post says:—"It is almost certain that Romagna will be attacked by the Papal troops. It is also certain that at the first menace of armed intervention in the Duchies, the troops of Garibaldi will sweep before them every vestige of Papal rule." Another writer says:—"Italy remains like an open volcano, ready to pour out the lava of revolution over Europe."

For the Crisis.

The Two-Horned Beast.

BY F. H. BERICK.

It is a well settled principle of prophecy, that a beast symbolizes a kingdom or combination of wicked rulers. This we see in the case of Babylon, Persia, Greece, Rome, and other nations or kingdoms of antiquity, as set forth in prophecy. One beast may symbolize a number of governments, but never less than one. A wild beast, in the Apocalypse, never symbolizes a single man, but a combination of wicked men in the exercise of Civil, Political and Judicial authority. And as no such combination exists without territory, in which and over which to exercise its powers, it becomes necessary, in defining the prophecy, to point to some particular locality or territory over which its authority is exercised. Hence, whatever we interpret this power to be, we may rest assured that it is a body politic; a government or kingdom, as much so as Babylon, Grecia, or any kingdom that has or does exist.

Again. The power of this beast is set forth in the declaration,—"he exerciseth all the power of the first beast." Now the term "power" of the "first beast" refers undoubtedly to two things. 1. To the authority received from or through the dragon, which evidently involves certain rights, the use of which constitute him or it an independent government, subsisting by its own inherent qualities, maintaining its own powers, and exercising its own absolute dominion. And 2d, to the exercise of spiritual or ecclesiastical functions, by which he makes war with the saints, causing all dissentients who refuse to worship him to be persecuted. So extensive is his power, that it is said to extend over all "kindreds, tongues and nations." Now when it is said of this two-horned beast that he exerciseth ALL the power of the first beast before him, we are to understand him as referring to a dominion like the first in "strength" and "extent." It is the political and ecclesiastical elements united.

The time when he, the two-horned beast, exerciseth this power, is, evidently, after the deadly wound of the first beast is healed. For as the first beast had power given to him to continue forty-two months, so he must have exercised that power during that period, which covers the reign of his successive heads, which power he lost when the seventh head fell. Now in the fall of the seventh head, this two-horned monster is said to exercise ALL the power of the first beast, which he could not have done had not the first beast lost his power. When the first beast lost his power, the "kindreds, tongues and nations" no longer did him homage; hence, when the eighth head lived, one of the first acts of the two-horned beast is to command the earth to render the same worship to this revived head that was rendered to the beast, his predecessor, during the forty-two months.

One of the acts of this two-horned beast is, he makes an image to the beast that had the wound and did live. Now as an image is not of the same nature as that which it represents, so this image must be distinct from the beast that he represents.

This image was something that could

1. Speak, talk, issue commands.
2. It was, like its contemporary, an object of worship.
3. Had life—political and civil life.
4. Had power to put to death all who refused to do it homage. And
5th. It exercised that power.

Such was the creature or offspring of this two-horned monster; hence, during the ascendancy of this beast, a power or government corresponding to this image must exist, and be the creature of this two-horned dragon. As to this particular characteristic of this two-horned beast we may remark [illegible] worship the beast with the wounded head, that is, the head after he comes out of the bottomless pit;

4. It authorizes or is instrumental in making an image.

5. He gives civil and political existence to the image or "image-beast."

6. He causes all classes to receive a mark in the hand or forehead. And

7. He suffers none to buy or sell save those who had this mark.

Now if spiritualism is the two-horned beast, we are led to inquire:

1. When did spiritualism become a kingdom? Where was it organized? Over what territory does it exercise control? The exercise of moral power does not fulfill the prophecy.

2. We have seen that a beast in the Apocalypse symbolizes a political combination; are spiritualists thus combined? If so, when, and where? A mere community of socialists does not make a kingdom.

3. The two-horned beast causes the earth to worship the beast, or the revived head. Does spiritualism cause the inhabitants of earth or any part of it to worship France or Napoleon III.? If so, where is the evidence of it?

4. The two-horned beast makes, or constitutes, another government or kingdom similar to, but distinct from, the beast with the wounded head. Has spiritualism done anything of this kind? If so, when, and where?

5. When did it give life or political existence to such a government?

6. When did spiritualism cause all classes to receive a mark in the hand or forehead?

7. Has everybody that buys or sells received such a mark? As certain as spiritualism is the beast, so certain it is that all these items may or must be recognized. It may, however, be objected by those holding the view that the two-horned beast symbolizes spiritualism, that the time has not yet come when this deception has assumed the dimensions indicated in the prophecy by the two-horned monster, but that it is now in its embryotic state, that the mystery of iniquity has merely begun to work, that the seed is in process of germination and will ere long be developed.

Now this may all be so, but if it be true that the power is developing but not developed, then spiritualism is not as yet, the two-horned beast; and if not, what are we to do with the prophecy in the 16th chap. in relation to the issuing out of the mouth of the two-horned beast or false prophet those demon-spirits, which are said to go forth to the kings of the earth. If spiritualism is the beast, then it is a real government, if it is not, but is going to be sometime in the future, then it is morally certain that the time has not arrived when the demon-spirit goes forth, for if that that gives birth to the demon is not in existence, how can it be said that the prophecy is being fulfilled—"There went forth a spirit out of the mouth of the false prophet." The spirit is one thing and the source from which it proceeds is another. It were contrary to the rules of interpretation to say that the dragon and the beast are real powers or governments and then assert that the false prophet is an influence or a religion. We have seen, already, that the false prophet, or the two-horned monster that stood before the beast that had a wound and did live, chap. 13, must have been a political power, as much so as his predecessor; and the identity of the two-horned beast and false prophet is too well settled to be disputed by any person well acquainted with the prophecy.

Now with what has been suggested, I see no way to escape the conclusion that, if Spiritualism is, or is to be, the two-horned beast, then to fulfill the prophecy it must be,

1. A government combining the elements of political, civil, and judicial authority.

2. Its power must be as great as that of the ten-horned beast.

3. It must, itself, be an object of worship.

4. It must cause the inhabitants of earth to worship the revived beast, which is said to be Napoleon III.—rather partial, I think.

5. It must be instrumental in the creation of another power, called the "image to the beast."

6. It must fix some kind of a mark in the hand or forehead of all earth's inhabitants, except the few who love God or refuse to worship it.

It must prohibit buying and selling to all who do not receive the mark.

Now if Spiritualism answers this description, then it is the beast, and it is beastly enough; but if it does not yet occupy the position of the beast, then,

1. The demon-spirit, chap. 16, that goes out of the mouth of the false prophet, has not gone forth.

2. The kings of the earth are not being deceived.

3. The nations are not in course of preparation for the great battle; and

4. The day of God is not imminent.

Or, if it be near at hand, then,

1. The Euphrates is dried up!

2. The demon-spirits are doing their work!

3. The nations are being deceived!

4. The kings are about gathering [illegible] battle!

5. The [illegible] of Great Babylon is near at hand!

6. The great day of God is imminent! and

7. If this be so, Spiritualism is not, never has been, and never can be the two-horned beast!!

For the Crisis.

Minutes of the N. Ind. and S. Mich. Conference.

[COM. BY ELD. P. B. MORGAN.]

Conference met pursuant to previous appointment Oct. 7th. Dr. R. Willard was appointed to the Chair; L. P. Fox, Clerk. Conference then listened to reports from churches and ministers present. Business Committee: Brn. Seymour, Morgan, Mansfield and Sober.

Oct. 8th. Business committee reported "A Plan of Arrangements" for the organization of Churches and Conferences, which, after a lengthy discussion, was, with several amendments, adopted. Resolutions then passed as follows:—

Resolved, This Conference be known as the N. Ind. and S. Mich. Conference.

Resolved, That while we choose to cooperate according to the "Plan of Arrangements" adopted by this Conference, we will at the same time fraternize with all Churches who take the Bible as their rule of faith and practice.

Resolved, Brn. Seymour, Mansfield and Morgan be appointed a committee to determine upon the place and time of a camp-meeting, to be held the coming summer if time last, in such place as shall best accommodate the Churches of this Conference.

Resolved, We feel it duty as a Conference to exhort our brethren and churches everywhere to continue steadfast in the faith of the Gospel and in the hope of the soon coming of the Lord.

Resolved, The corresponding Secretary be hereby instructed to correspond with the ministering brethren throughout the Western States, with reference to the propriety of having a Conference embracing all the preachers and representatives of Churches who should choose to send of the entire Western States and Canada West, who may wish to meet to take into consideration the general interests of our cause—such as a general plan for the upbuilding of churches, missions, publishing interests, etc. The time and place for such a Conference was suggested to be Tuesday, Jan. 3d, Buchanan, Mich., i. e., if held at all.

Resolved, The following persons be requested to be present and discuss topics as follows, at the next meeting of this Annual Conference:—Moral evil, by P. B. Morgan; the atonement, by Eld. A. N. Seymour; divine institutes, by Eld. S. A. Chaplin; prophecies relating to the present, by O. R. L. Crozier; the destiny of the earth, by D. R. Mansfield; the nature and destiny of man, by Dr. N. Field; revivals, by N. Hornaday; modern Spiritualism, by M. S. Mansfield.

Resolved, Eld. S. G. Mathewson, of Conn., be requested to act as Evangelist and Agent for this Conference the ensuing winter.

According to the "Plan of Arrangements" adopted, the following appointments were made, and the Conference divided into quarterly Conference districts, as follows:—

La Porte District: Union Mills, Bigelow's Mills, Stilwell, and Madeiraville.

Buchanan Quarterly District: Embracing the Churches in Buchanan, Dayton, Niles, Decature, and South Bend.

Hillsdale District: Cambia, Alagansa, Gillead, Burlington, Tekonsha, Jackson Prairie.

Goshen District: Pine Creek, Middlebury, Goshen, Liberty Mills, Bone Prairie, Warsaw, Plymouth.

It was suggested the first Conference of the several quarterly districts be held as follows: Goshen District, Dec. 1st, Thursday; Hillsdale District, Reading, Thursday, Dec. 15th; Buchanan District, Thursday, Jan. 5th; La Porte District, Kingsbury, Thursday, Jan. 12th.

Appointments were then made for the year as follows:—Eld. D. R. Mansfield, President; Dr. R. Willard, Vice President; L. P. Fox, Secretary; P. B. Morgan, Cor. Secretary; A. Freeman, Jr., Treasurer.

Resolved, The minutes of this Conference, with our "Plan of Arrangements," be published in the World's Crisis.

Adjourned to meet at such time and place as shall be appointed by the Conference Committee.

PLAN OF ARRANGEMENTS.

SECTION I.

Of the Organization of Churches.

1. It is recommended the following or a similar Covenant be entered into by a Church, a record of which, with all the proceedings of the Church at its meetings of business, be kept by a Deacon or Clerk appointed to this end.

2. Form of Covenant. In the name of our Lord Jesus Christ we whose names are hereunto affixed, do promise, relying upon Almighty God our Heavenly Father for grace, that whereas we severally desire to form a part of a local and visible Church of Christ in ———, we will receive the Scriptures of the Old and New Testament as our rule of faith, striving in all things to live conformably thereto.

SECTION II.

Of Quarterly Conferences.

1. All Quarterly Conferences should be composed of delegates, and preachers of any two or more Churches of a given region who may wish to unite in forming a Quarterly Conference District. Each Church being authorized to send one delegate for every ten members, or a fraction of one-third less.

2. Each preacher shall make a report of his labors, and the prospect of the work where he labors.

3. Each Church shall make a fair report of its moral and financial condition, prospects, and wants.

4. It shall be the duty of the Evangelist appointed by the Annual Conference to attend and preside at each Quarterly Conference of the district to which he is appointed; confer with the Conference concerning any destitute localities where missionary labor can be profitably bestowed; and also as agent for the Annual Conference and Mission Fund, shall receive such contributions and subscriptions, or pledges, as may be offered to this end.

5. The Quarterly Conference shall also take into consideration the subject of protracted or camp-meetings, Sabbath schools, and any other measures by which the cause of God may be advanced in the locality of its own district.

6. The minutes of the Quarterly Conference should be kept by some one appointed for that purpose;—a digest of which, containing the amount paid for the Conference and Mission Fund, should be sent to the Secretary of the Annual Conference.

7. The Quarterly Conference shall also appoint at its last session before the Annual Conference, delegates to attend the coming Annual Conference. Being one delegate for each Church.* And each Church that may not have had opportunity to associate itself with a Quarterly Conference, may likewise send one delegate to the Annual Conference.

SECTION III.

Of Annual Conferences.

1. The Annual Conference shall be composed of the preachers and delegates of the Quarterly Conference districts within the bounds of the Annual Conference. And it shall require two-thirds of all the members in attendance to form a quorum. And, when desired by five members, may be divided into two parts, composed of Preachers or Elders of one part, and laymen of the other; a majority of each being required for official action on a given question.

2. The Annual Conference shall appoint a President, Vice President, Secretary, Corresponding Secretary, and Treasurer, who shall likewise constitute a standing Conference Committee ex-officio, which Committee shall transact any business the Conference may appoint them during the ensuing year—as also any business properly belonging to the Conference and not otherwise cared for.

3. The Annual Conference shall, until the organization of a General Conference, have power to define its own boundaries.

4. The Annual Conference shall hear reports of the Conference Evangelist's labors, Home Missions, Conference Fund Agents, and Tract and Publication Agents.

5. It shall also make inquiries concerning the number, moral character, and standing of the preachers in its connection, and of the progress of the cause represented by the delegates of the several Quarterly Conferences, including the number of Churches, church members, with the Elders and Sabbath Schools thereof.

6. The Annual Conference shall appoint an efficient and circumspect preacher as Evangelist, to labor in such district or districts as shall be appointed him,—to attend protracted meetings, or organize Churches, ordain Elders, and attend the several Quarterly Conferences of the district to which he may be appointed. He shall also superintend all missions, or missionary enterprises appertaining to his district, and as agent for the "Conference and Mission Fund," shall receive the contributions and pledges of the several Churches in his district given to this end,—of all of which, he shall make a faithful report at the ensuing Annual Conference.

In this work, such Evangelist may have appointed him an assistant, when in the minds of the Conference such help is required, or may himself be authorized to call such help to his aid when and as he may deem wise.

7. The Conference shall also appoint or employ such Home Missionaries, Colporteurs, and Tract and Publication agents as it may deem necessary,—who shall also be required to receive collections and distribute publications, as the Conference may appoint them, faithfully reporting the same to the ensuing Annual Conference.

9. The Annual Conference shall establish a fund known as the "Conference and Mission Fund," also a fund known as the "Tract and Publication Fund," which funds shall be sustained by the gratuitous offerings of individuals and churches. The object of the former shall be to sustain Missionaries and Evangelists, and defray the incidental expenses of the Conference. The object of the latter shall be to provide tracts and publications for gratuitous distribution among indigent persons, and in destitute regions.

9. The Annual Conference shall specify the region and boundaries of each Quarterly Conference district, and also the salaries of those whose services it may engage, and see that such persons are suitably compensated for such labor at each succeeding quarter.

10. The Conference Committee (or, after deliberate consideration, four-fifths thereof) shall have power to silence, or suspend any Evangelist, Missionary, Agent, or Colporteur, who may be supposed to have forfeited their moral character, or otherwise rendered themselves incapable of performing the work appointed them by the Conference; official and written notice of which shall be communicated to the several parties concerned. The Committee shall also have authority to appoint others in the stead of such as may be silenced, or such as, by reason of sickness, death, or any other means, cease to answer the ends for which they were appointed by the Conference.

11. The President of the Annual Conference shall attend personally upon the examination of all candidates for the ministry presented to the Conference, and preside in the ordination of such as exhibit the requisite talent, learning, and grace; sign all certificates of ordination; all letters of commendation, and inspect all conference documents designed for publication, attaching his own name with the seal of the Conference thereto; and also see to the carrying out the general rules of the Conference during his official year.

The other officers of the Conference shall perform such duties as usually devolve upon persons filling the offices their several appellatives indicate.

12. Any change in the arrangements as herein contained, shall be effected only by vote of three-fourths of all the members composing the Annual Conference, after such change has been under consideration for the term of one year; except it be by a general Conference, after the organization of which, this provision shall be null and void.

SECTION IV.

Of the General Conference.

1. A General Conference may be formed so soon as churches of two or more States may find it becoming or necessary to form two or more Annual Conferences, providing, such shall be desired by the Annual Conferences.

2. It shall be composed of delegates from the several Annual Conferences, being one to every one hundred members of churches—or a fraction of two thirds—represented in such Annual Conferences.

3. The General Conference shall be organized in the same manner of the Annual Conferences,—and shall be appointed to meet biennially.

4. The object of the General Conference shall be to, (1.) regulate the bounds of the Annual Conferences; (2.) superintend all Missionary interests that do not properly belong to the Annual or Quarterly Conferences; (3.) have the charge of any publishing interests that may belong to the Conference; and, (4.) also have authority to revise or amend the arrangements herewith contained, providing:—

1. The General Conference shall in no case legislate in matters of faith and doctrine.

2. And in no case shall it so change the arrangements herewith contained as to make void the provision for the organization of our churches by covenant,—or that part that provides for the existence of our Quarterly and Annual Conferences.

* Note. It should be remembered that preachers are members of the Annual Conference, as given Vide Sec. III, 1.

For the Crisis.

Richmond Quarterly Conference.

This was a conference that will not be soon forgotten. According to appointment the brethren came in from abroad, Oct. 27th, and during the remainder of the week. They came with a mind to work. The believers in the place were also in good working order, and the Lord gave us an abundant blessing. We have had many excellent conferences in Richmond. Indeed, we never failed to have a good one, but in some respects this seemed the very best we have had. A good work of grace has been going on here for three months past. God has converted several strong young men and women, quite a number of others have been reclaimed from a backslidden state. These were heartily engaged in the work of the Lord, which added much to the meeting. Every meeting seemed to be in advance of the former; so our hearts were constantly enlarged and filled with peace and joy in the Lord. A full faith, and deep interest was manifested for the salvation of sinners. The reports from several places and churches abroad were cheering, giving evidence of persevering faith, and hope, and an increase of believers.

Elders Haggett and Hanscomb were, by some cause, prevented from being with us. Ministers present, were, H. B. Sevey, L. L. Howard, J. Partridge, R. R. York, Dr. N. Smith, I. C. Wellcome, L. Rhodes. We were much gratified to see our beloved Brother Smith among us once more, although in very feeble health. His heart is still full of interest in the great and stirring truths which move us on in our work, yet unable to preach them.

In our business department, Eld. H. B. Sevey was called to the chair. Our plan adopted for evangelizing was presented by the secretary, and aid solicited to carry on the work. Something was contributed by different persons. Conference then adjourned, to meet on the first Thursday in January 1860, at the call of the chairman and secretary, at some place then decided upon.

On Sunday the house was densely crowded with solemn and attentive hearers, who listened to some of the great gospel truths for these last days, preached by Elders Howard and Sevey, and witnessed by others. In the evening several arose for the prayers of God's people. We expect good fruits as the results of this conference. Let us continue to work on until Jesus comes to give us an eternal home and rest.

In behalf of the Conference,

I. C. WELLCOME, Sec.

Richmond, Me., Nov. 1st, '59.

Obituary Notices.

Died, at Hillsborough, Nova Scotia, Oct. 12th, 1859, in the 77th year of her age, my dear mother, MARTHA RICE, the wife of Thomas Rice, Sen., who yet lives to mourn his loss.

My mother raised twelve children, four sons and eight daughters, who are all living, and married, and were present to follow their mother to the grave, her last resting place. Her health was good during the year past, for a person of her age. She was converted when quite young, joined the Baptist church in the year 1843, and ever since has looked with interest for that event. On Sunday eve before her death, we had a prayer and exhortation meeting at her house. She was very happy, and praised the Lord in the presence of all the people. She leaves a large connection to mourn, but not without hope. We therefore are enabled to sing—

Dear mother, we shall see again,
O blessed be the Lord,
For Jesus [illegible]
We read it is his word.

And he shall break the bars of death,
[illegible]
And call the sleepers from beneath
The earth's cold, heavy clod.

The Bridegroom and the Life
Can melt the dear restore,
Bring back the prisoners from the grave,
And they shall die no more.

Then in the Kingdom we shall meet,
On Zion's mountain stand,
And there the friends that once we loved,
And take them by the hand;

And walk the golden streets of bliss
On that immortal shore,
Where sorrow, suffering, pain and death
Are felt and feared no more.

The funeral sermon was preached by Eld. Obed Parker, Baptist minister, from Job 14: 14, who spoke of the Resurrection with interest.

ISRAEL RICE.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Per City of Baltimore from Liverpool the 27th ult.

A large number of wrecks are reported on the English coast, with much loss of life, but no American vessels are mentioned.

Garibaldi issued a stirring proclamation to the Neapolitans. Fighting in Naples is considered imminent.

Paris, Wednesday. The Minister of War has placed material of war at the disposal of the Spanish government, and has declared that the Emperor will support the military operations of Spain in the war against Morocco, in a similar way to those made to Piedmont during the late war.

It is asserted that the Emperor will pay a visit to the King of the Belgians.

Constantinople advices are to the 19th. Four Chiefs of the late conspiracy have been condemned to death. These condemnations had created ferment among the populace, and direct threats of revenge had mysteriously reached the Palace of the Sultan.

The Montenegrins have begun to commit great atrocities against the Turks.

A conspiracy had been discovered at Aleppo, and arrests made there.

Brescia—Tuesday. The Austrians have evacuated five Cantons of the District Gragnano, on the Lago di Marda. The enthusiasm of the inhabitants is great.

Madrid, 24th. Marching orders have been given to the troops, which are to join the expeditionary army against Morocco. Marshal O'Donnell will start at the end of the week. General enthusiasm prevails among the people.

The Constitutionel says that France will not stand the action of England in the Suez Canal affair.

Madrid, Oct. 25. The rumors which have been current concerning a peaceful settlement with Morrocco are without foundation. Two Generals and other officers left this evening.

The Herald correspondent says the tone of the semi-official journals of Paris is daily becoming more acrimonious towards England.

A reactionary plot, got up by Red Republicans and Mazzinians, in league with the Grand Ducal and priestly authorities, has been discovered. The conspirators belong to the upper classes, and possess considerable funds.

In a letter from Napoleon to the King of Sardinia, France demands that the Duchess of Parma be called to Modena; that Parma shall be united to Piedmont; Tuscany be augmented in territory and restored to the Grand Duke; and that the projected confederation and moderate reforms be carried out.

France disclaims the idea of aiding Spain in her expedition against Morocco.

The Zurich Conference had again assembled, Count Karoletz representing Austria. All the treaties, it was expected, would be signed by the Plenipotentiaries in a few days.

It is asserted that the European Congress will take place, with the adhesion of England.

It was expected that Spain would commence offensive operations against Morocco about the 8th inst.

Garibaldi had arrived at Turin, for the purpose of holding an interview with the King of Sardinia. He was enthusiastically received along the route by the people.

[Per Hungarian.]

FRANCE

The Emperor demands that the Duchess of Parma shall be called to Modena; Parma is to be united to Piedmont; Tuscany, augmented perhaps by a portion of territory, to be restored to the Grand Duke Ferdinand; and a system of moderate liberty shall be adopted in all the States of Italy. The Emperor traces the plan of an Italian Confederation, with the Pope as Honorary President, as this increase of his moral influence will enable him to make concessions in conformity with the legitimate wishes of the populations.

The Archbishop of Paris had issued a pastoral note ordering prayers to be put up for the Pope.

THE ZURICH CONFERENCE.

A Zurich telegram of the 26th says: To-day a present took place. It is stated that the three treaties will be signed next week. Count Karolyi, the new Austrian representative, arrived here last evening.

The Florence correspondent of the London Times says:

"I feel convinced that, if ever the restoration of the Central Italian Princes and the recovery of the Legations by the Papal Government are definitely resolved upon, the day in which such an arrangement is carried into effect, no matter by what means, will change these gentle, orderly and civilized communities into as many dens of wild beasts."

EUROPEAN AFFAIRS.—The following is an extract from the letter of an American gentleman, some time a resident in Paris:

"As for Napoleon III., I am by no means disposed, as you intimate, to consider him very selfish, or even any more tyrannical in his government than the character of the French people require. Heretofore, I have occasionally doubted his expressed motives, but his course for the last few months has gone far to make me believe that he wishes and tries to do the best he can; and if he has not accomplished all that was expected of him, it has been on the account of events that he could not control. At any rate, he has humiliated, deeply humiliated, that despicable government of a past age, Austria, and at the present moment Francis Joseph dare no more "cross" the French Emperor, than he dare invade Russia. The late war has sunk Austria almost to a second-rate power, and has placed France at the very head of Continental Europe.

France and Russia now rule supreme.—There are no powers or combination of powers in Europe, England included, that can resist or cope with the allied Empires of Alexander and Napoleon.

How France will finally act in the affair of the Italian Duchies, or in the revolted provinces of Romagna, remains to be seen. My own impression is that the Duke of Tuscany will be restored, but be compelled before that restoration to grant a liberal constitution to his people, and Modena and Parma remain annexed to the Kingdom of Sardinia. Romagna will, I think, finally return to its allegiance to the States of the Church; but not, probably, until the poor old Pope has been compelled to grant many much needed reforms in his secular government.

Although many 'complications' still exist in European matters, I do not think, as some do, that another war will soon take place about Italian affairs. [illegible] has declared war against the Moors, but as this war is [illegible] by England, it will not probably amount to much.

Conference

Will be held in Jersey county, Ill., commencing Nov. 18th, and continuing over the following Lord's day. The brethren can appoint where they judge the cause of truth can best be served. I will spend the following week also with them if there is an open door, Lord willing.

WALTER PRATT.

Notice.

There will be a quarterly conference holden (if the Lord will) at Marble Rock, Floyd Co., Iowa, to commence Friday evening, before the fourth Sunday in November.

PETER S. W. DEYO, Evangelist.

Appointments.

Bro. W. S. Campbell will preach in Boston (Chapman Hall) .... Nov. 20th and 27th

Eld. Frank Burr appoints to preach in North Canton, Ct .... Nov. 27th

God willing, I intend to preach in Portland the last Sabbath in this month. JOHN COUCH.

Wm. B. Davis appoints to preach in

Amherst, Mass	Nov. 18th
North Dana	Nov. 26th
North Dana Village, (Bro. G. A. Streeter's)	Nov. 27th
Athol	Nov. 30th
Northfield	Dec. 4th

Eld. G. L. Teeple appoints to preach in Painter Hill, Conn., (where Bro. Teeple may appoint) .... Nov. 20th

By request, I appoint to preach in Scitico .... Nov. 27th

L. S. LUDINGTON.

Eld. Wm. Shepherd appoints to preach in Waterbury, Ct .... Sunday, Nov. 20th

Eld. Jas. Hemenway appoints to preach in Danielsonville, Ct .... Nov. 20th and 27th

Bro. Joseph Gregory will meet with the brethren and sisters in

Middlebury, Ct	Nov. 25th
Prospect	Nov. 19th and 20th
West Cheshire	Nov. 28th
(where Bro. Mix may appoint.)
Morris	Nov. 30th
(where Bro. Canfield may appoint.)
Roxbury, Ct	Dec. 3d
Wauramaug	Dec. 6th

Business Matters.

To Correspondents.

Bro. S. G. Mathewson's P. O. address is Sandy Hill, N. Y.

Mrs. Walter Pratt's P. O. address is Fiskdale, Mass.

Eld. F. Burr.—All right.

Cash Receipts.

Preachers' Aid Society.—Miss A. M. Hollis, $2.00, G. W. Bailey $1.00. To Nov. 16th, $80.00.

J D Walker 234, $1.28, H Thompson 234, $1.24, J Haskins 234, $1.20, D Fowler 234, $1.20, H Griffen 231, $1.08, C Husted 268, $2.25, S P Hubbard 234, $1.76, I Belding 231, $1.37, H Tuttle 255, $2.62, B P Braley 286, $4.00, E Burrows 219, $1.40, L A Thornton 284, $1.70, J Balcomb 266, $2.25, S P Hubbard, for post., 22 cts.

J French 234, J R Hyde 229, G Stockwell 218, I A Hazen 217, B Perkins 222, J Jeffry 222,—50 cts. each.

I Hazelton 242, Mrs. C Bragg 238, A Hill 234, S Potter 272, A Cole 245, S C Knowlton 230, S Mitchell 242, S Blaisdell 234, E Flanders, Jr., 227, I Hartwell 234, Alv Lord 240, M Pepper 242, S Mills 235, H A Hovey 222, H D Sherwood 242, A Kelley 231, E Sanderson 236, J H Harding 226, B S Jackson 229, G W Rathburn 240, L P Fox 234, H J Howe 242, S Sparks 234, J Clifford 234, J S Fenney 193, J Hayes 242, I Chapman, W Bassford 236, J Bartell 208,—$1.00 each.

C Pettibone 256, A M Barton 247, W A Lovejoy 244, T C Mason 249, L B Potter 268, Mrs. A Doolittle 267, W Harriman 244, J W Marden 252, R Hurlbut 268, J Woodward 260, Romedy 260, G Morris 240, S Dawyer 234,—$2.00 each.

S G Edgerly 267, B Little 247,—$3.00 each.

Books and Tracts.—H Thompson 76 cts, W Rowand 24 cts, T C Mason $1.00, C B Turner $1.00, P A White $15.50, T Tucker $1.60, J H Harding 15 cts, G W Rathburn $2.00, A D Eastwood 57 cts, H Tuttle 38 cts, L A Thornton 30 cts.

Books and Tracts.

LAW requires all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on TRACTS is only one half cent per ounce, if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for ANY of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the CRISIS, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

THE SOUL—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words nephesh and psuche as employed in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant, Boston. 32 pp.; 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred. postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. They weigh about one ounce each. A valuable tract for the times. Get one.

THE SPIRIT—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words ruakh and pneuma as found in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant. 32 pp., price 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. A valuable aid in the study of the Scriptures.

The Parable of the Rich Man and Lazarus; does it imply eternal future suffering? By C. F. Hudson. 24 pp. Price, 3 cts. single. $2.00 per hundred.

The Doctrine of Everlasting Punishment: a discussion of the question, "Do the Scriptures teach the doctrine of the eternal conscious suffering of the wicked?" Between Dr. J. Litch and Eld. Miles Grant. Price, single, 25 cts. Postage 3 cts. 1-4 off per dozen.

What is Man? A Bible view of his creation. The meaning of soul, spirit, death and hell, by Miles Grant. Price, single copy 5 cts; $3.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

"The Speechless Guest at the Marriage Feast," by John F. Cotton, being a short review of the parable, with [illegible] remarks of its illustration in the destruction of Jerusalem; and its positive negation of the doctrine of election and reprobation. Price 5 cts. single, postage 1 ct. $3.00 per hundred.

ANTI-ETERNAL TORMENT. By Edwin Burnham. Price 1 cent, single; 75 cts. per hundred. Postage 1 ct.

Death not Life: or the Destruction of the Wicked scripturally Established. By J. Blain, Baptist minister. Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cents single; postage 2 cents. Bound, 40 cents; postage 5 cents.

Church Debts. By W. Ramsey, D. D. A rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 10 cts.—postage 3 cts.

The Rights of Woman, [illegible] By C. F. [illegible] copies [illegible] hundred. Sold by A. W. Young, [illegible] New York; [illegible] S. C. Griggs & Co., Chicago.

[illegible]

Words of Warning. 3 cts. single; [illegible]

English Bibles.—We have made arrangements [illegible] than they can be bought [illegible]

Life and Religious Experience of [illegible] Munger, including [illegible] connected with camp-meetings and revivals. Written by himself. This is a very [illegible] and will be read with [illegible] Price 50 cts. —postage 10 cents.

The Excellency of the Lord's [illegible]; or Christ the promised [illegible]. By [illegible] SEYMOUR. An excellent tract to throw light upon the Scriptures, and upon the [illegible] of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $3.00 per hundred,—5 cts. single. Postage [illegible]

200 Stories for Children, compiled by T. M. Preble. An excellent collection of interesting incidents, well calculated to benefit the reader. Price 40 cents; postage 7 cents.

FOSTER'S LETTERS AND [illegible], $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single, postage [illegible]

SON OF GOD, by H. Grew, 10 cents single; postage 1 cent.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Genesee, N. Y. Price $1., postage paid.

AN APPEAL TO PIOUS TRINITARIANS. By H. Grew. Price 2 cts., postage 1 ct.

THE SAINTS' INHERITANCE, by Wm. Sheldon.—A good tract to give your neighbor. Price $3.00 per hundred, 5 cts. single. Postage 1 ct.

The Wicked not Immortal. Two hundred texts quoted to prove the destruction of the wicked. By Eld. Jacob Blain. Price 1 cent single; $1.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

The Great Error Exposed; or, Endless Misery not a Bible Doctrine. In this tract all texts relied on to prove endless misery are explained, and two hundred for destruction quoted. By Eld. Jacob Blain. Price 2 cents single; $2.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

WE ALSO HAVE THE FOLLOWING WORKS, PUBLISHED AND FOR SALE BY H. L. HASTINGS, Providence, R. I.

1.—The Voice of the Church on the Coming and kingdom of the Redeemer, or a history of the Reign of Christ on Earth, by D. T. Taylor, edited with a preface, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. 12mo. pp. 420, price $1, postage 18 cents.

2.—The Great Controversy between God and Man. Its origin, progress and termination, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. pp. 167, neatly bound in cloth, price 60 cents—postage 10c.

3.—Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion, and a Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. Edited with a preface, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. 12mo. pp. 122. Price, in paper covers, 30 cts.—postage 5 cts., cloth gilt, 40 cts.—post. 8 cts.

4.—The Fate of Infidelity: or the Dealings of Providence with Modern Infidels; together with an appendix, containing a brief account of the special judgments visited upon the early opposers of Christianity, by a converted infidel. 1 vol. 18 mo. pp. 175, cloth gilt, 25 cents—post-paid.

5.—Future Punishment: an Argument in two parts, from Reason and Scripture, by H. H. Dobney, Baptist minister of England; with an appendix on the State of the Dead, by John Milton. This work is one of patient thought and calm and christian argument. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 312, price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

6.—Debt and Grace: or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C. F. Hudson. A most learned and valuable work, exhibiting great candor, ability and research, containing quotations from some four hundred writers of all ages and languages, and showing conclusively that eternal life is the peculiar privilege of the believer in Jesus Christ. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 480, price $1.25—post paid.

7.—Pauline Theology: or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. A convincing argument, deduced from a careful examination of every passage on the subject of Future Punishment in Paul's fourteen epistles. 12mo. pp. 84, 15 cts. single, $10 per hund.—post. 1c.

8.—The Old Paths: or the Primitive Doctrine of a Future Life, embracing copious extracts from the apostolic fathers, with arguments and remarks, by H. L. Hastings. pp. 97 12mo. 15 cts. single, $12 per hundred—post. 1c.

Important Questions—3 Nos., 4 pp. each. Price, per sett, 3 cts. single, $1.50 per hundred.

Fables of Infidelity, and Facts of Faith. By R. Patterson. 12mo. Price, postpaid, 75 cts? $6 per dozen.

Tracts on Prophecy, (bound,) 224 pp. Price, postpaid, 60 cts.

Tracts on Immortality, (bound,) 220 pp. Price, postpaid, 60 cts. Both volumes mailed for $1.

Tracts of 24 pages. Price, 5 cts. single copy; $3 per hundred: postage 1 ct. each, or half a cent per ounce if ordered to the amount of eight ounces or upwards.

1—Church not in Darkness; 2—The Three Worlds; 3—The Last Days; 4—Plain Truths; by Hastings. 5—Noah, his Age and [illegible]; 6—[illegible] of all Nations; 7—It is Done; by John Cumming. 8—A Voice of Warning; 9—New Heavens and Earth, by D. T. Taylor. 10—*Ancient Landmarks; 11—State of the Dead; by Milton. 12—Intermediate State; by Grew.

Tracts at 3 cents single copy; $1.50 per hundred: postage 1 ct. each, or half cent an ounce for packages of eight or more ounces.

1—Future Punishment; by Grew. 2—Scripture tract number one, Destiny of the Wicked. 3—Outline of the coast of [illegible]; by [illegible]. [illegible] Key of Truth; 5—Man's Future State; by Sheldon. —6†Olive Leaves, by the sett.

Tracts at 2 cents single copy; $1 per hundred.

1—The Night Cometh; by J. Adey. 2—The Day of Judgment, by St. Cyril.

Tracts at 1 cent single copy; 80 cents per hundred.

1—Olive Leaves, separate; 2—[illegible] separate; 3—Forty Questions on [illegible]. 4—Scripture Searchers, one, two, [illegible] and six.

The above Tracts are on hand, and orders can be filled at once. Let no [illegible] Orders with the CASH are solicited. [illegible] ing tracts should order as much as [illegible] cents worth, as packages of tracts containing eight ounces or more go cheaper than smaller quantities. Those who buy books to sell will receive them at a liberal discount. The post-paid [illegible] sending stamps to pay the postage,—and those that FEEL poor also.

Address H. L. HASTINGS, Providence, R. I.

For sale also by [illegible] Young, 128 William street N. Y.

* The Landmarks [illegible] which can be separated for distribution. [illegible] contains, The Coming and Kingdom [illegible] 20,000 Baptists; the Duration of the [illegible] Clarke; Hope and Duty of the [illegible] [illegible] Restitution, by Cyrus [illegible] Mather; Loving Christ's Appearing, [illegible]

† The Olive Leaves [illegible] that can be separated [illegible] Little Children, Love [illegible] Resting Place; three, My [illegible] Love; five, Abundant [illegible] Hastings. Just the thing [illegible] classes of saints and sinners.

Glad Tidings [illegible]

[illegible]

Original Contributions.

For the Crisis.

"The End of all Things is at Hand."

[illegible] I hear the wall
[illegible]
The solemn clash of deadly arms
Is echoed o'er the seas.

The [illegible] clouds are darker grown,
And swelling wide with wrath,
They lower now and soon will burst
Upon the sinner's path.

The "preparation day" has come,
We hear the "rattling" car,
The "chariots jostle in the streets,"
Their sound is heard afar.

Christian, gird on thine armor now,
Give not the battle o'er;
Our toils are ended; lo! we stand
Beside our Father's door.

And can ye now give up the prize
For which ye've suffered pain?—
Faint not, another step advance,
And you the crown will gain.

Look boldly up; now is the time
That God will answer prayer,
When Time's great heart has pulseless grown,
He'll make each saint his care.

One plunge into the fount of faith,
One mighty cry to God,
And we'll come forth a shining gem
From 'neath the "chastening rod."

Glory to God! we're almost home,
We're almost done with pain;
Sorrow and sickness ne'er shall reach
Our changed forms again.

M. Mathews.

Richmond, C. E.

For the Crisis.

The Baptism of the Holy Ghost.

CORRESPONDENCE.—No. 5.

My Dear Sister G.:—There is in my possession the thoughts of one who has been eminently successful in the work of soul-saving, that are so appropriate on this point, I will transcribe for your perusal.

"But all this spiritual [I question the propriety of this term] and rational preaching will be of no avail, unless another means of God's own choosing be superadded to give it an effect—the light and influence of the Holy Spirit. That Spirit of life and fire penetrates in a moment the sinner's heart, and drags out to the view of his conscience those innumerable crimes which lie concealed there, under successive layers of deep and thick darkness, when, under that luminous burning agency, he is compelled to cry, 'God be merciful to me a sinner!' 'Save, Lord, or I perish!' 'Heal my soul, for it hath sinned against thee!'"

The following principles were formed, and laid down as the result of those sentiments.

"1st. The absolute necessity of the immediate influence of the Holy Ghost, to impart point, power, efficacy and success to a preached gospel.

"2nd. The absolute necessity of praying more frequently, more perseveringly, and more believingly, for the aid of the Holy Spirit in my ministry.

"3d. That my labors must be powerless and comfortless without this aid; a cloud without water; a tree without fruit; dead and rootless; a sound uncertain, and unctionless, and meaningless; such will be the character of my ministry. It is the Spirit of God alone which imparts significancy and power to the word preached, without which, as one has expressed it, 'all the threatening of the Bible will be no more than thunder to the deaf, and lightning to the blind.' A seal requires weight, a hand upon it, to give it an impression. The soul of the penitent sinner is the wax, gospel truth is the seal; but without the Almighty hand of the Holy Ghost, that seal is powerless. In the apostolic times, they preached the gospel with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven. In our day, we need an energy from no lower source to overturn the wickedness of the vile and profane, and to counteract the formality and worldliness which are every where visible.

"4th. I am now fully persuaded that in proportion as the Spirit of God shall condescend to aid my efforts in the gospel ministry, I shall be successful; nor need I expect any success beyond. No man has ever been signally useful in winning souls to Christ without the help of the Spirit. With it, the humblest talent may astonish earth and hell, by gathering into the path of life thousands for the skies, while without it, the first, the most splendid talents remain comparatively useless.

5th. The entire glory of all my success shall henceforth be given to the Spirit. By this I shall conscientiously abide as by any other principle of our holy religion. [illegible] They that honor me, I will honor.' To this may be added that right- [illegible] and unchanging determi- [illegible] of Jehovah, 'My glory will I not give to another.'"

These excellent resolves were deeply engraven upon this devoted christian's heart; [illegible] and he was governed thereby, [illegible]

... ministers need to have the Spirit of life from God [illegible]! Would that the ministry felt it as they ought to feel it, and go to their closets, and there "tarry" in importunate, believing prayer, until upon their hearts the mighty baptism came, and to them the tongue was given! What would be the result? Why, with burning words would they give utterance to the truth, and it would find its way to cold-hearted professors, and they would begin to see their need of the same anointing; while sinners would be convicted, and cry out, "What shall we do to be saved?"

And if upon the entire church the baptism was poured out, what then would be the result? Jew and Greek, bond and free, male and female, high and low, rich and poor, would all be one of one heart and mind. It would not be the Baptist church, the Methodist church, the Advent church, the Congregationalist church, etc. These would not constitute the church, but believers of every name, thus baptized into Christ, would be Christians, and constitute the Church of the living God! And O, how mighty her influence! The oneness would carry conviction to the world; and the power of her testimony, conveyed through diversified channels, operating through divers gifts, would convince and win thousands upon thousands to Christ. If three thousand were added to the one hundred and twenty Spirit-baptized disciples, in one day, as the result of that limited outpouring, what would not millions of heaven-baptized disciples accomplish?

And it ought be done! Alas! too many are settling down in the idea that this gift of power is lost to the church, and never can be regained. Thank God, it is not wholly lost! There are to-day more than three thousand reserved in Israel, who have not bowed the knee to Formalism, but, possessed of the same "unction" that was received by the church at Jerusalem, they make their mark for God wherever they move—their hearts are in the work, and they love to labor with all the power God gives them. O this baptism! How it makes the timid female courageous in the work! How it establishes the vacillating disciples! How it imparts assurance to the doubting one! How it resurrects buried talents, and breathing into them life, sets them in motion for God and souls! Who, oh who does not cry out,—"Lord, baptize me with the Holy Ghost!"

But I have lingered long, my sister, on this one point, the "power" imparted by the baptism, as constituting the great essential qualification for success in the great work of soul saving.

Yours in Christ, M. D. W.

For the Crisis.

Notes by the Way.

By request of some of the brethren, I pen a few notes of my tour through Maine, for the readers of the "Crisis." Our first appointment was at North Searsport, Sept. 20th. Here, in company with Bro. Billings, we commenced our labors in Me. There are but few of like precious faith in this place, but the few are trying to let their light shine. They have passed through some trials, which resulted from the teachings of one who has been there preaching, and practicing that which is contrary both to gospel and good sense. The brethren pursued a proper course, and he failed to do them much injury.

Our next appointment was at Frankfort, where we had a good congregation out to hear, and hope some good will be the result. From Frankfort we went to Newburgh. Here was once a large company of brethren and sisters, but we found them in a low and scattered condition. The inconsistent course of some who have been among them, advocating strange doctrines, has had an influence to scatter and discourage those that would pursue a consistent course.

Oct. 6th, Bangor. Called upon Bro. Smith. Found a few in this place trying to gain the heavenly Rest. Held one meeting with them in a private house, a goodly number were out to hear, and I trust some good was done.

Friday, Oct. 7th, Hermon. Our meeting commenced at 2 o'clock P. M., and continued over the Sabbath. The church in this place are in a low state, but we had an attentive congregation, and the truth seemed to take effect upon the hearts of the people. The brethren were encouraged to go on. One soul was converted, and testified to the goodness of God. There might be much good done in this region of country, if there was some one to travel and preach, and labor among the people, and who feels the worth of souls, rather than the riding of some doctrinal hobby. Much injury has been done to the cause in Maine, by some that have been among the brethren, preaching and forcing some peculiar tenet, to the dividing of the flock.

Our next appointment was at Holden, Oct. 13th. When this appointment was made, the brethren had no house to worship in; but Bro. Clewley put his hand to the work, and purchased a house, moved it upon his land, and fitted it up for a chapel; so that we found all things ready for the meeting which commenced Thursday morning, and continued day and evening until Sunday night. The brethren in this place are doing what they can to sustain meetings. [illegible]

The people were interested, and I have it to say to the credit of the young people there, they manifested candor throughout the meeting, and convinced us that there are some young men in that part of Maine who know what belongs to good breeding.

Our next appointment was at Corinna. On my way there I stopped at Levant, and held three meetings in a school-house. Had an attentive congregation. At Corinna held three meetings. A number of brethren were in from other places. Enjoyed the meeting with them much. Sunday preached twice, and rode to Hermon, twenty miles, and preached in the evening. I regret that I could not have stopped longer with the church in Corinna, for there seemed to be omens of good; but previous engagements obliged me to leave; I had engaged to preach a few evenings in Swanville on my return. I arrived there on Monday, and preached evenings until Friday. The people in this place were mostly Universalists; and I presented to them the doctrine of immortality through Christ only. It was new to them, and some became very much interested, and are searching to see if these things are true.

This was my last appointment in Maine. We found a few in every place trying to press their way on to the eternal Rest, but they have many things to dishearten them. They have but little preaching, and much that they have had has served to divide rather than to unite; but I think the "drift wood" has nearly all gone down the stream, and I hope to see hereafter a rising interest among the brethren in that State. I was with the different churches about five weeks, attended about fifty meetings, had some refreshing seasons, and I trust some good was done, which will be made manifest at the judgment. Soon the labors of the preacher will be ended,—the King will come and save the humble few that love him. O, let us be ready! J. Hemenway.

Oct. 31st, 1859.

Hymn of Trust.

O Love divine, that stooped to share
Our sharpest pang, our bitterest tear,
On Thee we cast each earth-born care,
We smile at pain while Thou art near!

Though long the weary way we tread,
And sorrows crown each lingering year,
No path we shun, no darkness dread,
Our hearts still whispering, Thou art near!

When drooping pleasure turns to grief,
And trembling faith is changed to fear,
The murmuring wind, the quivering leaf,
Shall softly tell us, Thou art near!

On Thee we fling our burdening woe,
O, Love divine, forever dear,
Content to suffer, while we know,
Living and dying, Thou art near!

Selections.

Preaching upon Popular Proverbs.

BY TIMOTHY TITCOMB.

"When you are an anvil, bear, when you are a hammer, strike."

"There is never wanting a dog to bark at you."

"An honest man is not the worse because a dog barks at him."

"He laughs best who laughs last."

Every man in the world who gives blows must take blows. Every man who occupies the position of a positive force, bearing upon the thought and life of the world, is a hammer that, more or less, must submit itself to the fulfillment of the office of an anvil. Those whom he assails, or the supporters of that which he assails, will turn up his face, and undertake to straighten their crooked nails on it, or re-fasten the rivets of their broken cisterns on it, or pound the wrinkles out of their battered opinions on it, or punish it with spiteful indentations. The perfection of art with such a man is to strike heartily when he assumes the office of a hammer, and bear bravely when he is compelled to be an anvil. Until a man becomes as good an anvil as he is a hammer, he fails to be thoroughly fitted for his work. What an indurate old anvil Martin Luther was! He smote errors and abuses and sins with blows that sent their resonant echoes through all the centuries. He was a moral sledge-hammer, assailing a system that shook through all its rotten timbers; but that system and its defenders returned his assaults, and tested his resistance and endurance. The diet of Worms made an anvil of him, and the kind of steel he had in him was manifested in his reply to the friends who undertook to dissuade him from going to Worms to be hammered. "Were there as many devils in Worms as there are roof-tiles, I would on!" That was the way of Luther, the anvil.

The hammer and the anvil are the two hemispheres of every true reformer's character. They are, in fact, the two aspects of every leader, let him be never so high, or never so humble. Every man who strikes blows for power, for influence, for institutions, for the right, must be just as good an anvil as he is a hammer. If he is not, he may properly conclude that he has no very important mission in the improvement and progress of his race. If private and instituted sin, error, prejudice and wrong would be kind enough to stand quietly, and let us batter in their sides, or knock them down, reform would become a fine art, with great attractions for men of weak constitutions and gentle pedigrees; but they always object to this mode of treatment; and any man who attacks them must calculate on his power of resistance, or his power to bear without flinching the blows he will receive in return. A pugilist who is an inferior hammer not unfrequently wins a fight in consequence of being a superior anvil. If victory were always with the hammer, the French would always be victorious; but the anvil won at Waterloo.

But the blows which a reformer receives in direct response to his own are not always the hardest things he had to bear. Many [illegible] to those that [illegible] they rather enjoy them. Direct and powerful opposition is a kind of compliment to the assailing power, and demonstrates fear, or the consciousness of damage, on the part of the assailed. Every system and institution of wrong, error and sin has its defenders; but, beyond these, it has adherents and friends in multitudes, who, being unable to enter the lists as champions, resort to smaller and meaner arts of enmity. There is never wanting any number of dogs to bark at an honest man. Now this playing the part of an anvil, and being the object of the vocal demonstrations of a popular quadruped, are two very different things. Many a man can withstand the fiercest blows of an individual, who will shrink from the barking of the people. Many a man can give blows valiantly and receive them bravely, who is made very nervous and miserable by clamor about his heels, and spiteful feints at the terminal portions of his pantaloons. In fact, there is nothing which a true man cannot bear, provided he is conscious of possessing the sympathy of the people.

When a reformer utterly loses, or fails to gain, the sympathy of the people, strong indeed must be his conviction, profound indeed must be his charity, and vital must his faith and purpose be, if he can still strike lustily in their behalf. Oh! how few enter upon a career of reform, in whatever department of life, and come out of it uninjured! How few are able to battle through a lifetime with the errors and sins of society, and escape unembittered toward those whom they have endeavored to benefit! How few can close a life of self-sacrifice,—misconstrued, misrepresented and abused,—with the immortal words, welling up from a heart of love still full and overflowing, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do!"

I suppose that indifference to direct opposition and popular clamor, even if in some sense desirable, is impossible in a nature worthy of any good work. Every man who becomes the subject of these should, however, guard himself against the consequences to which I have alluded. Every man should guard himself against a waning faith in humanity. Moral forces move slowly, partly from their nature and the complication of their processes, and partly from the lack of social sympathy among the masses of men. The most that a reformer can hope to do in his short life is to introduce a leaven into society which shall at length work the elevation he desires to effect. He can rarely move masses to his will by the immediate exercise of power, because there are, in sympathy, no such things as masses of men. There are loosely bound aggregations of individualities, but no masses through which runs so thorough a sympathy that action upon one will be action upon all. It must be remembered that a man may apparently have all society against him, and yet be engaged in a work which will certainly and thoroughly revolutionize its opinions and habits. An air-line railroad, running strait through home-lot and garden and dwelling, through hill and valley and meadow, will throw everybody upon its course into wild confusion during the process of its construction, and were we to sympathize with the clamor of those with whose private interests it temporarily interferes, we should unite with them in calling it a curse. But when, after long preparation, and great individual labor and sacrifice, it is completed, and the cars commence their regular trips, the abutters upon the road adapt themselves to it, reap gladly and gratefully its advantages in the appreciation of their estates, and learn to regard it as a blessing which they cannot spare.

There are many good reasons why a reformer should be slow to lose his faith in humanity. The first and most obvious, is, that there is always involved in this loss the loss of faith in God and in himself. I have yet to see the first reformer who has become sour and bitter towards his fellows—who has not also ceased to be a religious man. The religious anniversaries in the great cities nearly always are accompanied by gatherings of men, who, having exhausted their faith in their fellows, and become bankrupt in charity, meet to pour into one another's ears, and into the ears of a curious multitude, the horrid discords of their blatant infidelity. The reformer feels, too, that he comes into any general judgment of his kind. If he do not feel this fully, he at least loses faith in his power over men, and, disappointed, sinks back into fretfulness over the failure of his mission, and the miscarriage of his life.

Another reason why a reformer should be slow to lose faith in men, is because they cannot at once understand him. They have lost faith in leaders, and for good cause. Leaders have been accustomed to use them for the accomplishment of selfish purposes. Thus, when a new leader arises, it takes them a long time to become fully assured of his motives. As there are always men enough whose selfishness leads them to misconstrue these motives, it may sometimes require many years for a man to vindicate himself, and secure confidence. There is no justice in blaming the people for this cautiousness. They have been deceived too often, and would be fools were they not to exercise it. A reformer has no right to expect immediate reception into the confidence of the people. They must be satisfied of the motives of him who undertakes to lead them, measure his ability, sound the depths of his character, and intellectually comprehend his plans before they ought to consent to be guided by him. It is no more than just to say that every reformer who has lost his faith in men, and becomes embittered by the loss, proves that the judgment of the people upon his character is just. He undertook a task for which he was not fit, and the people found him out.

A stronger reason still for the preservation of faith in men, is, that the more intractable and unreasonable they may be, the greater their need of reformation, and the larger draft do they make upon faith. Faith in humanity, under divine guidance and blessing, is the hope of the world. Christianity comes to us with no compulsory processes. It has faith in itself, doubtless; but without faith in men, it would never have come, or never would have made its appeal to voluntary choice. All powers that have no faith in men act by compulsion, or by circumvention. There can be no action upon will—no motives of action presented to voluntary choice—that do not proceed upon the basis of faith in humanity. The moment we lose this faith, our efforts are paralyzed, and we turn railers and accusers. A man who desires to benefit his fellows cannot proceed a single step without faith in those whom he would benefit. No matter how bad men may be, there must be, on the part of him who would reform them, the faith that there is that in them which will respond to the truth when it can be brought into contact with their judgment and conscience, or he can do absolutely nothing.

The people owe a duty to all who come to them with the professed wish to do them good. A man is not necessarily bad because a dog barks at him, and an honest man is never the worse because a dog barks at him. If you will look over your town, your state, your country, you will readily select the names of those against whom there is more or less of popular clamor. You will recall here and there names that are names of reproach. You shrink from association with those who bear them. If you enter their presence, you enter suspiciously, as if you feared a taint, or guiltily, as if you thought them conscious of the contempt in which you hold them. You think, because there is so much outcry against them, there must be something bad in them. Now, no considerate, generous man will join in this outcry, or allow it to prejudice him against its object. It is, I believe, the general rule that these men are men of power—of genuine progressive ideas—men who have an errand of good to their race.

Look back over the past, and see how many of those whom the world once abused are the world's idols. Who are the preachers whom you most delight to hear? Have they not at some time in their history been the objects of the world's outcry, and of yours, too? Look at the ballots which you carry to the polls with confidence, and perhaps with unlimited enthusiasm. Do they not bear the names of men whom you once verily believed to be the incarnations of selfishness and demagogism? Think of the statesmen, hunted to their graves by the hounds of popular clamor, who are now enthroned among the nation's immortals. Remember all the men against whom you have joined in denunciation, and whom you have learned to respect, if not to love, by getting near to them, and obtaining a look into their honest hearts and a vision of their devoted lives. Look over the whole track of history, and see how every one who ever did great good in the world has been the object of the world's maledictions, and then be careful how you join in an unreasoning outcry against any man.

While the world should be more careful and considerate in its treatment of those who come to it with a mission of good, the reformer himself should be very patient with the world. He must not only retain his faith in it, but he must not be in too great a hurry to be understood and accepted. He must draw close to the world, where it can look into his heart, and the world should draw close to him, until it is rationally satisfied that he has nothing for it. The efforts of opposing forces, backed by the indorsement of the unreasoning multitude, should throw no worker for the world off his poise, nor should they deprive him of the honest judgments of those who think. No true man will ever be in haste to vindicate himself before the world by direct efforts for that end. He has faith in men, and that gives him faith in the ultimate judgments of men. He lives and speaks and acts, and feels content to let his life, his words and his actions speak for him. By them he knows that, sooner or later, the world will judge him, and he is content. Show me a man who gets excited and uneasy under popular clamor, and betrays his unhappiness and anxiety by frequent private or public explanations and justifications, and you will show me one who is not to be trusted. He has not the spirit nor the stamina for his work. But he who goes straight forward, confident in his own motives, true to his own convictions, and calmly trustful of the ultimate issue of his efforts and his life, is of the true metal, and one may be sure that there is something good in him. * * * * *

No man can be a true worker for human good who does not believe that the cobble-stone pavement has an end, and that there is an avenue ahead where it will be his turn to enjoy himself. He believes that the time will come when what he is doing, and has done, will be accepted at its true value. He may be laughed at now, he may be scoffed at and scorned, his motives may be maligned, he may be hammered by opposition and barked at by popular clamor, but he knows that sometime in the future it will be his turn to laugh, and he is confident that he will laugh last and laugh best. He knows that God will prove to be a good paymaster, and he believes that the world will, in the long run, be just.

If any man propound ideas in advance of the world, the world in its progress will come up to them, as certainly as the world continues to exist, and then, if not before, it will remember. Those who cherish truth and stand by the right, must be at warfare with those who hold to falsehood and to sin. There is no conscription in this war. It is a voluntary service on both sides, and neither is in want of cowards. There is a contemptibly quiet path for all those who are afraid of the blows and clamors of opposing forces. There is no honorable fighting for any man who is not ready to forget that he has a head to be battered and a name to be bespattered. Truth wants no champion who is not as ready to be struck, as to strike, for her. The eye that can see the triumph of that which is good in the world from afar—the heart that can be certain of victory though now in the sulphurous thickness of the fight, can afford present contumely and even present defeat. The bearer of such a heart and eye knows that sooner or later the time will come when he and the band to which he belongs shall celebrate a final victory over all that oppose them—that they shall come home from the contest "with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads." He knows that the last shout will be his, and that the severer the conflict the heartier will that shout be. Ah! what peans of triumph, what sweeps of majestic music, what waving of banners, what joyous tumult of white-robed hosts, shall greet him who goes home, worn and weary, to take a crown worthily won in the contest with error and with wrong! May that crown be yours and mine!—Springfield Republican.

☞ There are two things in which all, or nearly all, sects agree—the hatred with which they pursue the errors of others, and the love with which they cling to their own.

Selected for the Crisis.

Death.

Thou art a fearful thing, oh, death!
Thou claimest all things living for thine own;
The friends we love, the beautiful, the gay,
Pass daily from our midst. Affection's tone—
Its soft, sweet cadence cannot move thy will;
Thou heedest not, though all around thee weep.
Thy victim feels thy touch, so cold and still,
It stops life's rolling tide—seals up in sleep
The heavy eyes—bids the heart cease to throb—
The icy limbs to move—the brain to think.
Stern tyrant, bitter is thy brimming cup—
A cup from which I, too, must one day drink.

Mysterious, grim keeper of the tomb,
Thou'rt ever watchful, seeking for thy prey.
Thou steal'st from infancy's fair cheek the bloom—
Thou doomest the tender form to foul decay;
Thou comest unbidden to the halls of mirth—
The bridegroom turns away, the bride is thine,
The fondly cherished wife, the aged sire,—
Youth, manhood, all pay vows at thy dark shrine.
Monarch of time! thy heavy chains will break,
And from thy presence joyously we'll soar
To blissful homes, where sin and sorrow cease;
There we shall meet our loved ones—meet to part no more.

Reading for Youth.

For the Crisis.

Little Children can do Good.

Away in the west lived a Catholic family, in which there was a little girl seven years old. She was induced to go to a Protestant Sunday school. The father became very anxious about his soul. His distress increased daily, and one night, at the midnight hour, he arose from his bed in agony. He begged his wife to pray for him, as he said he did not know how to pray for himself. She told him that she could not pray any better that he could.

"What shall I do then?"

"Perhaps," said she, "our little Mary can pray."

So the father went up to her chamber, where she was fast asleep, and took her up from her bed in his arms and bore her down stairs, and putting her gently down, he said to her with great earnestness,

"Mary, can you pray?"

"Oh, yes, father, I can pray."

"Will you kneel down and pray for your poor father?"

"Yes, I will pray for you."

So she kneeled, put up her little hands, and said—"Our Father who art in heaven," —going through with the Lord's prayer. Then she prayed for her father, in her own language, asking God to love him, and have mercy upon him, and to pardon all his sins for Jesus' sake.

When she had finished her prayer, her father said to her, "Mary, can you read in your Bible?"

"O, yes, father, I can read. Shall I read to you in my Bible?"

"Yes, read to me."

She began at the third chapter of the Gospel according to John. She read along till she came to that verse, "As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of man be lifted up; that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

"Oh, Mary," said he, "is that there?"

"Yes, father, it is here. Jesus Christ said so."

"Well, that is just what I need—what your poor father needs."

"Yes, father, and hear the rest of it." 'For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him might not perish, but have everlasting life.'"

"Oh, that is for me—for just such as me!—'whosoever believeth in him.' I can believe in him—I do believe in him." And from that hour that father went on his way rejoicing in Christ Jesus with great joy.

And now, my dear little children, who read this story which I have selected for you, hoping it may do you good, will you not give yourselves away to Christ, as did this little Mary?—love to pray, and to read God's holy word, and thus not only be prepared for the glorious home where all the good children and holy people will dwell, but help others to find the Savior, as this sweet girl did? Do you not want to live forever with that loving Savior who died for you upon the cross? Do you not want to dwell always in a country where every thing will be beautiful—where the flowers you so much admire will never wither—where the green foliage will never blight with winter's frosts—where you will never have to be separated by death from father, mother, brothers and sisters, and loved playmates? Do you not want to have a home in that city that you read about in Revelation—partake of the delicious fruits which grow on the tree of life, and never suffer any more sorrow nor pain?

If so, you must give your heart up to Jesus, and ask him to give you a new heart—to take away all sinful feelings, all love of sin, and enable you to love the Savior, and love to please him. He invites you to come to him; "Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not," is what he very kindly says, and there is a promise which reads thus; "They that seek me early shall find me." Now will you not come to Jesus? Will you not seek him early in life? I hope you will go away, after reading this, into your room alone, and there give your heart to Christ, and trust in him to save you, and then when he comes in the clouds, you will be glad to see him. Aunt Mary.

☞ Virtue is like a rich stone, best plain set. [illegible]

Beautiful Allegory.

"There was once a king who had a very beautiful garden, and grounds arranged with taste to please the eye, to afford refreshing shade, retired walks, commanding views, and all the delightful fruits that could be procured. There was one superb old oak, so high and grand, that it could be seen for miles around. There were roses, and lilacs, and flowering shrubs of every kind; in short, nothing was wanting to make it a perfect spot. One day, the king's head gardener came in and exclaimed,—'O king, pray come out and see what is the matter with your garden; every thing is wilting, drooping and dying!' While he spoke, the other gardeners came up, and all had the same sad story to tell.

So the king went out, and there to be sure he found it all as they had said. He went first up to his grand old oak, his pride and admiration, and said,—'Why, Oak, what is the matter with you, that you are withering and dying? I have taken great pleasure under your wide-spread branches, and it pains me to see you in this condition.' 'Oh!' said the Oak, 'I don't think I am of any use, I am so large and cumbersome; I bear no flowers or fruit, and I take up so much room, and my branches spread so wide and thick, that it is all dark and shady under them, and no flowers or fruit can grow there. Now if I were a rose-bush, it would be worth while, for I should bear sweet flowers; or if I were a peach or a pear tree, or even like the grape-vine, I could give you fruit. But now I am of no use. It is fit that I should wither and die.' Then the king went on to his favorite rose-bush and said,—'Well, Rose-bush, what is the matter with you?' why are you so drooping? why are your leaves all falling off? why are your fragrant buds perishing on the ground?' 'Why,' said the Rose-bush, 'I am of no use; I have no fruit, I bear nothing but flowers; if I were like that grand old oak, I should be an honor to your garden, for I should make some show in the world, but as it is, I might just as well die.'

The king next came to a grape-vine, no longer clinging to the trellis or tree, but trailing sadly on the ground. He stopped and said, 'Grape-vine, what is the matter with you? why are you lying so dolefully on the ground?' 'Ah!' said the Vine, 'you see what a poor, weak creature I am, I cannot even hold up my own weight, but must cling to a post or a tree, and what good can I do? I neither give shade like the oak, nor bear flowers like the shrubs, I must always depend on something else, and surely I am of no use.'

So on went the king, quite in despair to see all his place going to destruction, when he suddenly espied a little heart's-ease, low down by the ground, with its face turned up to him, looking as bright and smiling as possible. 'You dear little Heart's-ease,' said he, 'what makes you look so bright and blooming, when every thing around you is wilting away? how can it be?' 'Why,' said the Heart's-ease, 'I thought you wanted me here; if you had wanted an oak, you would have planted an acorn; if you had wanted a rose, you would have set out a rose-bush; if you had wanted grapes, you would have put in a grape-vine. But I knew that what you wanted of me was, to be a heart's-ease, and so I thought I would try and be the very best little heart's-ease that ever I can.'

Children, can you see the moral? God did not want a grown-up, learned, rich, great man, in the place where he put you; if he had, he would have made one. He wants each of you to be a child, while you are a child; but he wants you to be a good child, and the very best little heart's-ease that ever you can. Will you try?"—Child's Book.

Although this allegory was written for children, methinks there are some grown-up persons that might draw a good lesson from it. How often do we hear persons say, "If I were in the place of such a one, I could do as well as they do, or better." Even among professed christians, we very often hear remarks like this,—"If I could talk like this one, or pray like that one, I might do something, but I cannot do any thing." And so they sit still, forgetful of the words of the Master, which requires "according to that a man hath, and not according to that he hath not."

Bro. Paul's teachings exemplify the same truth, especially the twelfth chapter of Romans and twelfth of first Corinthians. Brethren and sisters, the time is short. Let us each one strive to keep in our proper place, and do with our might what our hands find to do, resting assured that the smallest stick in the building is just as useful in its place as the largest, and the large one can not fill the place of the small. May the Lord help us all to do right in his sight, is the prayer of your sister, looking for a home "free from all care" in the kingdom of God. E. Grant.

THE CRISIS.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION,

Payable in Advance.

For a single copy one year	$1.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address, 6 months	15.00
Thirty copies to one address, 6 months	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 6 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability, when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send as much in addition to their subscriptions as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. Miles Grant, Boston, Mass.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be [illegible] cents to any other part of the United States.

The World's Crisis.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 219. BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 23, 1859. VOL. X. NO. [illegible]

The World's Crisis
IS PUBLISHED
EVERY WEDNESDAY MORNING
AT
No. 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
HENRY Y. DAVIS, JOHN COUCH, | MILES GRANT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

MILES GRANT, Editor.

☞ The Crisis is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially, the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and the final destruction of the wicked.

For terms, see fourth page.

Original Contributions.

For the Crisis.

Flowers.

I've gathered them at early day—
Flowers fresh and fair;
And wandered 'mid their bowers green,
While perfume filled the air.
I blessed the God of light and love,
Who decked this earth of ours
With fruits, and many a healing leaf,
And with the sweetest flowers.

I saw a lovely child of earth
Amid those bowers at play:
And heard her merry, prattling voice,
All through the summer day
The roses bloom'd upon her cheek,
And 'mid her sunny hair
The gentle zephyrs softly played,
And loved to linger there.

I saw the beauteous flowers fade
As autumn winds drew nigh;
And she who 'mid the bowers played,
Together droop and die!
I turned my heart from earth away,
Filled with the deepest gloom,
And longed to see the verdant fields
Of never fading bloom!

S. Lizzie Baker.

For the Crisis.

Thanksgiving.

In my youthful days I used to look forward to this time as a pleasant holiday, without scarcely any comprehension of its true meaning. In after years, as we gathered around my father's table, with no vacant seat, then I began to realize and feel the meaning of the day. As year after year I was permitted to join that family circle, the question would come up, shall we all meet here again? Death came. That aged sire was laid in the silent grave. With sadness the season came around, still it was a day of thankfulness. My own family surrounded me—my cup was mingled with love and blessing. Death came again, and the darling who was the light of our dwelling was laid away. As the day returned, we could still see "our Father's" smile, and feel his love. Had we not strong consolation? Although the storm swept fiercely on, we were hid in the Rock of ages, rejoicing in hope, established in the faith, abounding therein with thanksgiving. The storm lulled only to gather blackness, and the arm of flesh on which I was prone to lean was laid low by the destroyer.

Although my heartstrings seem torn asunder, shall murmurings now take the place of thanksgiving? Methinks I hear a voice saying, "Be still and know that I am God!" Yes, "though he slay me, yet will I trust in him;" and as this season returns, now beyond all former years do I have reason for heartfelt thanksgiving; for as the enemy robs me of my heart's treasure—gifts from God—Jesus says to me, "I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live." While I am made to feel our helplessness in escaping the enemy's power, my heart cries out, "Thanks be to God who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ!" Thanks be to God who always causeth us to triumph in Christ! "Let us come before his presence with thanksgiving, for we are the people of his pasture, and the sheep of his hand."

To very many the return of this day brings pleasing associations, and interviews with separated friends, with the enjoyment of God's bounty; but do they consider what they are, and whither they are going? That all we are, and all we may be, is provided by the grace and mercy of our God? There is to be a glorious thanksgiving by and by, when all the family of God, without one absent one, shall meet, arrayed in white robes, "and they cry with a loud voice, Salvation to our God which sitteth upon the throne and unto the Lamb. Amen: blessing, and glory, and wisdom, and thanksgiving, and honor, and power, and might, be unto our God forever and ever. Amen." "Blessed are they which are called to the marriage supper of the Lamb!"

Oh! how I long to hear the proclamation given, the day appointed, for this thanksgiving, which the King of kings shall appoint, and where he shall sit at the table with us, and all that share [illegible] supper, we shall know no separation or sorrow after; "we shall obtain everlasting joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away."

Shall any of us, dear readers, trust in our own righteousness, and appear at this supper without the wedding garment on? Shall we be cast into outer darkness, or hear the voice of our King say—"Friend, go up higher!" "Awake, awake! put on thy strength, oh Zion; put on thy beautiful garments!" O that we may be clothed with the garments of salvation, covered with the robe of righteousness! "Blessed is he that watcheth and keepeth his garments." Let us be sure we do not exchange these "white robes" for those that have broad phylacteries; for all our righteousness is as filthy rags, and this would be a poor condition in which to appear at the supper of our Lord.

Sarah A. Elmore.

South Windsor, Ct.

For the Crisis.

An Exposition of Phil. 1: 23.

BY ELD. J. S. WHITE.

"For I am in a strait betwixt two, having a desire to depart, and to be with Christ; which is far better."

Let this passage be interpreted to mean what it may, it is evident that it does not mean that Paul desired to die that he might be with Christ. Our reasons for this may be stated.

In all the Bible, death is spoken of as a judgment, or as a calamity. It was so looked upon by all the good, whose names are in the Scriptures, and who have said anything about it. Never, when they are spoken of as being in a right mind, do we have any desire expressed in favor of death rather than life. They submitted to death, not because they desired it, or looked on it as a friend, but as an event that must in the government of God take place. Death, in the Bible, is called an enemy; and as such it is everywhere represented; consequently, we find no desire expressed in favor of death, with the anticipation of any thing to be enjoyed while in death.

True, Job said in his affliction, "O that thou wouldest hide me in the grave, that thou wouldest keep me secret, until thy wrath be past, that thou wouldest appoint me a set time, and remember me! If a man die, shall he live again? all the days of my appointed time will I wait, till my change come. Thou shalt call, and I will answer thee; thou wilt have a desire to the work of thine hands."—Job. 14: 13—15. Job's desire was not that he might die, but that God would secure him in the grave, and appoint a time for him to be there, and then call and raise him up from death. His desire was, that if he must die, God would raise him, and so let him live again! Job expressed no anticipation of anything to be enjoyed in death. And he did not talk as he did because he was ignorant of the way of life and immortality through his Savior. He has told us what he believed on that subject, and when he expected to be with, and see, his Redeemer and his God. In the 18th chapter as recorded, Bildad told him that the wicked man should "be driven from light into darkness, and chased out of the world," applying his remark to Job. In the 19th chap. is Job's reply: "O that my words were now written! oh that they were printed in a book! That they were graven with an iron pen and lead in the rock forever! For I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth: and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God: whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold, and not another; though my reins be consumed within me." Thus did Job talk, when speaking of his death.

In like manner did Paul talk when speaking of his death:—"For I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge shall give me in that day, and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing."—2 Tim. 4: 6—8.

As Paul in all his letters of encouragement to the church, never directed them to the anticipation of anything to be enjoyed in death, so in speaking of his own future as above, he passed from his death to the coming of his Lord, as the next event of interest, without even intimating, that any promise would be fulfilled to him before the coming of Jesus and the resurrection. When he wrote to the church, 1 Thess. 4: 13—18, and took occasion to comfort those who had lost friends by death, he did not refer to their condition in death, as a matter of interest to them; but directed their minds to the coming of Jesus and the resurrection of their friends from the dead, as the subject of interest, and consolation. [illegible] the passage. How unlike the course sometimes used to comfort the mourner!

All the encouragement and promises given by our Savior to his apostles and to the church, it seems to me, are in keeping with the view that Job and Paul had of the future.

We may look at another example in Isaiah 38: The prophet was sent to say to Hezekiah, "Set thine house in order, (margin, give charge concerning thy house) for thou shalt die and not live." This was a sad communication to Hezekiah. Although he was a good man, it was no comfort to him to be told that he must die. He turned his face to the wall and prayed, and wept sore. God heard his prayer, and sent the prophet to say, "Thus saith the Lord, the God of David thy father, I have heard thy prayer, I have seen thy tears: behold, I will add unto thy days fifteen years." For this Hezekiah was glad; and in his response he said, "Behold for peace I had great bitterness; but thou hast in love to my soul delivered it from the pit of corruption; for thou hast cast all my sins behind thy back. For the grave cannot praise thee. . . . . they that go down into the pit cannot hope for thy truth. The living, the living, he shall praise thee as I do this day. . . . The Lord was ready to save me; therefore we will sing my songs to the stringed instruments all the days of our life in the house of the Lord." See the whole chapter. Now, whatever might have been his opinion of the place where he would have gone, if he had died, it is certain that he did not want to go there. He thanked and praised God that he had mercy on him in preventing him from dying and going there: and we think he does very plainly give his reason for wishing not to die.

We next notice Paul's view of this subject in 2 Cor. 5: 1—10:—

"For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. For in this we groan, earnestly desiring to be clothed upon with our house which is from heaven: if so be that being clothed we shall not be found naked. For we that are in this tabernacle do groan, being burdened; not for that we would be unclothed, but clothed upon, that mortality might be swallowed up of life. Now he that hath wrought us for the selfsame thing is God, who also hath given us the earnest of the Spirit. Therefore we are always confident, knowing that, whilst we are at home in the body, we are absent from the Lord: (for we walk by faith, not by sight:) we are confident, I say, and willing rather to be absent from the body, and to be present with the Lord. Wherefore we labor, that, whether present or absent, we may be accepted of him. For we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ; that every one may receive the things done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad."

There are several things here to be noticed:

1. The apostle speaks of two houses, one earthly and one heavenly. The one heavenly, he says, is eternal. It is not eternally in the heavens, but it is eternal and it is now in the heavens. It is to be revealed, it is from heaven.

2. He would be clothed upon with his house from heaven, that mortality might be swallowed up of life. That is, that his mortal house might cease to be, to give place to the immortal; or, as he says in 1 Cor. 15th, death swallowed up in victory. In this chapter he has most clearly told us when this change is to take place. It is when Christ shall come to raise the dead. When this mortal shall put on immortality, then will mortality be swallowed up of life. This house of immortality is in the heavens, because Christ is there, and in him is immortality, and he will give it to Paul when he comes. This is what Paul desired. That he might be raised from the dead, or changed from mortal to immortality. That he might receive his crown of life. In other words, he would like to be absent from the body, this earthly house, and so be present with the Lord, when he shall come to swallow up death in victory.

We see that Paul speaks of only two states of being; one in an earthly house, the other in an eternal house. He tells us what he means by the latter; that it is immortality, to be given him from his Savior from heaven. By turning to 1 Cor. 15th, we see that he has told us most plainly that this change must take place by the resurrection of the dead, or by translation. To our mind, he expressed no expectation of anything between living here, and being clothed with immortality. To be absent from the body and to be present with the Lord was, with him, to have this earthly house swallowed up with the immortal. Instead of wishing to die, he says, "For we which are in this tabernacle do groan, being burdened; not that we would be unclothed, (not that we would be dead,) but clothed upon, that mortality might be swallowed up of life." This is like his expression in Rom. 8: 23.—"Even we ourselves groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body." He did not groan, waiting for death; no, not he. He looked on death as an enemy, calls it an enemy, and everywhere so represents it. He groaned, looking and waiting for deliverance from his earthly house, and for his house from heaven, in the redemption of his body.

(To be concluded.)

A Letter.

[The following interesting letter was written by one of our contributors to a friend, and by good fortune was obtained by the editor, who hopes to be pardoned by the writer for inserting it in the Crisis for the benefit of our readers.—Ed.]

Pine Avenue, Nov. 1st, 1859.

"My Dear ——:—I don't know but you will think it strange, and out of place, for me to open the battery upon you; and I have no excuse for writing, except that I have a friendly interest in helping get you off "the fence," where I learn that you are still perched. You must forgive me if I "break the ice" and write first. I would not do it if I did not want to see you come over on the side of Bible truth. My pen is too weak to sustain error, but the truth sustains itself, else I should not write to you at all on this subject. May the Lord lead us into all truth! When we can say that without any "mental reservations," with a candid, teachable spirit, without regard to the opinions and traditions of men, and when we are sufficiently awake to care what the truth is, we've gained half the battle. Now nothing looks so very contemptible to me, as to see a person "take it easy" "on the fence," go to sleep over what appears to him a mass of contradictions.

We often hear persons say in speaking of these truths, "I have been 'on the fence' so long, that I've got used to it, and find it quite comfortable." Let us bring these words to the light and see how they will bear examination. Supposing an infidel heard a professing christian make this remark, would he not see its inconsistency and use it as a handle to the devil's pump? It seems to me to be giving the enemy great advantage, for a christian to say that, though the Bible speaks again and again of the destiny of the wicked, he cannot decide from it whether they are to live or die; that though it says in one place, "the dead know not anything," he thinks it teaches in another that they know more than they ever did before. When a christian is on the fence about Bible truths, is he not confessing to the world that to him the Bible is nothing but a mass of contradictions? Is that the way to teach people to believe and love it? He is a traitor to the Bible, who, pretending to be its friend, yet openly avows that he can't reconcile one part of it with another. Don't you think so? I will not say "I don't know" about any Bible truth, if I can help it; for I should find it hard to give a reason for the hope that is in me, if my faith ran in two opposite directions. Don't you think that if a person is "on the fence" he had better try and get off as soon as possible, for fear of bringing a reproach on the cause of Christ? If we are in doubt about any truth let us at least make the effort to come out straight.

It may be said that the truth, in such matters, is non-essential; this is the reason persons usually give for the little interest they take in it. Now, without being absolutely essential, I think it is very important, and it is non-essential only so far as ignorance is concerned. I look at it from the same stand point that I would look at the essential items of doing every known duty and forsaking every known sin. When we have the light, it is essential that we use it. And if we know that we have not got the light, it is essential that we seek it. This idea that it is no matter how you go, upside-down, or right-side-up, is false. It does matter to me if John spoke the truth when he said that God was Love. A very wicked man at Fort Edward, who was converted at our meetings, came to Bro. Grant, and after asking a few questions, said—"If God is what you represent Him to be, I want to serve Him." All the eternal torment preaching in the world could not have reached that man. Truth is never useless! The man is reformed, as the people of Fort Edward can testify. He is to be baptized next Sunday.

If a person knows that the preaching of the day is casting a stain on the character of God, it is essential that he should do what he can to wipe it off. The truth never makes those free who are afraid to own it. I had rather meet with down-right opposition than sleepy indifference! Let your light shine!

In the first place we will talk about what Paul says of immortality. He is the only writer who uses the word in the Bible. He [illegible] . . . "who (God) only hath immortality." Here I can fancy an orthodox minister rising and saying, "I beg leave to differ; all men are immortal." Well, both can't be true. Which shall we take?

Paul. "Seek for glory, and honor, and immortality.

Orthodox Minister. "That's just where you and I differ, Paul. I think that we have it already." Well, certainly if we have it, it is no use to seek for it.

Paul. "This mortal must put on immortality."

O. M. "He is n't mortal! He put on immortality at his birth!"

Paul. "Christ . . . brought life and immortality to light through the gospel."

O. M. "No he did n't!"

You see we can't fit the coat Paul cut, on to this hideous lump of deformity man calls his creed. Paul says: "I kept back nothing that was profitable;" "I have not shunned to declare unto you all the counsel of God." Yet he has not said one word about eternal torment in all his epistles; therefore it is neither "profitable" nor "the counsel of God;" neither has any other Bible writer mentioned such a thing. Paul has spoken of the destiny of the wicked many times, and it is always to "die," to "perish," "destruction," etc. He does not tell us to take these words in a new, strange sense. What are we to think? Write soon and tell me what you think.

Yours truly, F. P."

For the Crisis.

Where your Treasure is, there will your Heart be also.

Why should we love earth's glittering toys,
Which scarce a moment stay,
While pure and everduring joys
Invite our souls away?

Why should we love to linger where
Sin's withering blight is seen,
And where the friends that we've held dear,
Death's victims long have been?

Where tears of sorrow oft do flow,
And cares our bosoms fill;
Where all our joys are mixed with woe,
And all our good with ill?

A home prepared by Him, who died
A ruined world to save,
By Him who once was crucified,
And triumphed o'er the grave.

West Killingly, Ct. E. M. F.

"The Union Movement."

A MEETING OF THE LAY-MEMBERS OF THE VARIOUS CHURCHES OF THE TOWN OF UNITY ON DEC. 3, 1858.

CHAPTER VI.

The meeting being called to order in the usual form, the parties proceeded as follows:

Pres. I have been looking over the concessions made at our last meeting, and when I think of the insuperable difficulties in the way of union, I am surprised that gentlemen of intelligence should have made such concessions.

Bap. I, sir, was looking at the bare question of union, without regard to difficulties, and was constrained, and am now, to admit that union is not only right, but exceedingly desirable. Not only so, sir, but the fact that there may be difficulties in the way of getting right, is not the least evidence that we are not wrong.

Pres. Gentlemen, I can soon show that union is wholly impracticable. It is a grand chimera—"a gull-trap." Let me here present a difficulty, and I defy the world to get over it. I am a Calvinist, and the son of a Calvinist, and I believe that Calvinism is not only the Gospel, but the very vitals of the Gospel. Now it is out of the question to ask me to unite with Arminians. I have a conscience that can not and will not succumb to errors.

Chris. My dear sir, I am astonished to hear you say that Calvinism is the Gospel.

Pres. It is not only the Gospel, but the very essence of the Gospel, and I can not fellowship with any man who is not a Calvinist.

Chris. Do you not believe that Methodists are christians, and that they will be saved?

Pres. Certainly I do.

Chris. Methodists are not Calvinists, and you admit that they are christians and will be saved.

Pres. Certainly I do. I am no bigot.

Chris. Can any man be saved and not believe the Gospel?

Pres. No, sir; "He that believeth not, shall be damned."

Chris. A man, then, according to your own admission, can be a christian, and be saved, and not believe Calvinism. He can not be a christian nor be saved without believing the Gospel. Therefore Calvinism is not the Gospel.

Pres. I hold—I can prove—the fact is—you have not disproved Calvinism, and you never can.

Chris. I was not trying to disprove Calvinism. I was simply trying to show that you are mistaken in saying that Calvinism is the Gospel. This I have done.

Meth., Lu., Ep., Bap. Brother P., you will have to give it up. Mr. C. has shown that Calvinism is not the Gospel.

Pres. Calvinism, I insist, is true, after all your vaunting.

Chris. I shall not contend with you about that, nor shall I vaunt. All I want is to rid the Gospel of all difficulty. This we have now done. You have admitted that a man can be a christian and be saved, and not believe Calvinism, and that he can not be a christian nor be saved without believing the Gospel. This shows, that in your own estimation, Calvinism is not the Gospel. When we find that it is not the Gospel, we can admit that a man may be a Christian and believe it, or not believe it. It is not a saving truth, if a truth at all—it is not a Bible truth, if a truth at all, but is like a truth in astronomy—a man might be mistaken about it, and still be a christian and be saved.

Pres. This is making too little of this precious doctrine, I can not give it up.

Chris. I have not asked you to give it up. All I ask is, that as it is not the Gospel, and we have found that men can be saved and not believe it, you hold it upon a level with views you may have in regard to astronomy, or any other speculative subject, which a man may at pleasure, receive or reject, and still be a christian.

Pres. This would be making too little of Calvinism.

Chris. Not any less than you make of it yourself, every time you admit that a man can be a christian and be saved, without believing it.

Meth. I see now more clearly than ever, that Calvinism is not the Gospel. This satisfies me that the great Arminian doctrine is what I have always believed it to be—the Gospel.

Chris. Do you deny that Calvinists are christians?

Meth. No sir, I hold no such bigoted notions. I believe that thousands of Calvinists are christians, and that immense numbers of them will be saved.

Chris. Do Calvinists believe the doctrine of Arminians?

Meth. No, sir, not one word of it.

Chris. Then, Arminianism is not the Gospel, for a man can not be a christian and not believe the Gospel, and you admit that Calvinists who do not believe in Arminianism are christians.

Meth. I can prove—Mr. Wesley showed—you have a great way of turning everything out of the Gospel. See here, sir, can a man be saved and not believe Campbellism?

Chris. Certainly, if there be any such thing.

Meth. Then, Campbellism is not the Gospel!

Chris. Very well; you are welcome to put Campbellism down upon the same list with Calvinism, Arminianism, Lutheranism, Episcopalianism, Baptistism, or if there be any other ism, and let them all stand upon the same level. But the glorious Gospel of the blessed God must be exalted far above them all, because no man can be saved unless he believes it.

Pres. Mr. C., you can not get out of this difficulty in this style. You aim to keep up the impression that there is no such thing as Campbellism; but you can not escape in this way. The writings of Mr. Campbell are just as much a creed as any creed in our times.

Chris. Very well, if you are willing to put the writings of Mr. Campbell upon a level with creeds, I have no objection.

Pres. Then your own logic will prove that the writings of Mr. Campbell are not the Gospel.

Chris. Certainly; no one ever thought his writings were the Gospel, any more than your creed is the Gospel.

Pres. Our creed is the Gospel, or it is just like it.

Chris. No, sir, that can not be, or there could not be any christians who do not believe your creed, for there can not be any christians who do not believe the Gospel.

Pres. Well, sir, our creed is true, at all events.

Chris. No matter if it is; if it is not the Gospel, it is wicked to make it a bar of christian fellowship. The Scriptures do not say, and you do not say, that he that believeth not your creed, shall be damned.

Pres. No, sir, I do not say so, nor do I believe any such uncharitable doctrine.

Chris. But you do say, and the Lord says, that he that believeth not the Gospel shall be damned. The Lord makes the Gospel a bar of fellowship [illegible] but does not make your creed or the writings of Mr. Campbell a bar of fellowship. Therefore, it is [illegible] for you to do it.

Pres. [illegible] make, then, upon which to [illegible] members?

Chris. I do not think we are at liberty to make propositions upon which to receive members into the church of Christ. If we form organizations that are strictly human, and do not pretend to have anything divine about them, we have a right to make the conditions of reception just what we please. But if we attempt to come to God, we must come upon the terms he has pointed out. The simple question is, upon what stipulations will the Lord receive us? His stipulations are, that we receive Christ, that we receive the Gospel, for "he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." The Lord does not receive us upon the views or the creed of any man, but upon our faith in Christ.

Pres. Do you thus repudiate the writings of Mr. Campbell?

Chris. No, sir, but read them for religious edification, as I do all the writings of great and good men, but not as authorities or bonds of union.

Pres. Why, then, do you so violently repudiate our creed?

Chris. I do not repudiate your creed, as a mere human composition, but keep it standing upon my shelf and frequently read it. I do not repudiate it all as an uninspired production, but repudiate it as an authoritative creed or a test of fellowship in the church. Place it upon a level with other books, publications, sermons and teachings of men, and I shall have no further quarrel with it. A man can be a christian and believe it, or not believe it, as you admit. Every man that is a christian, God receives, and I am bound to receive him too.

Meth. Your views are too exclusive. We must stand upon catholic ground, where all can meet.

Chris. I am not exclusive at all. I will receive any one that the Lord receives. And I accord with your remark, that we must stand upon catholic ground. Not one of you, gentlemen, stand upon catholic ground. The ground occupied by each of you, is exclusive, partisan, and not common. Therefore, we never can unite upon it. None believe any creed among you, but the one little party who have subscribed to it, but the great christian basis upon which Christ receives all christians, is catholic, is common, is believed by you all. Upon this basis all christians are received of God, and must be received by each other.

Pres. Gentlemen, I am not through with my difficulties, but I must leave them till we meet again.

For the Crisis.

The First Thing.

The first thing in proper prayer, after acknowledging the paternal character of our God, is, to feel and say, "Thy kingdom come; thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven."—Matt. 6: 10.

The first thing in christian morality, or New Testament precept is, "Seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness."—Matt. 6: 33.

The first thing in Christ's conversation—living manifestation of christianity—is, that "pertaining to the kingdom of God."—Acts 1: 3.

From these three grand and practical portions of truth, we learn that all religion that does not harmonize in prayer, preceptive teaching and practical, living, working faith, is so far wanting in its vital elements—so far not Christ-like. Thus easy is it to show that holy living—following Christ—is essentially prophetic. In its deepest spirit and truth it is prophetic! The very soul of our every day religion, our praying and all, has reference to God's gracious purpose relative to his future kingdom. The centre is in God and his future kingdom.

The most popular piety seems to centre mainly in self and personal ends. It is "present salvation"—(a palpable misapprehension of the subject,) or it is personal experience, comfort and approbation. But the teachings of Jesus—his example and that of his prophets and apostles—turn the mind and heart to God, and [illegible] to the kingdom that the God of heaven will set up. Amen and amen.

Thus this [illegible] form of piety, centres only in God and his glorious purpose—"in his [illegible] his kingdom."

Oh, the precious time that is lost in the grave of [illegible] [illegible]

THE WORLD'S CRISIS. WHOLE NO. 219.

BOSTON, NOVEMBER 23, 1859.

For the Crisis.

The Baptism of the Holy Ghost.

Correspondence.—No. [illegible]

My Dear Sister G.:—Who does not admire the wisdom of God in granting such a diversity of gifts to his church? Just read the 12th chapter of 1 Cor., and see how beautifully the apostle brings them forward: "Diversities of gifts," "differences of administrations," "diversities of operations, but it is the same God that worketh all in all." Did you ever notice how the three persons of the Godhead are here introduced? "Gifts" are attributed to the Spirit; "administrations" to the Lord Jesus; "operations" to God the Father. Yet all are communicated through the power of the Holy Ghost, and "to every man to profit withal." Perhaps you will ask if I believe that these "diversities of gifts," "difference of administration," and "diversities of operations," were designed to be continued in the church unto the end? If they were, why have they not existed? I might reply by asking another question:—Why has not this "gift of power," denominated the "baptism of the Holy Ghost," continued through all ages of the church to the present?

We have plainly proved from the Scriptures that it was a speciality of the "last days"—that it was "the promise of the Father," and that all "afar off," whom "the Lord our God shall call," were heirs of the promise. Why, then, has this power been at any time almost lost to the church? I am aware that one who claims any other than the ordinary manifestations of the Spirit, falls under the imputation of being a fanatic; but in view of this accusation let me ask, did it make one a fanatic to believe in the miraculous operations of the Holy Spirit, in the primitive times, or to be thus exercised by those gifts? If not, must one necessarily become one in these days, as the result of such a faith, or such an exercise?

To those who claim that miracles were given only for the confirmation of the covenant, or seven years, I would ask, Can you prove that immediately upon the termination of that week of years, they ceased, and have never been granted the church from that time to the present? The language used by the apostle, when speaking of these diversified gifts, does not at all intimate that in a few years these were to be taken from the church; and Mosheim, in his Church History, shows that miracles did exist to some extent in the fourth century. Why thus far in the history of the church, if designed only for the work of confirmation?

In the fourth chapter of Ephesians we find the apostle referring to the "gifts" bestowed when Christ ascended up on high, and to the different administrations—apostles, prophets, evangelists, pastors and teachers; for the perfecting of the saints; for the work of the ministry; for the edification of the body of Christ. How long? "Till we all come into the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ." Does not this refer to the time when the body of Christ is complete in all its members—when all have become united to Christ, who were to constitute his church, even the fulness of time, when every Jew and Gentile believer would stand complete in him? The apostle compares these different members, with their diversified offices and gifts, to the various members of the human frame, and contends that all are necessary for the comfort and use of the body, and closes his argument thus: "Now ye are the body of Christ, and members in particular. And God hath set some in the church, (members—see ver. 18; 'God hath set the members every one of them in the body,'—this is the figure,) first, apostles; secondarily, prophets; thirdly, teachers; after that, miracles, then gifts of healings, helps, governments, diversities of tongues. Are all apostles? are all prophets? are all teachers? are all workers of miracles? Have all the gifts of healing? Do all speak with tongues? Do all interpret?" Now by what authority shall we displace some of these members, sustaining some of these offices, and say unto them; "I have no need of thee?" "For seven years your gifts were necessary for the edification of the body, but it no longer needs your office."

As miracles can be traced at intervals during the history of the church unto the present time, and as the extraordinary manifestations of the Spirit have been more [illegible] whenever there has been a coming forth from the wilderness, and a returning from apostasy, why may we not [illegible] conclude that had the church always stood in the primitive simplicity and power of faith, she might have always retained her demonstrative testimony [illegible] of these divers gifts and diversities of [illegible]? Dr. Clarke, in his [illegible], says: "All these various [illegible] and the gifts and graces con[illegible] judged necessary [illegible] the church, for its [illegible] the important doctrines [illegible] and [illegible] but they do not know [illegible] and one gift, that by which he [illegible] to [illegible] The apostles, prophets, evangelists, pastors and teachers, are all commanded [illegible] many, to whom God has given nothing but the gift of exhortation, take texts to explain them; and thus lose their time and mar their ministry."

I will now, my sister, close this letter by giving you a quotation from a higher authority than Dr. Clarke, which is direct on this point. You will find it recorded in Rom. 12: 4–8; "For as we have many members in one body, and all members have not the same office; so we, being many, are one body in Christ, and every one members one of another. Having then gifts differing according to the grace that is given unto us, whether prophecy, let us prophesy according to the proportion of faith; or ministry, let us wait on our ministering; or he that teacheth, on teaching; or he that exhorteth, on exhortation; he that giveth, let him do it with simplicity; he that ruleth, with diligence; he that showeth mercy, with cheerfulness."

How harmonious the action, how edifying the improvement, how convincing the testimony, of these various gifts of the church of Christ! The means by which this should be brought about, will be considered in our next epistle.

Yours, M. D. W.

Letter from Bro. H. Munger.

Bro. Grant:—I wish to say to my friends through the Crisis, I cannot come to you as I expected. I have wrenched my back, handling logs, and cannot go a step without the help of two staves. I have been confined to the house and bed most of the time since the 14th Nov., in pain all the time. What I am going to do I do not know. I need grace and patience to endure this trial. Over forty years I have been on my legs every day but one. This is a trying time to me. The Dr. is in hopes the spine is not injured so as to cripple me long. When I can go out again, I will let my friends know it. I hope I shall have your prayers and letters.

Chicopee, Mass.

For the Crisis.

Conference in Warren Co., Ill.

This conference was held Oct. 19th, in the Christian church—known as Campbellites—that our brethren had procured for the present occasion. The house was of good size, well arranged, and occupied free of charge. May He who rewards the servant that bears a cup of water to the thirsty lips of the pilgrim, remember their kind acts. The conference was well attended, especially evenings; and on Lord's day there was a great crowd. Truth found its way to some hearts; and the interest manifested by the community was a strong evidence there were many hearts of that kind of soil in which the seed would grow. God grant that this may be the case. There were a hundred or more, I should judge, that came to the Lord's table. This speaks well for a new field. May the blessing of God go with Bro Rathburn, who first sowed the seed in this place some two years since. Baptized one happy soul.

I was glad to greet these friends. It cheered my heart to see them striving together for the coming kingdom. Bro. Chandler was present to preach the word. His eastern tour did him good, as well as myself. As I met him in Worcester, Mass., just ready to return West, "Well," said I, "Bro. C., are you paid for coming East?" "Yes," said he, "I have been abundantly paid, if I have to beg my way back." The friends remembered his wants, and he is again on the battle ground.

At this meeting I had a chance to scatter some tracts that Bro. Hastings sent on. I received from Bro H. L. H., 40,000 pages. Those sent to me I shall try to place in hands where the fruit may be seen in a future day. May the Lord's blessing attend this effort, and those kind friends East reap life eternal for their reward.

On my way to the conference in Hancock Co., I stopped over night in Galesburg with Bro. Luther Fenn. Many of the readers of the Crisis know him. He is as diligent as ever—at work at his trade. O! how I wish he was in the field, and many others that are worthy and have a gift to teach and feel called to the work, and are discouraged for want of sympathy on the part of brethren.

Brethren, we are doing ourselves and the cause of truth a great injury in not trying to help young men into the field. The idea has obtained among many—"We must have a smart man to preach for us; a young man will not do." This feeling will destroy any church; and God's curse will follow us instead of his blessing if we indulge in such feelings. Every young man of piety and talent will do good. Yes, God will bless his effort if he feels his dependence and lives a life of prayer. He will be a blessing to the church, and by encouragement and help, he being studious and living near God, will soon be able to fill any station. O that God would raise up more laborers and send them out into the wide field! and when He is burdening their hearts and they begin to feel the wo, let us not reject them.

W. [illegible]

(To be concluded.)

☞ Souls rich in grace, practice that themselves which they prescribe to others.

Our New Music Book.

By referring to the column of notices, our readers will perceive that they shortly can supply themselves with a most desirable collection of hymns and tunes, embraced in the "Christian Lyre," to be published next week. It is what the church needs, and has needed for a long time. Let every society avail themselves of the first opportunity to obtain a supply. For particulars see notice.

Errata.—In the last No. of the Crisis, in the article on "Gehenna," for "See on the Soul," read Lee, etc. Near the bottom of the column, for "How can two immortal substances meet?" how can two immaterial, etc.

A New Tract.

We purpose to issue next week a tract on the Rich Man and Lazarus, and the Thief on the Cross. This will be a tract for the times—just what our brethren need to give our opponents when they inquire, "What will you do with the Rich Man and Lazarus, and the Thief on the Cross?" Send in your orders. Price 5 cts. single—$3 per hundred; 1-4 off per dozen; postage 1 cent.

The Five Hells.

Some of our readers may stare with surprise at our heading. By "the five hells," we mean, the Pagan, Mohammedan, Catholic, Protestant, and the one mentioned in the Bible. We have considered the latter, and will now notice the other four, giving a brief description of each.

The Pagan Hell is usually described as a large, subterranean cave, the entrance to which is down a rocky and steep descent; thence through a dismal grove to a lake called Avernus, which emits vapors so poisonous as to cause the death of birds that may chance to fly over it. Beyond the lake is the entrance to hell itself, where several monsters are stationed who assist in bringing men to death. They are known by the names of Care, Sorrow, Disease, Old Age, Freights, Famines, Wants, Labor, Sleep, Death, Sting of Conscience, Force, Fraud, Strife and Fear.

At the side of the water is an old ferryman, named Charon, whose business is to take the souls across the lake. Flocks of souls appear on the shores. Those whose bodies are buried are taken across at once; the others wander about a hundred years, and are then carried over to join the rest. The souls pay a small sum to Charon, the god of this place, for being taken across the lake.

Four rivers are said to run through hell. The first is called Acheron, named from a son of Zera, born in a cave, who could not endure the light, and therefore ran down into hell, and was changed into a river of bitter water. The second is called Styx, which was more of a lake than a river. Styx was the fabled daughter of Oceanus, who was changed into the Stygian lake, by which the gods swore. The third is called Cocytus, and runs out of the Stygian lake, groaning, to imitate the howlings of the damned. The fourth river is called Phlegethon, because it has waves of fire, and all its streams are flames. After the souls have passed over all these rivers they arrive at the palace of Pluto, the god of hell. Cerebus, a dog with three heads, and hair of living snakes, guards the gate of Pluto. Satan is said to have given the infernal regions to his son Pluto, for inventing burying and funeral mourning. He sits upon a throne in the dark, holding a key instead of a sceptre, crowned with ebony, and reigns over death. The Greeks call him hades, or darkness, gloom, or melancholy. Sometimes he was called Agelatos, because he drives people to the infernal regions; Agelastos, because he refrains from laughing. He was considered the chief of the infernal deities. Pluto's queen is named Prosepine, who is with him in the infernal regions. The past, present, and future are ordered by three old women called Fates. They have unalterably fixed everything from all eternity. Life is entrusted to them. Clotho gives us life, Lachesis determines what shall befall us here, and Atropos concludes our lives.

There are also three Furies in hell, whose business is to punish the wicked, and torment the consciences of secret offenders. There is likewise an inferior god called Nox, represented as a skeleton with black wings. Another god is called Samnous, or sleep. Hell is said to have three judges, who pass sentence on the souls that go there. Kings and giants are there, who are doomed to endless existence in misery. King Phleggus burned the temple of Apollo, and is condemned to remain in hell forever, having a great stone hanging over his head, which he expects every moment will fall on him and crush him to powder. Ixion is tied fast to a wheel, which will turn him round eternally. Another is doomed to roll a great stone to the top of a hill, but it invariably slips down before he arrives at the top.

One part of Pluto's dominions is called Elysium, or region of delights. Good souls go into [illegible] part, after they are purged from their [illegible] in this world. This Elysium has all manner of pleasant things, such as shady groves, verdant fields, [illegible] breezes, and a river called Lethe, which causes forgetfulness of all former troubles, after drinking its waters.—See Took's Pantheon. p. 219, or Bible vs. Tradition, pp. 171—3.

The foregoing is but a brief description of the Pagan hell, as conjured up by demons and men, which has been re-arranged by the Catholics and Protestants; but we have found the origin of the popular, theological hell, where the souls of the righteous and wicked are said to exist in happiness or misery between death and the resurrection. The patriarchs, prophets, Jesus and the apostles, are not responsible for teaching the doctrine that hell is a place for departed souls in a conscious state. It is entirely of heathen origin, and was introduced into the church by heathen philosophers.

The Mohammedan Hell differs somewhat from the Pagan. According to the Alcoran, there will be a judgment, when all will be judged according to their works. After judgment, those who are to possess Paradise take the right hand way, those destined for hell-fire take the left. Both must pass the bridge Alsirat, which lies across the middle of hell. This bridge is finer than a hair and sharper than a sword, from which the wicked invariably fall into hell beneath. This hell has seven gates. The first for Mussulmen; the second for Christians; the third for Jews; the fourth for Sabians; the fifth for Magicians; the sixth for Pagans; the seventh and worst of all, for the hypocrites of all religions. Those in this hell will suffer a variety of unending torments; with the exception of those who have embraced the true religion; who will be delivered after they have suffered sufficiently for their crimes.—Adam's view of Religions, p. 322.

The Roman Catholic Hell is described as a place burning with fire, in which the wicked dying out of "the church," will suffer eternal torment. Like the Pagans and Mohammedans, they have a place for purifying souls, called purgatory, which they have evidently copied from the former. Mosheim says, Vol. 2, p. 38:—"The famous Pagan doctrine concerning the purification of departed souls, by means of a certain kind of fire, was more amply explained and confirmed now than it had formerly been. And in the tenth century, the people dreaded the fire of purgatory, more than they did the fire of hell; for they supposed that by being enriched with the prayers of the clergy when they were dying, they should certainly escape hell. But they were taught that if they went to purgatory, it was a matter of doubt whether they ever should be delivered from that dreadful place."

Vast sums of money have been received from poor and rich Catholics, by the Romish priesthood, to pay them for praying souls out of purgatory. Had their dupes only believed the Bible, which declares that there is no "knowledge" in sheol, hades, or state of the dead, they would not have robbed their families to pay lecherous priests for performing such silly mummery.

The Protestant Hell differs but little from the Catholic, excepting the purgatorial part is rejected; though some of the Universalists retain the Pagan idea, with this difference, they think all souls will finally be purified and join the righteous in heaven. Spiritualists have modified the Pagan hell, so as to have all improve their condition a little when they enter the "Spirit-land;" but some are in a very unhappy condition, and will remain so for a long time. The Protestant hell, like the Pagan, Mohammedan and Catholic, is founded on the doctrine of the immortality of the soul. They were obliged to invent some place to keep these souls. But soon as we admit the Bible to decide the question, it overthrows all these four hells.

The Bible Hell, (sheol) is a very different place from either of the other four. It is one of silence, total ignorance and unconsciousness—the grave—state of all the dead, without respect to character, from which they will be raised at the time appointed.

As we have examined the Bible hell in previous articles, we need not say more at this time, than to express our gratitude to the Lord, for showing us the light and truth, and giving us courage to stand up in their defence against the fables of these last days, which are throwing so many into doubt and darkness. Brethren and sisters, let us believe no theological tenets that are not clearly revealed in the Scriptures. Let us weigh all doctrines in these truthful scales. As Paul says, "Prove all things, hold fast that which is good."

Heathen Theology.

We clip the following from an article in the Amer. Presbyterian:—

"Some believe, or affect to believe, that man has no soul; but there are, alas! millions who live and act as if there were no souls to be saved. Both classes may learn a useful lesson even in the dark places of the earth: for there, where the missionary preaches Jesus Christ as the only Savior of sinful souls, the heathen priests teach their blinded followers that the soul, after it has [illegible] body, [illegible] another [illegible] and that, if any one of them has not attended to the worship of their gods, his soul will, at death, go into a deformed and tortured body, or, if [illegible] has bestowed much money on [illegible] that he shall be again born into this world rich and happy. They [illegible] soul may pass into the body of a bird, beast, or insect; and be punished in that its new state for the sins of a previous life. The very heathen, therefore, teach that man has a never-ending soul."

When we trace back the history of the immortality of the soul, we find that, "The very heathen" were, the very first who believed in this doctrine, and that the Lord and his prophets have not taught this dogma in a single case. It is very evident that it originated with Satan, who taught it to our first parents in the garden of Eden, and afterwards persuaded the heathen to believe it, and by this means instituted hero-worship or the worship of the souls of distinguished men. The whole system of heathen worship, as well as that of Catholicism, is founded on the fabulous idea, that man has an immortal soul, which is "the real man," who after he is dead can communicate with the living. Notwithstanding it is so unreasonable, unphilosophical, opposed to the laws of physiology, common sense and the whole Bible, we are called heretics for believing that a man is not alive when he is dead, and that a dead man does not know more than a living one. Well, be it so. We shall all know the truth hereafter; and we can afford to wait till the Lord comes for the vindication of his word. "Truth, though crushed to earth, will rise again."

Beecher's Progress.

It is evident that H. W. Beecher has cut loose from the Orthodox moorings, and is sailing in another direction. He speaks like one who is being satisfied that the doctrine of eternal torment is not sustained by the Bible, and our prayer is that he may be led to lift his voice in thunder tones against a doctrine so dishonoring to the Lord, which is leading thousands and tens of thousands into infidelity.

The Puritan Recorder appears to be very much troubled about Mr Beecher. It says:—

"What we have, with sad forebodings, long expected, is now realized in Mr. Beecher's open abandonment of the doctrine of the inevitable and eternal perdition of ungodly men. The secret of his fraternizing with Chapin and Parker is now fully explained in his open avowal of the main principle of Universalism—which is that all the Scriptural assertions of the sure and eternal punishment of the wicked fail to make us know that they will be thus punished."

We presume the Recorder somewhat misapprehends Mr. Beecher's position, or sets him before the public in a wrong light, where it carries the idea that he favors Universalism.

Proof of a Flood.

We copy the following interesting facts from Chapman's Principia, Vol. II, No. 5. This work, entitled "Nature's First Principles defined, and their harmony with the Bible record of the creation, the deluge, etc., philosophically vindicated," is one of interest and well adapted to these times of infidelity in which we are living. Price 50 cts. for 200 pp., 12mo. Single No. 6 cts. Address L. L. Chapman, Box 651 P. O., Philadelphia.

In proof of the proposition, "That there has been one, and but one universal deluge," he says:—

"The immense beds of oysters and other marine shells and substances which are found on the loftiest mountains of the highest elevation that man has yet been able to attain—not alone in one region, or on one continent, but in all parts of the globe, give a positive proof that the summits of those mountains were once submerged by water.

Such beds of marine deposits were found by Humboldt on the Andes more than fourteen thousand feet above the ocean's level! They are found on the summits of the Alleghanies! the Rocky mountains! the highest peaks of the Appenines! and on the towering Himalayas of Asia.

It is very evident that the atmosphere or soils of those giddy heights could not have originated those oysters and other marine productions of which these shells, etc., are remains! Therefore, the fact is positive beyond evasion, that the waters of the ocean must once have flowed over those stupendous heights! For how else could these relics, which nothing but the ocean can produce, get there?

The skeleton of a whale was found on Mount Sandhorn in Norway, at an elevation of more than three thousand feet above the present surface of his native element! A portion of another was found in Stappen, Finmark, eight hundred feet above high-water mark!

Humboldt found the bones of elephants near Bogota, in South America, some eight thousand feet above the level of the sea, and obtained others from the Andes, within a short distance of Quito!

In the Royal College of Surgeons, London, are deposited the bones of deer and of horses found in masses! which descended with the avalanches from an elevation on the Himalaya Mountains, computed at not less than sixteen thousand feet!

These animals could never have ascended the long, rugged way through the (so called) eternal snows to that lofty region where not only the intense cold, but the difficulty of breathing the rarefied atmosphere would cause speedy death to any known specimen of terrestrial animated nature!

By what means were these animals carried there? How did they get there? There is but one rational solution for the foregoing facts, and that is through the admission of a universal deluge, occurring in accordance with natural laws and in harmony with the Bible record."

There is no [illegible] attracting so much attention at the present time, as Italy; no people in which the world feels so deep an interest as the Italians. Were it not for the French troops, it is generally believed that an insurrection would have taken place in Rome years since. Napoleon now supports the harlot, but his feelings appear to be somewhat alienated at present, as he finds the Pope stands across his way to worldly glory; yet, we think he will bow to him till he is crowned by his hands, as was Napoleon I., unless the Italian reformers strike too soon for its consummation.

Garibaldi and his friends are very active in preparing for the decisive blow, when the Papal power will be rent in pieces forever. He has just addressed a proclamation to the Neapolitans, in which he says:—

"To our Brothers of Naples:—

Brothers—We have combatted the Austrians, we have fought these insolent oppressors of Italy, and we have beaten them. We have fought as Italians fight when united, and you were not with us. The shout of victory was heard in every dialect except yours, and we know your hearts beat high in the cause of the country; yes, Providence has decreed the union and alliance of our family, of this poor Italian family. Foreigners and priests labor in vain. In vain they seek to sow discord, to corrupt the hapless people whom they have divided often, and so often sold to the strangers in vain. Our brothers of the south have cleared the minds of our brothers of the north. The sons of Procedas, the Masselellos and the Pieros, have grasped the victorious band of the soldiers of Palestro and San Martino."

The Italians are now determined to have freedom from Papal rule, regardless of what it may cost. Napoleon appears, at times, to sympathize with them; and at other times with the Pope. He is in a very peculiar situation. The general belief is, that he will not allow Austria, nor any other foreign power, aside from his own troops, to interfere with the Italians in their struggle for liberty. A Paris correspondent says:—"I am assured by those usually well informed, that the French troops will leave Rome about the first of January, unless some great political changes should take place before then."

The official Giornale di Roma says:—"Many priests have quitted the country in the neighborhood of the Romagna on account of the intrigues of emissaries and in fear of disturbances."

Bonaparte has been trying to persuade the Pope to introduce some reforms, hoping thereby to quiet the Italians and keep them from destroying the Papal power, but Popes never reform. Says a London correspondent, when speaking on this subject, "As for the Pope, he cannot reform. His whole rule is rotten." Says another:—"Owing to the unbending attitude of the Pope with respect to temporal reform and his hostile position towards the liberals of the Romagna, it was thought that Garibaldi would soon head a revolution which would entirely sweep away his temporalities."

Our Tract Column.

For the Crisis.

Tracts for Sailors.

I am happy to inform those who feel interested in this work, that there is a good prospect of its being carried out. Besides donations, there come precious words of encouragement, which lift my heart in gratitude to think of what good things are in store for the seamen. I shall give extracts from a few. Here is one from Eld. J. Porter, Danville, C. E.:—

"My Bro.:—I hail with much christian pleasure your very laudable and praiseworthy undertaking in preparing to cast some bread of the right kind over the face of much neglected ocean; and enclose $2.00, one from self, and the other from Bro. H. Barnard. If the pen of Bro. Hastings be a little more limber, don't mind that, but keep your colors nailed at the mast head,—"No surrender." Agitate, agitate the churches until the end is reached. Money enough among us. Your very sincere Well-wisher."

Thank you, Bro. Porter and Bro. Barnard. I won't give her up, you may depend. Here is another, from Bro. G. S. Hastings:—

"West Winsted, Conn.

Bro Cotton:—With a thankful heart to my heavenly Father for establishing me in the present truth by the reading of his blessed word and many a tract, it becomes my heart's desire that the seamen shall also be partakers of the same blessing. I therefore enclose for that purpose one dollar, praying that God's blessing may attend your effort, and that many a sailor may stand in the kingdom of God. God speed thee!"

Another still, from "Pontiac."

"Dear Fred:—Enclosed please find two dollars for 'Tracts for Sailors!'"

Thank you, we'll win yet. Yet another:—

"New Britain, Nov. 15th, '59.

Bro. Cotton:—Enclosed you will please find $1.00 from Sister G. of N. B., for your Tract Fund, with her prayers for your success in the work you have undertaken.

Yours truly, Louisa J. Beach."

In addition to the above, I have received one dollar each from H. G. Smiley, E. Macomber, A Friend, C. Cottle, and $1.72 from J. B. Walker, Keene, N. H. My brothers and sisters, I return you thanks in the name of the sailors.

[illegible]

For the Crisis.

Travels West.

After I bade my wife and child farewell for the present, and put aboard of Nahum's [illegible] of Thompsonville, Ct., we soon found ourselves moving rapidly through the mountains and fast leaving old New England in the distance. Although in fact we [illegible] going west, railroad speed, my mind was not much inclined to leave my family, kindred and brethren, without serious reflection. That reflection, however, was soon broken by bringing up at East Albany. Here we met Br. Wendell waiting to pilot us to their dwelling. In the evening we met a faithful and devoted company at their place of worship, and enjoyed a precious season with them. This company evidently love one another. Their exhortations breathed the spirit of love and also their prayers. They were having additions to their number. They are prospering in spiritual things. They helped me on my way after a brotherly manner.

After a pleasant interview, a good night's rest, and a refreshing season in waiting on the Lord, with Bro. Wendell and family, we took cars and dashed away as usual, headed westward. Soon my native land became the subject of my thoughts again, and I was not anxious to break that connection just yet. Hence I gave my mind full latitude to my travel when East. I recalled the many meetings and happy greetings I had enjoyed; the fervent prayers and earnest exhortations I had heard; the glowing sermons, the logical reasoning, and fervent appeals made to sinners; the sympathizing hearts and warm hands; the liberal spirit; the bond of love; the angelic voices; the love feast; the sacred communion; the deep interest manifested in my efforts and welfare; the many "God bless yous" which the farewell hand and streaming eyes evidenced as something more than a mere form, and of more value than rubies. My visit was pleasant, satisfactory and profitable to me. But the parting again with relatives, brethren, co-workers and my family, was any thing but pleasant. It was breaking the heart and almost bursting the head.

I shall not soon forget the material aid for myself and family. We acknowledge it, I trust, with a grateful heart, and a blessing of God invoked upon the donors. I recall the saying of a frank spoken brother, as he handed me a bill, "Trust in God, Bro. P." I thought that was rather different teaching from what I had often heard, but it made me think it was a very substantial method. A widow,—poor of course, handed me a bill and said her little daughter wished her to give me some money. "How much?" was the mother's inquiry. "O! give Bro. P. four or five dollars." That develops a heart that grace can dwell in. God bless the child, and mother also, who in past days has remembered my wants. I have often thought she among many others I have known did too much. May such liberal souls reap a hundred fold here, and eternal life in the world to come.

I stopped in Chicago to get some of Bro. C. F. Hudson's works, but none there,—all sold. On my arrival at Earlville, I found seven letters, one from a sister C. containing $1., and an announcement of a package to be sent. I will say for the benefit of that sister and others, that Mrs. Walter Pratt's P. O. address, for the present, is Fiskdale, Mass. Mine is Earlville, Ill. This Sr. says, "I have no one to sympathize with me in the faith, but am trying to do something through the tract medium." This letter breathes a deep spirit of piety, and I have no doubt, Sr., if you keep doing, you will see the fruit of your labor. Lord bless that husband and bring him to see his fearful position. Sr., keep praying; the Lord hears prayer. Take courage and go forward. I make these remarks as the sister cannot get any communication from any other source.

If those friends in D. and in S., knew how those things they sent by me West, for certain individuals, gladdened their hearts and caused them to thank God and invoke God's grace on the donors, I have no doubt you would be doubly, yea, ten-fold paid for your sacrifice.

Bro. S. Gilman, your letter I received at Earlville. I think it quite doubtful whether I can find time to come into your region this season. If I can get any one to come I will do so. Ye who live East, and have preaching constantly and know not how to appreciate it, hear what this brother says:

"We have been here three years and have not heard an Advent sermon since we came here. We are getting very hungry, we do not know how to wait any longer. They have never had any Advent preaching here. There are a good many anxious to hear. We are the only Adventists in the place. We are sending out books, tracts and papers, and the people are getting interested and we hope we shall be remembered and God will send some of his servants this way soon."

I publish this extract that all that are interested may have a sample of the letters I am receiving in the West from those that are pleading for help. How do you think such letters make a man feel, who has any [illegible] can do a little, but I cannot fill one half of the calls. O that God would hear the cry of his people, and send forth laborers into his vineyard! Lord, help us while probation lasts! W. PRATT.

Correspondence.

From Eld. J. Porter.

BRO. GRANT:—The impression made on my mind by the Wilbraham campmeeting will last for many days to come. The forty-two tents; the sixty-four preachers; the multitude of countenances, inspired with the spirit of like precious faith; the heaven-inspired, Bible-taught truths, that were poured forth from the stand upon the thousands of deeply attentive, and listening hearers; the body of fearless but intelligent witnesses for God and an unpopular truth,—the like I never expect to see or hear on this side that day when He shall gather together his elect from the four winds of heaven. And then the harmony of the whole! Among these "odds and ends" I could see or hear of no conflict of doctrines, but the unanimous tone of feeling seemed to be, on the stand, in the tent, and among that intelligent throng—"Life alone through Christ"—"no immortality on this side the resurrection morn"—"he that hath the Son hath life"—"he that hath not the Son hath not life." I could clearly see that these blessed truths have gained a strong foot-hold in the churches; nor is it surprising; for when this is practically overlooked, or trampled in the dust, the coming of the Lord and the resurrection is of small importance.

It was to me a hallowed scene to meet so many of the heralds of the coming glory, with most of whose names only I had been acquainted through some part of the bygone seventeen years. Some I saw were sick, and others about worn out, and about all poor, and some homeless. Well, thought I, this is not the first of the Lord's experiments in choosing the weak and foolish, base and despised, things of this world to accomplish his purposes, and carry out his plans to the confusion of a scowling, Laodicean church, and an infidel age. On leaving the campground at the close of a week's acquaintance with the largest body of the most happy people I ever beheld, I felt to pray—O Wilbraham! let an unclouded sun shine on thy tented grove, until the tabernacle of the Lord be with men. Amen.

On the campground I obtained from Eld. H. L. Hastings, a faint promise that he would, some time this fall, visit Danville, C. E. And in about two weeks after, he took us by surprise; for when he stepped in, I was about as much expecting to see the man of the moon. Notwithstanding the short notice, large congregations gathered, which continued to increase. He gave seven lectures, deeply interesting to saint and sinner,—baptized two, administered the Lord's Supper, and all in forty-eight hours. Upon Bro. Hastings' talent and ability as an able minister of the New Testament, it would be useless in me to say a word, he being known throughout the churches; it was deeply regretted that he could not have continued with us over another Sabbath; but like the comet of 1848, he was scarcely well seen until he was gone; and not being familiar with the orbits of these heavenly bodies, we are unable to calculate his return.

The church in Danville numbers about forty members, well united in the "one faith," no doctrinal discord, but trying to live for the life to come. We have had to contend for our existence against a formidable host on every side. The talent, wealth, and influence of old monied institutions have been employed against us, but the Lord is on our side, and so we still live, and maintain our regular weekly meetings. We would that our traveling brethren on the other side of the line, should know that we are the sole proprietors of a spacious meeting-house that will accommodate a large congregation.

In the year '42 I entered the great temple of Truth deeply in love with its grandeur,—the coming of the Lord at hand, the resurrection of his saints, the establishment of the kingdom on the earth, and life and immortality alone through Christ at his coming, together with his promise to the seed of Abraham—to be the crowning doctrines of revelation. Since that time I have witnessed the infliction of many wounds upon the church, even in Canada,—one professed friend within her pale has done more damage than one hundred and one outside. Had we been true to the trust committed to us, we had this day been presenting an invulnerable front to the world, leaving no cause to the enemy to triumph and blaspheme. But among the variety of motive and character, with which the church has had to grapple during the last seventeen years, is one foretold in the prophetic language of Paul to the elders at Ephesus: "Of your own selves shall men arise speaking perverse things to draw away disciples after them." The love of rule in the heart of a Diotrephes (3 John 9,) always leads to the love of division; and such creatures failing to "draw with their tail," at least, the third part of the stars of heaven, would sooner blot out from the firmament every luminary that would dare to shine as brightly as their own little selves. O tell it not in Gath, publish not in Askelon, the frantic freaks of poor, weak humanity left to its own dotings. We have had our Korahs, among us; and our Dathans and Abirams have not been asleep; and although the Lord has not risen up in his displeasure and consumed these men, yet they have somehow shortly seen the end of their career among us. Paul's caution to the "puffed up" of his day is not obsolete: "Let nothing be done through strife or vain glory; but in lowliness of mind, let each esteem the other better than themselves. Look not every man on his own things (as if they were the only), but every man also on the things of others. Be not wise in your own conceits; but be ye kindly affectioned one toward another, forgiving one another, even as God for Christs' sake hath forgiven you."

Danville, C. E., Nov. 14th, 1859.

From Eld. J. Partridge.

BRO. GRANT:—I would say for the encouragement of the scattered flock, that the good Lord has wonderfully revived his work at old Richmond, Me. I came here last May, by the earnest entreaty of the brethren, to labor with them for a time; and appearances were really discouraging at first; but soon my courage increased. There were a few tried friends that have stood fast. Very few came out to hear, except the brethren, but I soon found that our company was increasing very fast. The Lord began to awaken the sinner that never had been moved before, and a deep solemnity rested on the entire community. Some of the hardest cases of backsliders have been reclaimed. I have baptized eight, and thirteen have been added to the church; and still the work is going on gloriously. Instead of a few being scattered over the house, we have it filled with attentive listeners, and sometimes we hardly know where all come from; but we can praise the Lord that he has sent out the people to hear, and that many of them have shared in the revival. Pray for us, that the work may go on. Your brother in Christ.

Richmond, Me., Oct. 23, '59.

[The above was overlooked, else it would have appeared before.—ED.]

From Ellen M. Jackman.

BRO. GRANT:—I feel desirous of expressing a few thoughts for the perusal of the "little flock," though in view of my unworthiness I have long remained silent.

I believe that the writers of a religious paper should be spiritual, living in close communion with their divine Lord; that they may be enabled to write by the direction of the Spirit, and thus feed and strengthen the church, and glorify God. Vain are the efforts of the greatest minds to comfort the humble follower of Christ, if unattended by the divine influence.

I often think of the heart-cheering communications from brethren and sisters scattered all over the land, with which the "Crisis" abounded a few years ago. They seemed to be but the ebullitions of hearts burning with the love of God, and joyful in the anticipation of the glorious advent of a Savior. All seemed desirous of expressing their thoughts on the subject, and none seemed tired of the story. The following from an old "Crisis" I think to the point. "When I read the Crisis, I feel to praise God for the Spirit and light which he has given to its writers. How soon we can see the lineaments of our Father's face in their articles, and feel assured that they are the genuine offspring of heaven, when holiness pervades the heart and prompts them to 'feed the flock.'"

And does not the light of the Bible still shine? And the prophecies, are they not fulfilling daily? Yes, truly; but how few among the mass of professed christians seem to see this. What a lack of interest in the subject of religion.

Often, as I go about from place to place, (teaching) am I led to feel that the line of demarkation between the christian and unbeliever has become dimmed, or is not drawn at all, so that it is difficult to determine who are (so called) christians and who are not.

Oh! how important that the followers of Christ arise and "trim their lamps," that their light may shine, especially those who are looking for the immediate appearing of Jesus Christ. In view of the shortness of time—the nearness of the judgment, are we all laboring as faithfully as we ought in the cause of Christ? We have but a short time to work, and oh how diligent we ought to be! How meek and humble we ought to be—"acknowledging God in all our ways;" bestowing as little thought as possible on temporal things—devoting time, talents, and means, all to the service of God.

I often feel a longing desire for more holiness of heart, and closer communion with God, that I may be enabled to fulfill my part in this life, and have an abundant entrance in the kingdom of God when Jesus comes to gather his children home.

Woodstock, N. H.

From Wm. A. Fenn.

I would say to the brethren that I have decided to remain East through the winter, and shall devote my time to the cause, as the Lord may direct. I beg an interest in the prayers of all the saints. My P. O. address is West Meriden, Ct.

From Henry F. [illegible]

BRO. GRANT:—There are but two or three of like precious faith in this vicinity; no preaching nearer than Hartford—eight miles. I am in hopes to be able to add to your list of subscribers before long. There are some here who were very bitterly opposed to our views on the Life and Death question when I came among them, but I find that their preconceived opinions are beginning to lose their power over them, and they freely acknowledge that they were not aware there was so great amount of evidence in favor of the truth. God help them to search more diligently the word of truth, is my prayer, and having become persuaded of a truth that these things are so, I hope they may have grace to fearlessly proclaim them to a perishing world.

I find that the cause of Christ here, as well as elsewhere where I go, languishes from the bigoted course that many pursue, who profess to be christians; and I am sorry to say not a few who profess to be Adventists (if I may be allowed the use of the term) are not a whit behind many whom they denounce and say all manner of evil against. I have long been, and am still, of the opinion, that if our brethren would cease to bring railing accusations against those who may happen to differ in opinion, and present the truth in all charity, much more good would be the result of our labors.

Again; spreading the truth, by the distribution of tracts, is not, in my opinion, so productive of good as it would be if done more judiciously. We should be careful in presenting truth, not to present too much at one time; and oftentimes some little tract will do more to awaken interest than volumes. People will not take the trouble to read large books many times, when they would look at small tracts, and often have their attention called to a subject, in so doing, which would not otherwise have been. May God help us to be wise as serpents and harmless as doves.

Buckland, Conn. Oct. 24, 1859.

From W. A. Morse.

BRO. GRANT:—Permit me to address a few lines through your paper to the brethren of Wisconsin, in regard to our dear Bro. Yates Higgins, Evangelist of Wisconsin, and a resident of this place. I have been personally acquainted with him and his circumstances for the past year. While the Annual Conference was in session here the first of October last, he was again appointed Evangelist for this State. I want the brethren, particularly of Wisconsin, to become acquainted with his circumstances, and if there are brethren elsewhere that can help him a little, may they do so. Bro. Higgins needs a horse and wagon.

I will now tell you how he has met his appointments in the last year. They have been from three to ten miles apart, and sometimes further. He has gone on foot through mud, rain, snow and cold. He has several times this summer, to my knowledge, traveled on Saturday, sixteen miles (after working from Monday until Friday evening) to fill appointments. I would further inform the brethren here and elsewhere that when Bro. Higgins came West a few years ago, he had over seven hundred dollars, which he has expended in traveling from place to place in proclaiming the truths of the Bible. Now, brethren, if you feel it your duty to help buy Bro. Higgins a horse and wagon, you may send what you have to spare to the Postmaster, Springville, Badaxe Co., Wisconsin, and to the Postmaster, Viroqua, Badaxe Co., Wisconsin. Some may wish to know the amount that is wanted. In my opinion, it will take about one hundred and fifty dollars.—Brethren, who will help?

Springville, Wis., Nov. 9, 1859.

Expositor please copy.

Obituary Notices.

Fell asleep in Jesus, April 4th, 1859, Sr. HOLDA PATTEN of South Wilbraham, Mass., aged eighty years, in full hope of immortality when Jesus comes.

Sister Patten was one of the salt of the earth—full of years, as well as of hope of that "better resurrection." She was the widow of the late Bro. Seth J. Patten, who died April 24, 1855, aged eighty years, and who was one of the trio who held a prayer meeting in the hollow tree at Chicopee, as noticed in Bro Munger's life. Sr. P. was one of the Lord's witnesses, ever ready to witness for Him—whose meat and drink seemed to be to do and suffer the will of the Lord. Blessed memory! We think of her as one ripe for the kingdom, as one coming to her grave as a shock of corn fully ripe. Few have I ever seen who could feed on the word of the Lord and relish their food like Sr. Patten. She was faithful to the end, exhorting others to prepare to meet her in a better land. D. D CHAFFEE.

Died, in Auburn, N. H., DEBORAH J., wife of Albert H Welsh, aged forty-two years, eleven months and nine days.

The subject of this notice professed faith in Christ when about eighteen years of age, and was baptized by Eld. H. Plummer, and united with the church. When the subject of the advent was preached by Bro. Miller and others, she embraced the doctrine.

Her health began to decline about one year ago. Six weeks before her death she took her bed, unable to assist the family more in this life. She leaves a husband and eight children to mourn her loss, but they are supported [illegible] hope of meeting her again. She [illegible] ready to welcome the servants of the Lord, and wait upon them with the solicitude of a friend.

She was carried to Derry, where, after a discourse delivered by the writer from Job 14: 14, she was interred, there to sleep until the trump of God shall sound.

J. G. SMITH.

Died, in West Alton, N. H., Nov. 6th, 1859, in consequence of an injury received the previous evening, Bro. SANBORN B. FOSS, aged about forty-five years.

He was returning from an auction, assisting a Bro. Sleeper in leading a heifer he had purchased, when, within a short distance of home, she became frightened, or from some other cause, frantic and unmanageable. Bro Foss, in the fray was thrown upon his back; the animal turning towards him, he raised his feet to prevent her coming over him; striking her in the breast, he was raised and turned completely over, bringing her whole weight, as well as his own, to bear upon his head and neck, causing a fracture in the spine, where the neck joins the back, paralyzing in a moment all below.

He was perfectly conscious, and resorted for help to Him who is a strong hold in the day of trouble. Although he regretted that he had not been more faithful in the cause of Christ in the past, yet after a season of prayer he said he felt peace, and could in this most trying position shout glory to God in the highest. He prayed several times during the twenty hours he lived after the accident, and was frequently heard to say, "My faith is strong; bless God! bless God!"

Bro. Foss experienced religion in 1843, and embraced the Advent faith, and though disappointed, he for several years was strong and unyielding in defence of the truth, but like many others, his hope deferred made the heart sick, and he lost in a measure the enjoyment and consolation of this hope. But when it was heard again—"Behold He cometh," he engaged anew in the work, and has since been a strong believer in the speedy coming of Christ and the truths connected therewith.

We had the privilege, the last Sabbath afternoon he lived, of hearing his last exhortation. Tuesday, the 8th, his mortal remains were carried to the chapel, where a large congregation assembled from this and the adjoining towns, where we had the privilege of listening to a very interesting and appropriate discourse from Eld James G. Smith, from Nahum 1: 7. A scene not easily described followed the service, while this deeply afflicted family took the parting look of their beloved friend. We then laid our dear brother down to rest till the heavens be no more.

If this notice should meet the eyes of Bro H. Munger, he will doubtless remember the impression he had while at our place last June, and the remarks he made in the chapel, there being but few present. Some one (said he) of this company will fall suddenly, the next snow will fall upon your grave, or God has not spoken by me.

"That once loved form, now cold and dead,
Each mournful thought employs,
And nature mourns her comforts fled,
And withered all her joys.

Faith looks beyond the bounds of time,
When what we now deplore
Shall rise in full immortal prime,
And bloom to fade no more."

E. FLANDERS, JR.

Gilford, Nov. 11, 1859.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

[Per Canada from Liverpool the 5th inst.]

PEACE NEGOTIATIONS.

A Paris telegram of the 4th says the French and English governments had completely agreed on a basis of the Congress which is to be held at Brussels. All that remained to be settled was the official ratification from the English government.

GREAT BRITAIN.

At no time since the Russian war had greater activity been observable than at present at the Woolwich Arsenal, in preparation of war material for the coast defenses, and for China. The fortifications at Dover are to be extended forthwith, and several batteries re-constructed.

The organization of the French army for China is considered definitely settled, and preparations at the seaports for embarkation have been already commenced.

FRANCE.

The statement is reiterated that the Pope has promised to grant the reforms recommended by the Emperor Napoleon, after the insurgents of Romagna have returned to their allegiance.

It is vaguely reported that Garibaldi, at his interview with Victor Emmanuel, at Turin, declared that Italy had been betrayed by the course of the powers since the peace, and that he would head a revolution to secure the independence of his country. The King of Sardinia protested warmly against such a proceeding.

LATEST.

ZURICH, Nov. 6. Yesterday, the French, Austrian and Sardinian Plenipotentiaries assembled in a general conference, which lasted three hours. The treaties will be signed tomorrow or Tuesday next, and the Plenipotentiaries will leave the day after.

PRAYER OF THE JEWS FOR VICTOR EMANUEL. In Leghorn, on the 7th ult., a remarkable scene took place. For the first time the Jews of that city offered up a prayer for a Christian prince, and invoked the blessing of heaven upon Victor Emanuel, King of Sardinia. The prayer was recited by Signor Roberto Funaro. At the first word the three thousand Jews present, with the exception of a few old men, rose to their feet, and remained standing until the close of the prayer, to which they all responded with an overwhelming "Amen."

The Eco d'Italia, in reporting this interesting fact, gives the text of the beautiful and touching invocation, of which the following is but an inadequate translation:—

"May that One who watches over the safety of kings, who gives dominion to princes, whose empire is from everlasting to everlasting; may He who liberated his servant David from the murderous sword, who opened a way in the sea and a sure pathway through the rushing waves; may He bless, guard, defend, protect, elevate and exalt the king elect, Victor Emanuel.

"May the King of Kings guide his footsteps, preserve his life, and shield him from all dangers and peril. May the King of Kings, in his clemency, exalt the star of his destiny, and grant him a long and peaceful reign. May the King of Kings give to him and all his counsellors and ministers power and wisdom. May this be His Divine pleasure; and let all the people say Amen."

[From the N. Y. Tribune of the 10th inst.]

Fall of a great Fiery Meteor.

A singular phenomenon was witnessed yesterday morning about 9 1-2 o'clock, in the upper part of the city, in the form of a meteor, or immense ball of fire, as it was generally termed by eye-witnesses. It is represented as having been of striking brilliancy, and in size as large as a common ball, with a tail some 30 feet in length, resembling that of a comet, which, while passing through the air, left behind a fiery trail. The appearance of so remarkable a phenomena in broad daylight, while the sun was shining from an almost cloudless sky, leaving no room for theories favoring the possibility of tracing the cause to a probable "shooting star," or similar manifestation so frequently witnessed at night, naturally created an unusual degree of excitement particularly in the upper Wards, where it was witnessed by many persons.

* * * * *

From Sergeant Clinton and others our reporter gathered the following information as to the performance of the "meteor:"

Sergeant Clinton states that he was engaged in writing at his desk, near a window in the Station-House in Eighty-sixth st., about 9 1-2 o'clock yesterday morning, when suddenly a flash of light, as from an ascending rocket, was reflected upon the desk, which caused him instantly to cast his eye from the window, when he perceived the phenomenon, in the form already described, shooting in a direction from the north-east to the south-west, which instantly disappeared, apparently striking the earth some 200 yards from the Station-House. Officers Cavanah and Wright, who were within a few feet of the Station-House at the moment, also saw the meteor, the appearance of which struck them so forcibly with amazement as to cause them to alarm others who were within the building, but who, of course, did not perceive it, owing to its sudden disappearance.

The officers who, to the number of four or five, went in search of the spot where the meteor was supposed to have fallen, state that the excitement among the residents of that neighborhood, many of whom witnessed the occurrence, was very great, and that it was impossible to arrive at any correct conclusion as to the precise place where it fell, from the conflicting accounts given on that point. Mr C H Reed, acting in the employ of the Commissioners of the New Reservoir, states that he was at the pier foot of Ninety-first street, E. R, unloading lumber, when his attention was attracted by the singular appearance of a ball of fire shooting swiftly through the air, apparently in an E S E direction. He called the attention of the workmen to it, who appeared to be struck speechless with wonderment. Officer Flynn of the Central Park Police states that he was patroling the "promenade" within the Park at the time, when he perceived what appeared to him to be a ball of fire having a long tail like a comet. He says he saw it disappear behind the trees, but thinks it fell within the Park inclosure. John Berry, one of the laborers in the Park, confirms the above statements as to the appearance of the object and the time specified.

Louis Napoleon, it is rumored, has recently had another and most violent attack of that nervous disarrangement, which has been so frequently spoken of, and which, it is feared, will, sooner or later, make him a confirmed maniac.

The first Arab newspaper ever published in the Turkish empire, and out of Constantinople, has been commenced at Beyrout.

Notices, &c.

Providence permitting, I will commence a series of meetings at Seneca Falls, N. Y., Tuesday evening, Nov. 22d, to continue one week or more. MILES GRANT.

Providence permitting, I may be expected to be with the Church in Abington, Ct., (where Bro. Huntington may appoint) on Lord's day, Nov. 27th. S. S. BREWER.

The Christian Lyre.

This long expected book is now done, and will be published next week. It will be found, on examination, to be a very valuable book. The music and the hymns are excellent. There are about 300 tunes, and between five and six hundred hymns, besides chants and anthems. Our brethren will be well paid for patient waiting, in the long delay. Orders are now solicited. Price, retail 60 cts., postage 8 cts., six copies $3 00, 25 per cent. off for any greater number.

Address MILES GRANT, Crisis office, 167 Hanover Street.

Pulpit Notice.

Bro. Edwin Burnham has taken the entire charge of the pulpit in the "Advent Chapel" at Portsmouth, N. H., for the present, and therefore, all who wish to correspond in relation to that matter, must do so with him at Newburyport, Mass.

In behalf of the church, E. B.

Conference.

There will be a conference in Wilton, Iowa, or where the brethren in that vicinity may think best, commencing Wednesday, Dec. 21st, (eve.) and continue over the following Lord's day. Let there be a general gathering. WALTER PRATT.

Conference

In Earlville, Ill., will commence on Wednesday, Jan. 4th, 1860, and continue over the Lord's day following. One and all, come and pray the Lord to give us a feast. W. PRATT.

☞ I will hold a conference in Elizabeth, Joe Davis Co., Ill., Wednesday, Jan. 18th, and continue over Lord's day following. The brethren must write me if they wish the above named meeting, and name where (what depot) they will meet me. Direct Muscatine, Iowa, care of J. Covell.

WALTER PRATT.

Notice.

There will be a quarterly meeting in Earlville, Lazelle Co., Ill., to commence Wednesday, Dec. 14th, 1859, in the evening, and continue over Sunday. We hope the church in that district will be well represented. We give a general invitation to all the preachers in that region to attend. It is expected that Bro. Walter Pratt will be there without fail, and the friends wish Bro. John Howell to be there. In behalf of the friends,

MOSES CHANDLER.

Notice.

There will be a quarterly conference holden (if the Lord will) at Marble Rock, Floyd Co., Iowa, to commence Friday evening, before the fourth Sunday in November.

FRANK S. W. DARO, Evangelist.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Bro., this it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

Bro. W. S. Campbell will preach in Boston (Chapman Hall)....Nov. 27th

The Lord willing, I will preach at Scitico....Nov. 27th
Waterbury....Nov. 30th
Harwinton (Bro. Elliot's district,)....Dec. 1st
Litchfield Station....Dec. 2nd
(where Bro. G. Humphreyville may appoint.)
Newfield....Dec. 4th
Pleasant Valley....Dec. 6th
Wolcottville....Dec. 7th
Plymouth Hollow....Dec. 11th
L. S. LUDINGTON.

Eld. Frank Burr appoints to preach in North Canton, Ct....Nov. 27th

God willing, I intend to preach in Portland the last Sabbath in this month. JOHN COUCH.

Wm. B. Davis appoints to preach in
Amherst, Mass....Nov. 18th
North Dana....Nov. 26th
North Dana Village, (Bro. G. A. Streeter's) Nov. 27th
Athol....Nov. 30th
Northfield....Dec. 4th

Bro. Joseph Gregory will meet with the brethren and sisters in
Middlebury, Ct....Nov. 25th
West Cheshire....Nov. 28th
(where Bro. Mix may appoint.)
Morris....Nov. 30th
(where Bro. Canfield may appoint.)
Roxbury, Ct....Dec. 3d
Wauramaug....Dec. 6th

Business Matters.

To Correspondents.

Bro. S. G. Mathewson's P. O. address is Sandy Hill, N. Y.

A. H. Eastwood.—We cannot obtain the book for you.

F. S. Blake.—All right.

J. Brown, Cranberry Creek.—All right.

The money credited to P. A. White last week, should have been cr. to P. A. Smith.

M. C. Allen.—The "Lines" were overlooked.

Cash Receipts.

Preachers' Aid Society.—A Sister, $5.00. To Nov. 22d, $85.00.

J Eaton 276, $1.66, L C Thomas, p. p. 234, $1.66, H M Thomas 234, p. p. 234, $1.31; J Whitman 222, 60 cts, J P Saunders 234, $1.32; J C Pettingell 234, $1.50, Mrs. G A Webb $2.50.

E C Gordon 230, R Sturtevant 241, J C Works 230,—50 cts. each.

I Newcomb 218, Alng Smith 242, G Hall 225, Mrs. J P Darling 234, S Shaw 211, D Lawrence 237, E M Freeman 243, J M Clellan 235, p. p., G B Lawrence 242, J West 182, J M Miner 242, E C Field 208, E Melcher 274, C York 223, B B Hoyt 238, Mrs. H. Johnson 208, Mrs. S Witherell 215, G W Barnes 242, W H Hill 243, H W Dann 242, J R Huntley, p. p., 206, Mrs. K O Temple 228,—$1.00 each.

A S Barber 236, S Tucker 260, E Pond 248, T J Philbrook 244, S Rollins, p. p. 222, Jno. Brown 260, M Rand 270, Mrs. N Furber 260, T P Hodgdon 234, G Gould 234, J Wait 234, E Miller 247, L S Rand 234, T Lee 234, L McDuffee 234, Mrs. H T Mesher 182,—$2.00 each.

T Carpenter 244, G W Johnson 248,—$3.00 each.

Books and Tracts,—J Eaton 34 cts, A P Allen $3.00, T A Lawton $3.24, L C Thomas $1.03, B Wilson $2.00, J Whitman 40 cts, R Sturtevant 50 cts, G W Barnes 24 cts, G T Collins $2.00.

Books and Tracts.

LAW requires all transient publications shall be pre-paid, hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on TRACTS is only one half cent per ounce, if sent in packages of eight ounces or more, books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for ANY of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the CRISIS, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

THE SOUL—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words nephesh and psuche as employed in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant, Boston. 32 pp., 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred: postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. They weigh about one ounce each. A valuable tract for the times. Get one.

THE SPIRIT—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words ruach and pneuma as found in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant. 32 pp.; price 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. A valuable aid in the study of the Scriptures.

The Parable of the Rich Man and Lazarus; does it imply eternal future suffering? By C. F. Hudson. 24 pp. Price, 3 cts. single. $2.00 per hundred.

The Doctrine of Everlasting Punishment: a discussion of the question, "Do the Scriptures teach the doctrine of the eternal conscious suffering of the wicked?" Between Dr. J. Litch and Eld. Miles Grant. Price, single, 25 cts. Postage 8 cts. 1-4 off per dozen.

What is Man? A Bible view of his creation. The meaning of soul, spirit, death and hell, by Miles Grant. Price, single copy 5 cts; $3.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

"The Speechless Guest at the Marriage Feast," by John F. Cotton, being a short review of the parable, with statistical remarks of its illustration in the destruction of Jerusalem; and its positive negation of the doctrine of election and reprobation. Price 5 cts. single, postage 1 ct. $3.00 per hundred.

ANTI-ETERNAL TORMENT. By Edwin Burnham. Price 1 cent, single; 75 cts. per hundred. Postage 1 ct.

Death not Life: or the Destruction of the Wicked scripturally Established. By J. Blain, Baptist minister. Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cents single; postage 3 cents. Bound, 40 cents; postage 8 cents.

Church Debts. By W. Ramsey, D. D. A rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cts—postage 8 cts.

The Rights of Wrong, or, Is Evil Eternal? By C. F. Hudson. Price 5 cts. single. 5 copies for 20 cts. Mailed post paid. $3.00 per hundred. Sold by G. W. Young, 128 William St., New York; Truman and Spofford, Cincinnati; and S. C. Griggs & Co, Chicago.

The Harp: a selection of sacred hymns, designed for public and private worship. Published by J. V. Himes. Price 60 cts., postage 8 cts. 1-4 off per dozen. [illegible]

Cruden's Condensed Concordance. [illegible] $1.50.

[illegible] 5 cts. single; [illegible]

Words of [illegible] postage [illegible]

English, Hebrew [illegible] ments so that we can [illegible] than they can be [illegible]

Life and Religious Experience of [illegible] Munger, including [illegible] connected with [illegible] ten by himself. [illegible] and will be read with interest by all. Price [illegible]—postage 10 cents.

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed; or Christ the promised Messiah. By Mrs. MARY A. SEYMOUR. An excellent tract to [illegible] the Scriptures, and upon the [illegible] day. Every one should have a copy. Price [illegible] per hundred,—5 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

200 Stories for Children, compiled by T. M. Preble. An excellent collection of interesting incidents, well calculated to benefit the [illegible]. Price 40 cents; postage 7 cents.

FOSTER'S LETTER AND TRACT ON [illegible], $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

SON OF GOD, by H. Grew, 10 cents single; postage 1 cent.

The Saints' Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Gennesee, N. Y. Price $1., postage paid.

AN APPEAL TO PIOUS TRINITARIANS. By H. Grew. Price 3 cts., postage 1 ct.

THE SAINTS' INHERITANCE, by Wm. Shepherd.—A good tract to give your neighbor. Price $3.00 per hundred, 5 cts. single. Postage 1 ct.

The Wicked not Immortal. Two hundred texts quoted to prove the destruction of the wicked. By Eld. Jacob Blain. Price 1 cent single; $1.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

The Great Error Exposed; or, Endless Misery not a Bible Doctrine. In this tract all texts relied on to prove endless misery are explained, and two hundred for destruction quoted. By Eld. Jacob Blain. Price 2 cents single; $2.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

WE ALSO HAVE THE FOLLOWING WORKS, PUBLISHED AND FOR SALE BY H. L. HASTINGS, Providence, R. I.

1.—The Voice of the Church on the Coming and Kingdom of the Redeemer, or a history of the Reign of Christ on Earth, by D. T. Taylor, edited with a preface, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. 12mo. pp. 420, price $1, postage 18 cents.

2.—The Great Controversy between God and Man. Its origin, progress and termination, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. pp. 167, neatly bound in cloth, price 60 cents—postage 10c.

3.—Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion, and a Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. Edited with a preface, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. 12mo. pp. 123. Price, in paper covers, 30 cts.—postage 3 cts; cloth gilt, 40 cts.—pos. 6 cts.

4.—The Fate of Infidelity: or the Dealings of Providence with Modern Infidels; together with an appendix, containing a brief account of the special judgments visited upon the early opposers of Christianity; by a converted infidel. 1 vol. 18mo. pp. 175, cloth gilt, 25 cents—post-paid.

5.—Future Punishment: an Argument in two parts, from Reason and Scripture, by H. H. Dobney, Baptist minister of England; with an appendix on the State of the Dead, by John Milton. This work is one of patient thought and calm and christian argument. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 312, price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

6.—Debt and Grace: or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C. F. Hudson. A most learned and valuable work, exhibiting great candor, ability and research, containing quotations from some four hundred writers of all ages and languages, and showing conclusively that eternal life is the peculiar privilege of the believer in Jesus Christ. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 480, price $1.25—post paid.

7.—Pauline Theology: or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. A convincing argument, deduced from a careful examination of every passage on the subject of Future Punishment in Paul's fourteen epistles. 12mo. pp. 84, 15 cts. single, $10 per hund.—post. 1c.

8.—The Old Paths: or the Primitive Doctrine of a Future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolic fathers, with arguments and remarks, by H. L. Hastings. pp. 87 12mo. 18 cts. single, $12 per hundred—post. 1c.

Important Questions—3 Nos., 4 pp. each. Price, per sett, 3 cts. single; $1.50 per hundred.

Fables of Infidelity, and Facts of Faith. By R. Patterson. 12mo. Price, postpaid, 75 cts; 50 per dozen.

Tracts on Prophecy. (bound,) 224 pp. Price, postpaid, 60 cts.

Tracts on Immortality, (bound,) 228 pp. Price, postpaid, 60 cts. Both volumes mailed for $1.

Tracts of 24 pages. Price, 5 cts. single copy; $3 per hundred: postage 1 ct. each, or half a cent per ounce if ordered to the amount of eight ounces or upwards.

1—Church not in Darkness; 2—The Three Worlds; 3—The Last Days; 4—Plain Truths, by Hastings; 5—Noah, his Age and Ours; 6—Desire of all Nations; 7—It is Done; by [illegible] 8—A Voice of Warning; 9—New Heavens and Earth; by D. T. Taylor. 10—[illegible] 11—State of the Dead, by Milton. 12—[illegible] diate State; by Grew.

Tracts at 3 cents single copy; $1.50 per hundred: postage 1 ct. each, or half cent an ounce for packages of eight or more ounces.

1—Future Punishment; by Grew. 2—Scripture texts [illegible] 3—Outline of the coast of Man; by [illegible] 4—Key of Truth; [illegible] —5 Olive Leaves, by the [illegible]

Tracts at 2 cents single copy; $1 per hundred.

1—The Night Cometh; by J. Adey. 2—The Day of Judgment; by St. Cyril.

Tracts at 1 cent single copy; 50 cents per hundred.

1—Olive Leaves, separate; 2—Ancient Landmarks, separate; 3—Forty Questions on Immortality; 4—Scripture Searchers, one, two, three, four, five and six.

The above Tracts are on hand, [illegible] ders can be filled at once. [illegible] Orders with the CASH are solicited. [illegible] ing tracts should order as much [illegible] cents worth, as packages of tracts [illegible] ounces or more go cheaper than [illegible] Those who buy books to sell will [illegible] liberal discount. The poor can have them, free, by sending stamps to pay the postage,—and these that FEEL poor also.

Address H. L. HASTINGS, Providence, R. I.

For sale also by N. Branch, [illegible] G. W. Young, 128 William street N. Y.

* The Landmarks are [illegible] which can be [illegible] contains, The Coming, and Kingdom of Christ; [illegible] 20,000 Baptists; the Duration of the [illegible] Clarke; Hope and Duty of the [illegible] Restitution, by Cyril; [illegible] Mother; Loving Christ; [illegible]

† The Olive Leaves are [illegible] that can be [illegible] Little Children, Love one Another [illegible] Resting Place; three, My Friend [illegible] Love; five, Abundant Grace [illegible] classes of saints and sinners.

Glad Tidings: or [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible]

O, though oft depressed and weary,
As we travel on our way,
Let us look beyond the shadows
To a fairer, brighter day;

For each heavy load and burden,
With our pilgrim staff and band,
Shall be laid aside forever
When we gain the promised land.

CHORUS.

Then we 'll rally to the standard,
To the standard of the cross,
Fearing neither toil nor sorrow,
Fearing neither death nor loss.

Onward then, for still above us
Love's sweet star doth fondly glow,
And the silver ray-light guiding,
Let us ever fearless go.

What though countless foes assail us,
And our hearts are sore oppressed,
Faith shall guide us to the haven
Where the weary are at rest.

For within our bosoms glowing,
Visions of the future lay,
Like fair islets softly pictured
In the bosom of a bay.

O, what wondrous trees are waving
In the soft, ambrosial air!
Vines with blossoms ever laden,
Bowers of roses strangely fair

Crystal rivers gently winding
Over beds of pearl and gold,
Countless gems beneath them lying
Richer than our diamonds old.

Sparkling fountains, crowned with lilies
Bending o'er the mossy brink,—
Lovely angels seem to whisper—
"Weary pilgrim, come and drink."

Then the music—list, we hear it
Stealing from a cherub band,
Anthem strains and choral numbers—
Onward, brethren, heart and hand!

E. S. M.

Correspondence.

From Eld. S. S. Brewer.

Through the mercy of God I am spared in this land of the dead and dying. O how grief-stricken my heart frequently becomes, as I review the mutations of time! 'Tis but as yesterday, since my ears were charmed, and my heart made to rejoice, with the gladly solemn sound —Behold the Bridegroom cometh! Never so sweet melody broke on the ears of the lover of the Son of Jesse, as this sound. O the precious truths! O the shining light! Pouring the oil of gladness into the hearts of many a sin-sick soul; as that trembling old man, the Low Hampton farmer, poured forth those precious pearls, sparkling and radiant with light, from the mine of God's revelation to poor mortals in this vale of weeping and lamentation.

My heart saddens. And although I anticipate the soon return of the Life-Giver, with the keys of death and the grave, the tears will course down my cheeks, now furrowed with time, as I retrospect the ravages of death amid the ranks of those who nobly stood and nobly dared, on the grand and glorious dispensational proclamation—Behold He cometh! Sweetly sleeping, quietly resting in Jesus,—gone, gone from scenes, sights and circumstances that cause weeping, sadness, and sorrow of heart,—your work is done; and, I trust in God, well done. Your night of weeping is past, and your morn of joy cometh speedily. Amen. Even so, come, Lord Jesus!

How multifarious the scenes and circumstances of this life! Our days are as an hand's breadth. It seems but a few days, when father, mother, brothers and schoolmates, were around me, with cheerful voices and smiling faces. Alas! where are they now? Gone, gone, all gone. I visit the scenes of my boyhood, I survey the once happy spot where our voices made the welkin ring with our merry urchin shout; the old familiar brook still flows over its pebbly bottom; the same little rill falls in gentle murmurs; the old crooked beech yet leans over the margin of the stream; but the storms have riven its branches, the moss covers its trunk; and there it stands, like an aged sire, whose tender branches have been torn away by death, and he, hoary with age, awaits the hour that lays his aged limbs to rest. I inquire for old friends and neighbors. Dead. Where are my schoolmates? Some lost in the deep, others sleep in the graveyard; the rest moved West. Father, mother, brothers—dead!

"I feel like one who treads alone,
Some banquet hall deserted!"

If I survey nature, it is now sad and mournful. How short is spring-time and summer! Yesterday, it seems, the little spring bird, perched on the leafless bough, broke the dull monotony of dread winter, and warbled his matin in sweetest strains. Soon the garniture of midsummer appeared; and floral beauties, in all their variegated tints and colors, threw their fragrance to the mild breeze of heaven. Farewell, ye pleasant scenes and beauties, ye are fled forever! The rude breath of chill autumn, like an angel of death, has laid them dry and withered on the ground. The hollow winds, now sighing through the leafless branches, and yet a strain from the feathered choir falls on the ear. Truly, all is fading—[illegible]

[illegible] my soul, for God's goodness, long-suffering and mercy to me.

I have had much reason of late as well as in past years, to praise God for his sustaining grace and his goodness in making his word effectual in the awakening of many precious souls, to realize their danger and the remedy. During the past season I have visited many places, seen some baptised, and baptized some. Our meeting at Pawlings was a season of deep interest to many. Bro. Munn baptized two, and when we parted, I was informed that several were under awakening. The result will be manifest at the reckoning day. Bro. Munn's labors have been signally owned and blessed of God in that region, and the work is still spreading in new places. On Wednesday, Oct. 2, I parted with those dear Brn. Munn and Goodrich; and may God bless them and the friends at Pawlings.

My faith is unwavering in the great advent movement. O my heart says, praise the Lord! We shall soon see the King in his beauty, and all the beautiful ones he will bring with him. I am thankful I heard, embraced, loved, held on, and still love and hold on to this come-out and stay-out, distinguishing truth of the soon coming of Jesus, and of no immortality out of Christ the Life Giver.

South Glastenbury, Ct. Nov. 11th, 1859.

From Eld. J. Blain.

BRO GRANT:—For the encouragement of brethren who are laboring to spread truth, I send some extracts from letters lately sent me by a Methodist minister in Indiana. They also afford an item of proof of what I have long proclaimed, namely, that the churches are going, with giant strides, into secret restorationism; and so our reform, as to the life and death question, is of more importance than many feel it to be who believe the doctrine. This is one of the reasons why I so often dwell on the comparative importance of this point, and though often told that I make it too prominent, I must yet believe that the time will soon come when brethren will see that I have not erred in my general course, except in some cases where circumstances called for more preaching on other subjects. I trust that experience has taught me to judge better in this respect, and I am happy to see that experience is also learning brethren, though I fear too slowly, that this subject should not be put in the back ground, or made a point of secondary importance in our day—we may meet on union ground by and by. But to said extracts:—

"BRO. BLAIN:—I have seen and read your book called Death not Life, and will you be so good as to send me a copy, and also inform me what those other works are to which you refer in one of your tracts, as for sale at No. 19 North Division St.

It is high time that people were more thoughtful in reference to this great subject. Too long already have they been blinded by the mass of our learned preachers, who are making such hosts of secret infidels by their terrific painting of endless woe. I have sat and heard them tell of the groans, and shrieks, and suffering of the damned in hell, until my hair would almost stand up, and I would secretly ask myself—'Is it possible that God, who is just and merciful, will create beings, and then shut them up and keep them eternally in burnings such as they describe?' My heart sickens at the thought, and with the Bible before me I cannot believe he will. It seems to me that those preachers have never fathomed the depth of meaning contained in the word eternity, else they would be more careful in reference to their assertions.

For my own part, I could not believe the doctrine of endless woe, hence I was secretly a Restorationist until I read your work, which teaches quite another doctrine. That sin and evil would finally be destroyed I firmly believed, and I believed, as I believe yet, that God will be worshiped by the whole intelligent creation. May you and I be numbered with those whom Christ shall 'raise up at the last day.'

P. S. Are there any periodicals published in the U. S. that advocate destruction? If so, will you give me their address, that I may subscribe? [I sent him copies of the Crisis and Expositor.]

Yours truly, G. W. GREEN.
Memphis, Clark Co., Ind., Aug. 25th, 1859."

In a letter in Oct. he says:—"My license has been discontinued, and I am discarded by the officials, but silenced never! I will obey God and not man. He has told me in his word what to preach, and if it DOES conflict with the darling theories of men, I shall preach it."

Will the Expositor please copy?

From H. J. Brown.

I love the "Crisis" more and more every week; and when I read the messages from God's dear children, their words of comfort and exhortation, I feel a great desire to give in my testimony with theirs for the same Jesus and the same truth. I want to tell them and you what the Wilbraham campmeeting has done for me. I went there with almost no faith in, and love for, Christ, but with some desire to get good, and desirous to know the truth. God blessed me there, and sent me away satisfied that the peculiar doctrines which you teach are His own truth, and taught in his holy word.

I cannot quite agree with our good Bro. B., who thinks campmeetings are sickly places, for I am sure it proved very different to me. I went up sick in [illegible] and [illegible]

Those love feasts and class meetings took me up to Pisgah's top. I looked down from thence, and saw how little the world really was, and how poor and small all the good opinions of men were; and from that mountain top I had a good fair view of the promised land, glorious in its unfading beauty. I had tried to look before, but I thought much of my good name and good standing in the church, and I was so afraid of being called a Millerite, that I did not dare look at its being near. And then how good it was to be buried with Christ in baptism. I have not lost, and I hope I never may lose, the peace and joy which came to me through that act of obedience.

For a long time I have been in the waters of doubt and unbelief, and all their billows seemed to roll over me; but these waters of baptism washed away my doubts and, I trust, my false pride, which has kept me away from the truth so long. My experience since accords with my feeling that Jesus accepted the consecration which I made.

My desire for Christ to come, and my hope that he is near, grows stronger every day; and although christians doubt and forget it, and the wicked laugh at it, yet it is to me a hope which strengthens to overcome easily besetting sins, and bear with patience life's burdens.

I cannot close my already too long letter without mentioning my great pleasure and surprise to see how much christians loved one another. How often my eyes fill when I think of the warm hands clasping mine, and the good faces which seemed to bear on them the impress of the spirit of peace. I went up, I thought, a stranger, and I found it to be a family gathering, and more than that, they were my brothers and sisters. And when our Lord comes, what a gathering there will be, and what a mighty shout will go up from all God's ransomed hosts! May God bless all his waiting ones, and help them to hold out faithful, and may he bless you, Bro. Grant, and may you have many stars in your crown of rejoicing in that day. From your unworthy sister.

Essex, Ct., Oct. 23d, 1859.

From Eld. Wm. Sweet.

BRO. GRANT:—I wish to say through the columns of the Crisis, I had the pleasure of attending one of the best religious meetings that I have enjoyed since I came to this state. It commenced on the 6th of this month, at Springville, Badaxe Co., Wisconsin, and continued over Sunday. A solemn spirit prevailed during the deliberations of the conference, as the Minutes will show. The preachers proclaimed the solemn truths of the gospel with energy and power; saints wept and rejoiced in the blessed hope of future salvation from death and the grave, when Jesus comes to finish the work of our salvation. I think the exhortations were calculated to stir up the lukewarm professors to duty, convict sinners, and do away with prejudice. The influence of this conference will be good, not only in S., but the vicinity will hereafter reap some of its fruit. My prayer is, O Lord, revive thy work in this State!

I feel more like going out into the world as an evangelist to preach the word of life to dying men than ever I did before, but, like others here, am poor as to this world's goods; the times are hard, money scarce, (we raise our edibles) and it costs a great deal to purchase clothing for a long, cold winter. I presume if the wealthy brethren East were aware of our destitute condition, they would cheerfully do for us in this matter.

Elder Teeple has promised to come into this county in about four weeks to stop and hold meetings, if the Lord will. He is poor, yet willing to do all he can to advance the Gospel. I intend to gird on the gospel sword and go out with him to help plant the standard in some fresh field.

Utica, Wis.

From A. G. Hudson.

BRO GRANT:—In the 145th Psalm and 20th verse I read, "The Lord preserveth all them that love him, but all the wicked will he destroy;" and I have come to the conclusion that David told the truth. I find by an examination of the Scripture that God proposes to preserve those, and those only, who love him, and if this is so, what power is sufficient to preserve the wicked either in happiness or misery? If it is in God that we live, move and have our being, and by him only that we are sustained, when that sustaining power is withdrawn, shall we continue to exist? To me this seems to be an important question; and I think David answers it in the 37th Psalm at the 10th verse: "For yet a little while and the wicked shall not be;" that is to say, they shall not exist.

This language appears to be very plain; yet there is a class of persons who propose to amend this language of David so that it will read—"But all wickedness will he destroy." Then there is another class who propose a substitute for this amendment, so that it shall read—"But all the happiness of the wicked will he destroy."

Now, sir, I rise to a point of order, and it is this: if I am not mistaken, the great constitution which we adopt when we make a profession of christianity, is not subject to amendment; and this point is settled in Rev. 22: 18, 19. Therefore, I think [illegible] reads. Does not the Savior teach the same when he says, "Gather ye together first the tares and bind them in bundles to burn them; but gather the wheat into my barn?"

"He that hath ears to hear let him hear."

Florence, Minn.

From Clarissa Brayton.

BRO. GRANT:—I am truly thankful to you for your kindness in sending me the "Crisis;" it is a welcome visitor to my lonely dwelling. It always gladdens my heart to hear from those who are trying to do the will of my Father. I have no privilege of meeting with those who love to pray. We have no preaching. I have not heard but one sermon since last April.

My prayer is that God will bless you, and those dear brothers and sisters who write from week to week, with wisdom and understanding in those great truths contained in the Bible. But all this is poor recompense for the paper; yet it is all that I can do. I am the same poor widow, and know not how I am to provide for my five little ones this winter; yet Father has always provided, I have his promise still. Pray for me, that I may be counted worthy of eternal life when Jesus comes.

Chateaugay, N. Y., Nov. 1st.

Selected by a Friend.

Stanzas.

In God's most holy word I find
Truths far too deep for finite mind
To fathom or explore
Truths that with utmost stretch of thought
I cannot reach, for they are fraught
With more than human lore.

There I am told this world was made,
Its vast foundations firmly laid
By God's almighty hand.
He spake—'t was done—creation's plan
Was finished, and was made for man,
Who lived at God's command

And what is man? A body, soul,
But ah! we know not yet the whole
Of what man is to be
Once spotless, pure, his Maker's breath—
Now sinful, guilty, doomed to death—
And yet he may be free.

And what is God? A spirit pure,
Has ever been, and will endure
When time shall be no more.
The great "I AM" proclaims his name—
Mortal, veil now thine eyes with shame,
And wonder and adore.

But there are truths revealed so plain,
That all who read may light obtain
To find the narrow way
The way that points to endless life,
That saves from sorrow, sin and strife,
And leads to cloudless day

Christ is the way, the life, the light,
His Spirit seals the truth aright
Upon our guilty hearts
Reveals a Father reconciled,
Changes a rebel to a child,
And joy and peace imparts.

Revealed truth, my soul, embrace,
And love and serve the God of grace,
Who saves from death and hell.
And when I reach the world of bliss,
I then shall see what's dark in this,
And know that all is well

Selections.

Rules for Moral Warfare.

The following passage is from Rev. T. L. Cuyler's late discourse on "Decisive Battles."

A simple "yes," or an emphatic "no," may cost you a fortune—may cost you a troop of friends—may cost your political promotion—may cost you your character—may cost you your soul! How many a public man has had his whole career decided by his course in some trying emergency, or on some one great question of right. He is led up into the mount of temptation where some gigantic iniquity bids him bow down and worship it, and promises in return "all the world and the glory thereof." From that mount of trial he comes down a hero or a fool. The die is cast. If he has honored justice and truth, then justice and truth will honor him; if not, his bones will be left bleaching on the road to a promotion he can never reach.

That was a hard struggle for Nathaniel Ripley Cobb of Boston, when he decided to accumulate no more than $50,000 during his life, and to give all the surplus to the treasury of the Lord. But after the noble resolution was once taken, selfishness was a conquered lust in that man's breast forever. He had come off more than conqueror. How many a minister of Christ has been charged upon and overcome by this accursed spirit of "worldly wisdom!" He was put to the decisive test, not in Nero's judgment hall, or before Agrippa's tribunal, not before a Popish inquisitor, or in sight of Smithfield's fires of martyrdom. But in his quiet study, when some timid friend counseled a treacherous silence in his pulpit on some vital question of right, his "yes," or his "no," has either called from his Master the precious benediction, "Well done, good and faithful servant," or else the fearful anathema, "Ye were ashamed of me and of my truth, and of thee will I be ashamed before my Father and his holy angels!" We have all our moral Marengos and our Waterloos, where we win or lose the crown of christian character. When these decisive conflicts come on between our conscience on the one hand, and some selfish scheme or satanic iniquity on the other, then try to remember a few simple rules of moral war.

1. Never change your position in sight of an enemy. This was a fatal policy to the allies at Austerlitz. It has cost many a disgraceful defeat in spiritual warfare.

2. Never place on guard a doubtful or a questionable principle. Your sentinel will be sure to betray you.

3. Never abandon the high ground of right for the low lands of expediency. Before you are aware, you will be swamped in the bottomless morass of ruin.

4. Get your moral aim [illegible] God's [illegible] fatal weapon of the foe. Achilles was wounded through the joints of his harness. Do not mind blows in the face. Heroes are wounded in the face; cowards in the back.

5. But whether wounded by foes or deserted by friends, never surrender. It is said that not one of the old Imperial Guard survived the wreck of Waterloo. Toward the sunset of that long, bloody day, when the surviving remnant of the Guards was summoned to lay down their arms, the scarred veterans of fifty victorious fights cried out, "The old guards can die; but they never learned to surrender!" The glorious CAPTAIN of our salvation could die for us; but he could not desert us. Blessed is he who is found faithful! He shall wear the crown of amaranth in the paradise of God.

Trust in God—Fear Not.

Pilgrim, why so sad? What throws its darkening shade across thy path, that was once as the shining light? What clouds thy countenance, that was once beaming with the smile of hope? What dims thine eye, that once sparkled like a well-spring of joy? Perhaps the power of the fierce tempter is exerted for thy overthrow and discomfiture. Turn we then for consolation to the unfailing promises of the Lord Most High. Hark! "Blessed is the man that endureth temptation; for when he is tried, he shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord has promised to them that love him."

Perhaps the finger of the scornful singles you out. Perhaps the pen of a foe, dipped in wormwood and in gall, is drawn across thy name. Perhaps the sharp arrows of the wicked, "even bitter words," are poured forth upon you from the secret place of the ungodly. Perhaps the tongue of the slanderer and the backbiter, unbridled, full of deadly poison, set on fire of hell, pours forth upon you the viper-like venom of the sons of wrath. But what then? This will ere long be past, and past forever; "For in the secret of His pavilion shall He hide thee from the strife of tongues." Lying lips shall be put to silence, and the rebuke and reproach of the people of God shall pass to return no more. "Hearken unto me, ye that know righteousness, the people in whose heart is my law; fear ye not the reproach of men, neither be ye afraid of their revilings."

Perhaps thy friends are few and thy foes are many. Perhaps in wrath they gather round thy pathway—assault thee on every hand, and with hellish ingenuity plot thy swift destruction. Perhaps to you "the fiery darts of the wicked" are something more than a meaningless term, or a rhetorical flourish. It may seem a fearful reality. What then! Trust in God! "He shall cover thee with his feathers, and under his wings shalt thou trust: his truth shall be thy shield and buckler." Fear not; trust in the mighty One, who says, "Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world."

The toils of the toiling ones, the trials of the tried ones, and the temptations of the tempted ones, will ere long be past. Soon will the saints with joy exchange poverty for riches, shame for glory, crosses for crowns, ashes for beauty, mourning for joy, sickness for health, death for life, mortality for immortality, darkness for light, earth for the kingdom, toil for rest, trial for reward, pilgrimage, with its gloom and sorrow, for home, with its gladness and glory; deserts, and their dreariness, for paradise in its beauty; earth, with its unceasing sorrow, for Zion with its everlasting joy.

O! blessed day, long looked for, soon to be realized; long prayed for, soon to be granted,—day of peace and rest; day of joy and gladness; day of salvation and day of Christ, we long to see thee. We watch for the morning, but while in darkness we journey, awaiting thy bright rising, we will trust in God and fear not.

H. L. H.

The Secret of Happiness.

The most common error of men and women is that of looking for happiness somewhere outside of useful work. It has never yet been found when thus sought, and never will be while the world stands, and the sooner this truth is learned the better for every one. If you doubt the proposition, glance around among your friends and acquaintances, and select those who appear to have the most enjoyment in life. Are they the idlers and pleasure seekers, or the earnest workers? We know what your answer will be.

Of all the miserable human beings it has been our fortune, or misfortune, to know, they were the most wretched who had retired from useful employments in order to enjoy themselves. Why, the slave, at his enforced labor, or the hungry toiler for bread, were supremely happy in comparison.

Earnestly would we impress upon young minds the truth we have stated. It lies at the foundation of all well-doing and well-being. It gives tranquility and pleasure to the youth just stepping across the threshold of rational life, as well as to the man whose years are beginning to rest upon his stoop-shoulders. Be ever engaged in useful work, if you would be happy. This is the great secret.—Arthur's Magazine.

Ben, Bar—Son.

"Ben," in the Hebrew, and "Bar," in the Greek, signify son. Thus Ben-aiah signifies the Son of the Lord; Ben-ammi, the son of my people; Ben-hadad, the son of Hadad, and Ben-jamin, the son of the right hand. Also Bar-tholomew, is a son that suspends the waters; Bar-timeus, the son of Timeus; Bar-sillia, the son of contempt; Bar-abbas, the son of the father or master; Bar-jesus the son of Jesus; Bar-jona; the son of Jona; Bar-nabas, the son of the prophet, and Bar-sabus, the son of return.

In the same manner "O," among the Irish, and "Mac" among the Scotch, signifies son. Thus O'Brien is the son of Brien; and Mac Pherson, the son of Pherson—the same as Johnson in English is the son of John. To illustrate a little farther, Ben-Levi, Bar-Levi, O'Levi, Mac-Levi, and Leviсon, would be all significant of the son of Levi.—Advent Herald.

☞ Christ is the pot of manna, the cruise of oil, a bottomless ocean of all comfort, content and satisfaction. He that hath him wants nothing. [illegible]

[illegible] "THIS IS FOR YOUR HEALTH."—Paul.

For the Crisis.

From E. Macomber, Jr.

BRO. GRANT:—I notice in the Crisis a column set apart for advice concerning the health of the people, and I wish to have inserted in it this advice from the apostle Paul—1 Cor. 7: 1;—"Having therefore these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God." Now we have great and glorious promises, which are of great consolation to the child of God, and to rightly comprehend and enjoy them, we should strictly adhere to the request of the apostle in this respect. I will speak of my own experience in this matter.

I was much addicted to the use of tobacco, and used it quite freely, smoking and chewing. I found it gnawing upon my life. I was led to investigate the matter, but all the time I loved the darling weed. I allowanced myself—found I felt better. I could read and understand what I read—ideas came more freely to my mind. I thought if this was the result of leaving off a part, I would try and leave the whole; but here was a trial. I thought as much of smoking after eating as I thought of my food. I prayed over the matter. I meditated day and night, and would console myself by the conclusion that a little smoking was good. So I continued on, but put myself on short allowance; and this was hard for my carnal appetite. I have been on old Ocean with nothing but water and bread, and that impregnated with worms quite large for some time; but this did not affect me so much as this having to leave my tobacco, that I had indulged in for about twenty years; but I was persuaded the Lord did not approve of my using it, and while asleep I heard the voice of the Lord say to me, You must not smoke any more. As I left chewing some time before, I took this as a word of caution in time, and have left the vile weed. I am now praising God, wholly clear from the fumes of tobacco.

Praise the good Lord, that he has enabled me to leave this and all that has a tendency to defile this temple—the body—made for the Holy Spirit to dwell in. Let all remember the words of Paul, as quoted above—to "cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God."

Friend, whoever you are, ask your Father in heaven to bless you in whatever you do, that all things may be done to his honor and glory. "For every creature of God is good, and nothing to be refused if it be received with thanksgiving."

My health is much better. I understand better when I read. I enjoy the blessed seasons of prayer better, and I believe the Lord is pleased in this movement, because I have enjoyed myself well in the work of the Lord since I have come to the conclusion to strictly adhere to these rules given. "God be merciful unto us and bless us, and cause his face to shine upon us. Selah. That thy way may be known upon earth, thy saving health among all nations."

Yours striving to appear before the Great Judge of all the earth, without fault and blameless.

New Shoreham, R. I.

Colds Cured.

It would be to the saving of human health and happiness, and life itself, if the periodical press would never publish a recipe for any human ailment, which involved the taking of anything into the stomach.

Some scrap-editor characterizes it as an excellent remedy for a cough caused by a common cold, to soak an unbroken egg for forty-eight hours in half a pint of vinegar, then add as much honey, break up all together, and take a teaspoonful for a dose several times a day.

If the writer of that recipe had possessed the smallest amount of common observation, he would have known that if a man begins to cough, as the result of a cold, it is the result of nature herself attempting the cure, and she will effect it in her own time, and more effectually than any man can do, if she is only let alone, and her instincts cherished. What are those instincts? She abhors food, and craves warmth. Hence, the moment a man is satisfied that he has taken a cold, let him do three things: 1st, eat not an atom; 2d, go to bed and cover up warm in a warm room; 3d, drink as much cold water as he wants, or as much hot herb tea as he can, and in three cases out of four, he will be almost entirely well within thirty-six hours.

If he does nothing for his cold for forty-eight hours after the cough commences, there is nothing that he can swallow that will, by any possibility, do him any good, for the cold, with such a start, will run its course of about a fortnight, in spite of all that can be done, and what is swallowed in the mean time, in the way of physic, is a hindrance and not a good.

"Feed a cold and starve a fever," is a mischievous fallacy. A cold always brings a fever; the cold never begins to get well until the fever begins to subside; but every mouthful swallowed is that much more fuel to feed the fever, and, but for the fact that as soon as the cold is fairly seated, nature, in a kind of desperation, steps in and takes away the appetite, the continued cold would be followed by very serious results, and in frail people, would be almost always fatal.

These things being so, the very fact of forty-eight hours [illegible] day or two [illegible] two days longer [illegible] to do its work before anything at all is done.—Journal of Health.

The Feet in Winter-time.

No person can be well long, whose feet are habitually cold; while securing for them dryness and warmth, is the certain means of removing a variety of annoying ailments.

The feet of some are kept more comfortable in winter if cotton is worn, while woolen suits others better. The wise course therefore is for each one to observe for himself, and act accordingly.

Scrupulous cleanliness is essential to the healthful warmth of the feet; hence all, especially those who walk a great deal out of doors during the day in cold weather, should make it a point to dip both feet in cold water on rising every morning, and let them remain half ankle deep, for half a minute at a time, then rub and wipe dry, dress and move about briskly to warm them up. To such as cannot well adopt this course from any cause, the next best plan is to wash them in warm water every night just before going to bed, taking the precaution to dry them by the fire most thoroughly before retiring; this, besides keeping the feet clean, preserves a natural softness to the skin and has a tendency to prevent and cure corns. Many a troublesome throat affection, and many an annoying headache will be cured if the feet are kept always clean, warm, soft and dry.

The moment the feet are observed to be cold, the person should hold them to the fire, with the stockings off, until they feel comfortably warm. One of the several decided objections to a furnace heated house, is the want of a place to warm the feet, the registers being wholly unsuited for that purpose. Our wealthy citizens do themselves and their families a great wrong if they fail to have one room in the house, free for all, where a fire is kept burning from the first day of October until the first day of June, on a low grate, on a level with the hearth, after the pattern of Andrews and Dixon, of Chesnut street, Philadelphia; for the closer the fire is to the hearth in a grate, or to the floor in a stove, the more comfortable is it, and the less heat is wasted. This is one of the delights of the good old fashioned wood fires, the very thought of which carries so many of us away to the glad scenes of childhood and early homes. It ought to be known in New York, where hard or anthracite coal is burned, that with one of the grates named, filled with hard coal and a few pieces of Liverpool or cannell put on top, nearly all the advantages of a wood fire are secured, at least as far as cheerfulness, comfort and warmth are concerned.

Some feet are kept cold by their dampness from incessant perspiration, in such cases cork soles are injurious, because they soon become saturated, and maintain moisture for a long time.—Soak a cork in water for a day or two and see. A better plan is to cut a piece of broad-cloth the size of the foot, baste on it half an inch thickness of curled hair, wear it inside the stocking, the hair touching the sole, remove at night and place before the fire to dry until morning. The hair titillates the skin, thereby warming it some, and conducts the dampness to the cloth.

Scrupulous cleanliness of feet and stockings, with hair soles, are the best means known to us of keeping the feet warm when they are not cold from decided ill health. A tight shoe will keep the feet "as cold as ice," when a loose fitting one will allow them to be comfortably warm. A lose woolen sock over a loose shoe will maintain more warmth than the thickest soled tight fitting boot. Never start on a journey in winter, nor any other time, with a new shoe.—Ibid.

Babies and Water.

What a pity that babies had not some more intelligible mode of expressing their desires, or that doctors, nurses, and mothers, were not wiser. How often we hear one of these sweet little darling babies, that always look "just precisely like the daddy," crying at the tip-top of its voice for water, simply, because it is thirsty. Many mothers never think of giving their child a drink of water, but to stop its cries, force it to the breast at which it eagerly grasps, thinking to satiate its burning thirst. But, alas! how sad the disappointment, for after its little stomach has been filled to the very brim with its natural food, it cries and cries on harder than ever. We have more than once been sent for by the parent, on the supposition that the child was suffering for medical aid, when by giving it a few teaspoonsful of good pure sparkling cold water, it was relieved of all its troubles. We often tell mothers and nurses to give the child water.

But many think that will not do, and instead of allowing the child to allay its thirst, attempt to arrest its cries by giving pop, catnip tea, Godfrey's Cordial, Bateman's Drops, etc., etc., thus creating a morbid appetite for rum and other poisons, resulting in deleterious effects on the health and morals of the child. Mothers will you think of this, and remember that although a child may drink milk or nurse at the breast, it may often suffer as much from the want of water as adults who take more solid food? Imagine how terrible a situation, to be deprived of water these hot days to allay our burning thirst. The fluids, if not replenished by taking water into the system, would soon be dried up, and our bodies turned to dust.—Ec. Med. Jour.

THE CRISIS.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION,

Payable in Advance.

For a single copy one year..........$1.00
For a single copy 6 months..........1.00
For a single copy 3 months..........[illegible]
Five copies to one address for 6 months....[illegible]
Ten copies to one address for 6 months.....[illegible]
Twenty copies to one address, 6 months.....15.00
Thirty copies to one address, 6 months.....[illegible]

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts, which will bring the paper within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address, so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

[illegible]

The World's Crisis.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 220. | BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 30, 1859. | VOL. X. NO. 13

The World's Crisis
IS PUBLISHED
EVERY WEDNESDAY MORNING
AT
No. 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
HENRY V. DAVIS, JOHN COUCH, | MILES GRANT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

MILES GRANT, Editor.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially, the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and the final destruction of the wicked.

For terms, see fourth page.

Original Contributions.

For the Crisis.

To the Heavy Laden.

Heart-broken one, say, would'st thou find
Comfort for thy poor saddened mind?
Joy in thy sorrow, light in gloom,
Gladness and welcome to a home?

Say, would'st thou lose thy load of woe,
Nor longer with thy burden go?
Would'st thou be clean, and pure, and white,
A ransomed soul, thy Lord's delight?

Sad one, I too have felt the load,
I too have trod sin's weary road,
I too have roamed by guilt opprest,—
Thank God, I now have found a rest!

Heart-broken one, behold for you
A Savior offered to your view,—
The Lord, forgiving, gracious, kind—
In him you may deliverance find.

Come, weary one, to Jesus' feet;
In him all love and mercy meet;
Come, wash thee in his cleansing blood,
O! come, and be at peace with God!

Sinner, oh! look, before your eyes
Jesus appears, your Sacrifice;
He dies to bring thee home to God,—
Come, seek redemption in his blood.

Believe in him with all your heart,
Let him his holy love impart;
O! yield yourself his grace to know,
Then die to sin and all below.

H. L. H.

Blandford, Mass., April 7th, 1859.

For the Crisis.

Popery.

"What consternation now prevails at Rome,
Among the sons of mystic Babylon!"

"Now I saw in my dream, that at the end of the valley lay blood, bones, ashes, and mangled bodies of men, even pilgrims that had gone that way formerly; and while I was musing what should be the reason, I espied a little before me a cave, where two giants, Pope and Pagan dwelt in old times; by whose power and tyranny the men whose bones, blood and ashes etc., lay there, were cruelly put to death. But by this place Christian went without much danger, whereat I somewhat wondered; but I have learned since that Pagan has been dead many a day; and as for the other, though he be yet alive, he is, by reason of age, and also of the many shrewd brushes that he met with in his younger days, grown so crazy and stiff in his joints that he can now do little more than sit in his cave's mouth, grinning at pilgrims as they go by, and biting his nails because he cannot come at them."—Pilgrim's Progress.

The famous allegory from which the above extract is made, although written nearly two hundred years ago, here gives a pretty good idea of the past and present condition of popery. A giant in strength, associated with his fellow, Pagan, in ferocity at least, he takes up his abode in the horrid mysticism of a cave, hard by the valley through which the Christians pass. Pagan first held his bloody orgies there, till pushed from his gory seat by the more cruel and more subtle pope; for never in all the ruthless persecution of paganism was there such a remorseless refinement of torture as that practiced by the minions of the triple-crowned apostate of the Vatican. Paganism, with bold and open hostility to the christians, devoted his thousands to the sword, fire and the cross; while Popery, ever cowardly, ever hypocritical, with the name of Christ upon her polluted lips, swept away the tens of thousands by sword and stake, and other nameless agonies—"Which should be howled upon the desert air, where hearing could not catch them." If the stones of the dungeons of that slaughter-house, the holy Inquisition, could speak, what tales of horror would be told.

"What sounds were heard,
What scenes appeared—
What agonized complaints.
Fires that glow,
Shrieks of woe,
Sullen moans,
Hollow groans,
And cries of tortured saints!"

And then upon the mountains of Switzerland, and in the valleys of the Waldenses, the blood of the faithful of the Lord mingled with the foam of the rushing torrent, and turned incarnadine the limpid waters of the brook. Age or sex afforded no protection from the spears of the fiendish troops of Rome and her vassals, and the gray hair of the grandsire, the long, black hair of the matron, and the golden curls of the little child mingled together, all matted and soaked in their own hearts' blood. With deep dissimulation, the Huguenots, comprising many of the most eminent men in France, among whom was the brave and pious Admiral De Coligney, were invited by Charles IX. to assemble at Paris, with every protestation of his good wishes and protection. Many who lay down that night in peace and security, awoke ere morn to horror and death. The tocsin pealed the summons to the red banquet; and before the next sunset, the blood of eighty thousand protestants was poured into the cup of the drunken Abomination. Reeling with intoxication and savage joy, a hymn of thanksgiving was ordered to be sung in every church throughout the land; and St. Bartholomew's day was marked as one of the brightest in the saintly calendar.

England had also her seasons of fierce and fiery trial. Henry the Eighth, of doubtful memory, but indomitable courage, first successfully defied the menaces of the Pope. Like Napoleon I., he was made an instrument in the hands of God in lowering the insolent pretensions of the vicegerent. Napoleon abolished the Inquisition in Spain, and "bluff King Hal" gave a heavy blow to the supremacy in England. Though neither had other than self in view, the Almighty turned the tools of Satan against himself. The afflicted protestants experienced a brief season of repose under the sway of the youthful Edward VI., and they hoped for a long and happy reign. But treason blasted the bud, and Edward died; and Mary, surnamed the Bloody, stepping on the neck of the wisest and best of England's daughters, sprang upon the throne and fiercely shook her sceptre at the heretics. Many writers have attempted to palliate the conduct of this queen. Undoubtedly, her mother, Henry's first wife, endured much wrong; and she inherited that mother's bigotry and Spanish spirit of revenge. Her unhappy marriage, and the desertion of her young and passionately loved husband, made her temper worse and worse, till all the woman was swallowed up in the ferocious bigot; and the fires of Smithfield blazed, and the axe fell, and the cry again went up to heaven,—"How long, oh Lord, holy and true, dost thou not judge and avenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth?"

But death at length chilled that cruel heart, and palsied that bloody hand, and the nation, as if waking from a fearful dream, hailed with joy the succession of "Protestant Bess." The great Elizabeth soon plucked the victims from the stake and dungeon, and hurled from their abused power the cowled murderers, broke the pastoral staves of the truculent bishops, and proclaimed liberty to the people. This blow doubled up the Pope considerable, and the tremendous hammering which Oliver Cromwell gave him, so injured his back-bone, that from that to the present, he never can stand up straight. James II. tried to create a diversion in his favor, relying upon his faithful subjects, the Irish Catholics; but the Prince of Orange made even Ireland too hot for him, and the waves of the Boyne washed away every appearance of royal papacy in Britain.

But the seed was, and is still there, in that "Gem of the sea." The Irish papists, it might be said, are the only beings who blindly clasp their chains to their bosoms, and lick the dust beneath the feet of their domineering priests. Never did the poorest Hindoo yield such servile, unmanly submission to their priests, as do the Hibernian peasantry. Yet they will howl and plot against Protestant dominion, and cry for liberty, till those who know them not, pity and sympathise with them as if they were martyrs to the best of causes; when it is only English rule which saves every protestant on the island from utter extermination. Let any person read the history of the rebellion of '98, and then sympathise with them if he can. Many influential, and protestant gentlemen, farmers, and merchants, exasperated by the tyranny of the government, made common cause with the Roman Catholics and struck for liberty. At first, the troops were beaten at all points in the north, where the number of the protestants was greatest. But soon tidings came from the middle, and southern counties that there the war was one of religious extermination, and that the papists were murdering the protestants by wholesale. At Wexford, they shut men, women and children in the market house, and bringing them out by tens and twenties piked them, and threw their bodies into the river. And in a barn at Scullabogue, were crammed hundreds of the unhappy creatures, and all were burned to death. And when a mother threw her child from the window in order that the innocent might be saved, a bloody villain plunged his pike into its body and cast it back into the flames! This was the liberty the rebels sought, and their [illegible] ed the soldiers, and soon the rebellion was quelled.

An Irish protestant may be trusted as a staunch friend and loyal citizen—an Irish papist never. They are as distinct as if a divided world interposed its yawning gulf betwixt them. There is the most bitter, active hostility existing between the two parties. One lays schemes of murder, the other is ready to detect and avenge. And if ever the Catholics attempt another insurrection they will be as clearly swept from the land as if St. Patrick never set his blessed foot upon the shore.

Thus the giant has become crippled and unable to indulge much longer in his bloody game. His own dear sons in the Holy City, under his sacred nose, will not have him any longer. He looks out in his distress and consternation for help; but, alas! his dominion is slipping from his grasp, and even the Italians, who, from their contiguity to so much piety, might have known better, decline to have his holy skirt spread over them any longer, and actually turned him out of Rome. Yet his trials do not teach him humility; but all he can do is to sit in the mouth of his den grinning at the passers by, and biting his nails because he cannot come at them. And the Archbishop of Paris has called all hands to pray for the poor old Pope! If he were not such an intolerable nuisance, a person might feel compassion for his misfortunes and distress; but his old chair is getting ricketty like himself, and as blood is the only cement which he uses to strengthen it, we say, in the name of the Lord, let it crumble to pieces.

But human aid cannot long avail him now. The cloud which has cast its dreadful shadow over his fate, holds the lightning of his doom, which only waits for the hand of the Avenger to unloose it. The cries of His saints have not been forgotten, and when the day of His judgment shall come, the scarlet Lady, and all who have partaken of her abominations, shall sink forever beneath the flaming billows of the wrath of God.

JNO. F. COTTON.

For the Crisis.

An Exposition of Phil. 1: 23.

BY ELD. J. S. WHITE.

"For I am in a strait betwixt two, having a desire to depart, and to be with Christ; which is far better."

(Concluded.)

We now come more directly to the passage with which we commenced. In doing this, we will read the connection. Vers. 12—24:—

"But I would ye should understand, brethren, that the things which happened unto me have fallen out rather unto the furtherance of the gospel; so that my bonds in Christ are manifest in all the palace, and in all other places; and many of the brethren in the Lord, waxing confident by my bonds, are much more bold to speak the word without fear. Some indeed preach Christ even of envy and strife; and some also of good will: the one preach Christ of contention, not sincerely, supposing to add affliction to my bonds: but the other of love, knowing that I am set for the defence of the gospel. What then? notwithstanding, every way, whether in pretence, or in truth, Christ is preached; and I therein do rejoice, yea, and will rejoice. For I know that this shall turn to my salvation through your prayer, and the supply of the Spirit of Jesus Christ. According to my earnest expectation and my hope, that in nothing I shall be ashamed, but that with all boldness, as always, so now also Christ shall be magnified in my body, whether it be by life, or by death. For to me to live is Christ, and to die is gain. But if I live in the flesh, this is the fruit of my labor: yet what I shall choose I wot not. For I am in a strait betwixt two, having a desire to depart, and to be with Christ; which is far better; nevertheless to abide in the flesh is more needful for you."

In this connection, several things are to be noticed:

1. Paul makes a statement of the effect of his persecution. He says that the things which happened to him had been for the furtherance of the gospel. Many of the brethren in the Lord, waxing confident by his bonds, were much more bold to preach the word than they were before; some, indeed, preached with a wrong motive; but in either case, Christ was preached, and in that he rejoiced. What had been done to him had but advanced the cause of his Savior.

2. He is confident that Christ will continue to be magnified in his body, even though persecution should be carried so far as to take away his life. He says: "Christ shall be magnified in my body, whether it be by life or by death." If he lived, Christ would be honored; and if they went so far as to take his life, God would turn that into gain, to the furtherance of the gospel. He seems to argue from the less to the greater. If a little persecution was gain to the cause, more of it, even to the loss of his life, might be a greater gain. Hence he says: "For to me to live is Christ, and to die is gain." That is, if I live, it will magnify Christ, and if I die it will be gain to Christ and his cause.

3. After expressing his confidence in the honor of Christ through him whether by life or by death, he tells us what he might prefer if he were to consult his own personal feelings and interest. He says, "What I shall choose I wot not. For I am in a strait betwixt two, having a desire to depart, and to be with Christ, which is far better." The two are evidently the two things he had just named, viz., life on the one hand, and death on the other. Between these, he was in a strait, having a desire to depart, that is, to leave this position, to depart, have no more to do with either of them. To go out from between the two, and have something better than either. To depart; neither live nor die,—but go to be with Christ and so have something far better. He knew of a way to depart and to be with Christ without dying, which he never desired. He has given us some examples of this departure. He spoke of Enoch who walked with God, and was not, for God took him. Enoch departed to be with the Lord; he did not die to be with the Lord. The Lord took him out from between life and death and gave him something better. There was Elijah. He too departed, and was taken up to be with the Lord. The Lord wished to bestow this blessing upon these two servants, to take them to be with himself. To do this, he would not let them die, but translated them, which he must do in order to take them to himself. Now Paul desired thus to depart that he might be with Christ, the only way to be with him before he comes.

But having no promise that he should be translated, and so depart and be with his Lord, he was confident that he should abide and continue in the flesh, that he should live some time longer as he was, and that that would be more needful for the church. In his conclusion, it seems he did not expect that his desire would be realized. But on the other hand, if Paul had a desire to die that he might be with Christ, and thought that would be better for him than to live, it is surpassing strange that he never intimated that such a change would be better for others beside himself. In all his description of the future, in all the encouragement he gave the church, in all his reference to the promises made to the church to be fulfilled in the future, he never once intimated that it would be better for any one to be dead than alive. If better for Paul to be dead, why not better for some others to whom Paul wrote? As a sample of the way Paul took to comfort the church in view of death and the future, we may notice 1 Thess. 4: 13—18:—

"But I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not, even as others which have no hope. For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him. For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord, that we which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not prevent them which are asleep. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first: then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore comfort one another with these words."

If Paul believed that those who slept in Jesus had departed and were with Christ, is it not unaccountable that he did not tell those sorrowing friends so, especially as he was making an effort to comfort them in view of the future condition of those who had died? Instead of intimating that there was anything in their death that was comforting, except that they slept in Jesus, and that only as to a future result, he directed their mind to the coming of the Lord from heaven, to awake those who slept in him, to raise them from the dead, and so be with the Lord. In this passage he has told the church how and when, those who are the Lord's, can and will be with Christ. It will be done either by the resurrection or by translation, and at the time of the Lord's revelation from heaven. If those persons who had died, had departed and were with the Lord, how could he fail to remind the friends of the fact while speaking of their relation to Christ for the express purpose of comforting the living? Or, was it of so little moment in the mind of Paul, as not to be worth naming? If so, how unlike the course pursued in modern times, when an effort is made to comfort those who have lost friends by death.

When Paul came up to the time of his death, and knew that he had but a few days to live, he spoke thus of the fact:—2 Tim. 4: 6—8:—

"For I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith: henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day: and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing."

He made no allusion to anything that he expected to realize in death, no intimation that he was about to depart to be with Christ. He passed from his death to the coming of his Lord, when he should receive a crown of righteousness. If, in the language of the text, he had a desire to die, that he might be with Christ, it would seem impossible that he should not speak of it when he came to die, and to have his desire realized. Not a word in this direction did he utter, but spoke of the coming of Christ as the time when he and all the saints will change their condition so as to be with him. In like manner did he talk on other occasions. Col. 3: 4:—"When Christ who is our life shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory." No intimation that they would be with Christ before he shall appear. In the same manner did all the apostles talk of the future. 1 Peter 5: 4:—"And when the chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away." 1 John 3: 2:—"But we know that when he appeareth we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is."

Thus did the apostles preach, as if it never entered their mind, that they should or could be with Christ before he should come the second time without sin unto salvation. Jesus so spoke in all the promises he gave to the church. He said, "I will come again and receive you unto myself." Then will the promise he made to the thief on the cross, on the day of his death, be fulfilled. The dead and the living are together to be caught up to meet the Lord at his coming.

The Death of the Flowers.

The melancholy days are come, the saddest of the year,
Of wailing winds, and naked woods, and meadows brown and sere.
Heap'd in the hollows of the grove, the wither'd leaves lie dead,
They rustle to the eddying gust, and to the rabbit's tread.
The robin and the wren are flown, and from the shrub the jay,
And from the wood-top calls the crow, through all the gloomy day.

And now, when comes the calm, mild day, as still such days will come,
To call the squirrel and the bee from out their winter home,
When the sound of dropping nuts is heard, though all the trees are still,
And twinkle in the smoky light the waters of the rill,
The south wind searches for the flowers whose fragrance late he bore,
And sighs to find them in the wood and by the stream no more.

—W. C. Bryant.

For the Crisis.

Burton Conference.

The brethren of Genesee and Oakland Counties, who are looking for the personal and speedy coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, met in Burton, Genesee Co., Mich., Oct. 14th, 1859, and organized, after some preliminary remarks. On motion, W. Worden was elected Chairman, and A. F. Servis Secretary.

Voted, That all brethren in attendance be invited to take part in the deliberations of this Conference.

Voted, That N. C. Jerome, A. F. Servis and S. J. Adams, be a Committee of arrangements during the present session. After sufficient time being spent in suggesting the propriety of organization, etc., for the more effectual spreading of truth, the following was adopted:

1. That we organize a Conference District in this section, called the Genesee and Oakland Quarterly Conference District.

2. That A. F. Servis be President of the aforesaid District for the coming Conference year.

3. That H. Austin serve this Conference District as Secretary for the ensuing year.

4. That A. F. Servis be our evangelist, to travel, and preach the gospel during the present year within the bounds of this District, with the privilege also of extending his labors beyond the limits hereof, as he in his judgment shall deem proper, for the advancement of the cause of God.

5. That we organize a church in this vicinity, called the Grand Blanc and Burton Church of Christ.

6. That we adopt the following

CHURCH COVENANT.

In the name of our Lord Jesus Christ. We, whose names are hereunto affixed, do promise, relying upon Almighty God our Heavenly Father for grace; that, whereas we severally desire to form a part of a local and visible church of Christ in the towns of Grand Blanc and Burton, we will receive the Scriptures of the old and New Testament as our rule of faith, striving, in our practice, to in all things live conformably thereto."

7. That D. Wolverton act in the capacity of Elder for the church of Christ at Grand Blanc and Burton, for the succeeding year.

8. That N. C. Jerome serve as steward for the Grand Blanc and Burton church of Christ for the year to come.

Voted, That D. Wolverton, A. F. Servis and S. J. Adams be a committee to appoint the time and place of holding the next Quarterly Conference.

Voted, That a copy of the proceedings of this Conference be sent to the World's Crisis for publication.

Voted, That we adjourn to meet in Quarterly Conference as the Committee on appointments shall determine.

A. F. SERVIS, Secretary.

"The Union Movement:"

A MEETING OF THE LAY-MEMBERS OF THE VARIOUS CHURCHES OF THE TOWN OF UNITY ON DEC. 3, 1858.

CHAPTER VII.

The parties having met at an early hour, proceeded as follows:

Meth. I have been thinking, Mr. C., of your remark in regard to meeting upon catholic ground. Our Discipline requires belief in "The Holy Catholic Church," as a prerequisite to baptism. I have noticed the explanation of the word "Catholic," at the bottom of the page, but still the definition did not strike me fully before.

Chris. The definition of this word in your Discipline is good. Webster defines the word, "universal, orthodox." The truly Catholic Church is the universal, general, or orthodox Church. The true catholic ground, is orthodox or common ground—undeniable or indisputable ground, admitted by all truly pious and well informed persons, in all parties. It is not, of course, Romish ground, for it never was catholic, nor was the Romish Church ever catholic.

Meth. If I understand you, then, Mr. C., you think, if we unite at all, we must do it upon catholic ground—that is, orthodox or generally admitted ground, and not upon doubtful and speculative peculiarities, such as have been the basis of the union of the various parties in modern times.

Chris. Precisely so. Our spiritual life is not drawn from these speculative peculiarities, nor in any way dependent upon them, but from him who said, "I am the way, the truth, and the life." Our strength is not in speculative peculiarities, but in common, generally admitted, and orthodox truth.

Pres. Mr. C., you are the last man I should have expected to mention orthodoxy! It is a fact known generally, that you are not orthodox. Of course, then, if we should unite upon orthodox ground, we should not unite upon your ground.

Chris. We shall see presently, who is orthodox. Presbyterianism is not orthodox. It is not catholic in any sense of the word. It is not general or universal in any sense.

Pres. I deny your assertions, sir; we hold, in common, the fundamental truths of Gospel, as faithfully and firmly as any other denomination. We are, therefore, catholic.

Chris. I am aware that you hold the great catholic truths of the Gospel, but these are not Presbyterianism, for Methodists and Baptists hold these as firmly as yourself, and still are not Presbyterians. This shows that the great general truths, held in common by all the principal parties, are not Presbyterian, Methodist, nor Episcopalian, but Christian, orthodox, or catholic.

Pres. Will you then, tell me what Presbyterianism is?

Chris. It consists wholly of speculative and governmental points peculiar to Presbyterians, and no others. In other words, it is precisely that which distinguishes them from all others—that in which they differ from all others, and not that which they hold in common with all others. If you will, by some process, extract from the great catholic system, held in common by all the good, that which is peculiar to Presbyterians—that in which they differ from all others—you will have not only Presbyterianism—the whole of it, but you will find it a meager skeleton at that.

Pres. I admit that if Presbyterianism is to be cut down to that in which we are peculiar, or in which we differ from all others, it will be a slender affair. But I am not in the habit of viewing things in that light.

Chris. I do not see how you can avoid the conclusion. In all the great features of the Christian religion, held in common by all, we are all one—not Presbyterian, Methodist, Baptist or Lutheran, but Christian. It is, also, through these great catholic truths, held in common by all the pious—the great catholic or orthodox system—that we have been made Christians, and not through any efficacy or power in any of the partisan peculiarities of any party.

Bap. If I understand you, Mr. C., you consider that all partisan peculiarities must go for nothing, and the common union upon the great catholic truths required, because [illegible] mon by us all, as it is through these we have received all spiritual good, and not through partisan peculiarities. How I like the appearance of this pretty well in theory, but I fear it is not practicable. I will give you a case. You hold that baptism is essential; I presume that no other one present agrees with you. We all hold that it is not essential. What will you do in this case? Must we all give up to you?

Pres., Lu., Ep., and Meth. That is the point. What will you do in that case?

Chris. Gentlemen, do you believe that baptism is a command of Jesus Christ?

Pres., Lu., Ep., and Meth. Yes, sir, it is an ordinance of the New Testament, appointed by Jesus Christ.

Chris. Is it right to obey this commandment of Jesus Christ?

Pres., Lu., Ep., and Meth. Certainly it is.

Chris. All those who have been baptized, then, have done right. This we all admit; it is, therefore, common ground.

Pres., Lu., Ep., and Meth. Please meet the question fairly. Can a man be saved without baptism?

Chris. Gentlemen, you have admitted that baptism is a commandment of Christ, and that it is right to obey that commandment. Here, then, the right course of action is agreed upon by us all. Your question, then, is not a question to ascertain what is right, but whether persons who do not do right, will be saved? This is a shocking question to come from four ministers of the Gospel, truly! Are you willing that it shall go to the public, that a dispute arose in our deliberations, to this effect? You four contended that a man could be saved who did not do right, and I denied it. Do you intend to plead for the salvation of those who do not keep the commandments of God?

Pres., Lu., Ep., and Meth. No, sir, we shall defend no such doctrine. We believe that men must keep the commandments of God, or that they can not be saved. But is it not possible for a man to be saved without baptism?

Chris. That question does not in the least concern one of us. We all admit that baptism is a commandment of God, and that it is right to obey this commandment. Here we all agree upon what is right. That which we all agree to be right, we must enforce upon all men. There is a class of men who should think of your question. If there be any who have never been baptized, and never intend to be, they should study the question, whether a man can be saved without baptism. But it is entirely out of place, for men who know it to be a commandment of God, and right that it should be obeyed—who, also, expect to preach and enjoin it upon others, to be everlastingly puzzling their brains on the question whether it is possible for a man to be saved without baptism. All inquiries into that question are of the same nature as the Universalian investigations. They are not in the remotest degree, calculated to make men better, or feel their responsibility to God; but, on the other hand, to harden their hearts, in the deceptive hope that they can be saved without keeping the commandments of God. We must constantly keep the words of Jesus before us, "Whosoever, therefore, shall break one of these least commandments, and shall teach men so, he shall be called the least in the kingdom of heaven; but whosoever shall do, and teach them, the same shall be called great in the kingdom of heaven."—Matt. 5: 19.

Bap. If I understand the remarks of Mr. C., I am well pleased with them. We are to dispose of this question by uniting upon what we agree to, viz: That baptism is a commandment of Jesus Christ, and that it is right to obey the commandment, "Be baptized." We are certainly all willing to agree upon what we admit to be right, and to enforce it upon others. So far, then, as I am concerned, this difficulty is disposed of.

Pres. I am unable to make any farther objection on this point. It appears that there is common, or catholic ground, upon which we all agree, covering our whole practice, upon which we can unite. [illegible]

Chris. [illegible]

THE WORLD'S CRISIS
BOSTON, NOVEMBER 30, 1859.
WHOLE NO. 220.

For the Crisis.

"The Name of Jesus."

IS IT CABALISTIC AND MYSTERIOUS, OR PLAIN TRUTH?

"When they believed Philip, preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized."—Acts 8: 12.

This and like language is quoted and repeated by some as if there were something talismanic and very mysterious in the Romish sense of the term, involved in this phrase. But the reading of the Scriptures, with a simple faith, may dissipate this cabalistic, mysterious, or magical idea.

"The name" stands for the person. Ps. 20: 1.—"The name of the God of Jacob defend thee"—the person, or the God of Jacob himself defend thee. Acts 4: 10.—"Be it known . . . that by the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, . . . by him doth this man stand before you whole." Here "the name" and "by him" express the precise truth. The name expresses Him. In the prayer of Jesus he says to the Father,—"I have manifested thy name (thyself, thy loving will) to the men which thou hast given me."—John 17: 6.

The person is expressed and known by his name; and this simple fact seems to be the reason of its use in such relations. It occurs in John 1: 12; Acts 2: 38; 4: 7, 10 and 30; 1 John 3: 23, 5: 13; 1 Cor. 1: 10–15; Acts 10: 43, 48; John 20: 31. The reason for giving the name—Jesus—is found in Matt. 1: 21.—"Thou shalt call his name Jesus, for he shall save his people from their sins." Jesus is of Hebrew origin, like Joshua, (Heb. 4: 8) and is derived from the verb to save.

"The Messiah" is his Hebrew, official name in the Old Testament, and signifies the Anointed, (Acts 4: 27,) and is interpreted "the Christ."—John 1: 41. The Christ in the Greek language of the Apostle is then the same as the Messiah; or, in English, "the Anointed." Note. This was his OFFICIAL NAME; and in this, all who read the Scriptures believed, but this official name was personalized, and the word of promise and prophecy was accomplished in the miraculous birth of the Virgin's Son, whose personal, angel-given name is Jesus.

This PERSONAL NAME—Jesus—is important, inasmuch as it determines the question of the Messiah's personality—the integrity of the ancient prophecies, (Gen. 49: 10; Isa. 9: 6, 7; Dan. 9: 24–26; Micah 5: 2; Isa. 53: 7: 14); and so settles all the inquiries as to their precise import, by their fulfillment. Thus faith and baptism in "the name of Jesus" reproved and condemned the Jew—fixed the wandering eye of earth on the right one—honored God for the fulfillment of his word, and brought believers from under law to the grace and truth of the gospel. It was, as to truth, an age in advance. Hence the importance of this name lies in no magical, mysterious, cabalistic or concealed idea; but in the open, advanced and accomplished truth, that was understood and publicly professed by the baptized. None could walk with God through that stage of manifested mercy; none could hold fellowship with God in the unfolding of his gracious purpose; none could then, or now, co-work and so concur with the Almighty in his saving grace, except as they saw and confessed that the official name and divine promise were so far accomplished (and the remainder to be accomplished) in Jesus, who is the Messiah, the Christ, or the Anointed, Savior, Restorer, and only blessed Potentate. No other name—no other than He—can be God's appointed Prince or Sovereign of earth. The official work, dignity and glory of God's "Anointed" Judge and King, centre in Jesus. It is sin (after all the evidence given of this) to "look for another." Therefore the believer believes this—confesses this—and is baptized into this advanced, essential, and crowning truth of the gospel age! Amen.

N. B. The promise of a Messiah is personalized and so far accomplished in Jesus, and to be professed by baptism; but he is called "the Son of God," not so much as an official name, as to express the divinity of his descent, and his heirship "of all things." "The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee; therefore that holy One that shall be born of thee, shall be called the Son of God."—Luke 1: 35. Platitudes and generalities may be indulged in till faith is confounded as to all that the Holy Ghost plainly teaches; but thy word is truth, oh Lord. The above is plainly read from the Word. J. B. C.

Do Right.—A man that has a soul worth a sixpence, must have enemies. It is utterly impossible for the best men to please the whole world, and the sooner this is understood the better. Do right, though you have enemies. You cannot escape them by doing wrong; and it is a little mean to barter away your honor and integrity, and divest yourself of moral courage, to gain—what? Nothing. Better abide by the truth—frown down all opposition and rejoice in the feeling which must inspire a free and independent man.—[illegible]

[illegible]—The late Rev. [illegible] was in the habit [illegible]

Sandy Hill.

Our last report from this place extended to Nov. 10th. We continued there till the 20th. During these last ten days, the great truths of the Bible were received into several honest hearts, which were made to rejoice greatly in the possession of the christian's blessed hope. Several members of the churches came out boldly and confessed that they had been much blessed in embracing that which some of their brethren and ministers, who could not come near, were pleased to call heresy. Every one here, as in all other places, who received and confessed the hope of life only through Christ, were very much comforted in the Holy Spirit, and said they never loved Jesus and the Bible so well before, nor felt such a sweet peace of mind. Lord's day morning, Nov. 20th, we had a delightful love feast. Some said it was the best meeting they ever enjoyed. Three new testimonies were brought in by those who had just left the broad road to destruction. It was a melting and rejoicing time for the saints. Others are seeking the Lord. Two more have been baptized, who have just given themselves to the Lord. The work is onward.

Execution of John Brown.

The execution of John Brown, the zealous opposer of slavery, is fixed, by the government of Virginia, to take place Dec. 2nd. Great excitement prevails through the length and breadth of our land. Southern papers talk very decidedly of withdrawing from the Union, and there are organizing military companies preparatory for actual war, which there is considerable reason to anticipate. The next Congress will, no doubt, be one of stirring interest, and, very probably, one of startling results. The political horizon of our country never looked more threatening than at the present time. The "perilous times" of the last days are rapidly becoming more apparent. Let every christian stand firm, "unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord."

Queries and Answers.

Bro. Grant.—Will you please explain through the columns of the "Crisis," Heb. 6: 4—6?"—Subscriber.

These verses read as follows:—

"For it is impossible for those who were once enlightened, and have tasted the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Ghost, and have tasted the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come, if they shall fall away, to renew them again unto repentance; seeing they crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh and put him to an open shame."

Different translations throw light on this scripture. Thompson renders a part of the fifth verse as follows:—"And the miraculous powers of the age about to come." Wakefield renders the same:—"And miracles of the age that was to come." This scripture seems to apply to particular individuals, or a specified class of persons, who had received some special gift through the agency of the Holy Spirit—something not enjoyed by christians generally. Griesbach renders it:—"And the mighty works of the age that is to come." Prof. Whiting, "And the miracles of the world to come," (margin, miraculous power.) This passage appears to refer to those who have received some of the gifts enjoyed by the primitive christians; as the gift of healing, of faith, or of tongues.

It is certain that the Scriptures teach that those, who have been children of the Lord and backslidden in heart and life, have been reclaimed, and again enjoyed the favor of the Lord. This was the case with David, Peter, and others. Says the Lord to Jeremiah, "Go, and proclaim these words toward the north, and say, return, thou backsliding Israel, saith the Lord, and I will not cause mine anger to fall upon you."—Jer. 3: 12. Would the Lord ask backsliders to return if it were "impossible?" Again, he says:—"Return, ye backsliding children, and I will heal your backslidings."—Jer. 3: 22. Says the apostle James:—"Brethren, if any of you do err from the truth, and one convert him, let him know, that he which converteth the sinner from the error of his way shall save a soul from death, and shall hide a multitude of sins."—Jas. 5: 19, 20. In this example, the Holy Spirit moves James to write, and clearly express the idea that a brother in the Lord may so far depart from the right way, that he will need converting over again; and after being thus reclaimed, he is saved from death; i. e., the "second death," which is "the wages of sin." This could not be true if no backslider could reform, and turn again to the Lord.

Bro. Grant:—"Is a man excused from family worship, because his family does not sympathise with him?" B. S. J.

We think not. The most happy results have often followed, when the christian has faithfully persevered in this duty. Of course it would be more crossing, but the Savior has not said, give up when the cross becomes a little heavier than usual. [illegible] is it [illegible]? [illegible] a christian father [illegible] down [illegible] altar, because his [illegible] have grown to be young men and women, and do not sympathise with him? or because his companion does not enjoy the love of God? We should say, certainly not. Persevere. Remember, Jesus says: "No man, having put his hand to the plough, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God."

Popular Theology.

The following seven propositions, taken from a work on "The Immateriality of the Soul," by T. Read, New York, well express the popular theological views relative to the nature of man. How strangely different from the teachings of the Bible.

1. "That man, while on earth, has a perfectly organized body.

2. That besides his body, man has also a rational soul.

3. That this soul is spiritual, simple, uncompounded, immaterial, indivisible, indissoluble, indestructible, intangible, without exterior or interior surface, is not extended, and can never come in contact with matter.

4. That this soul, from its essential nature is immaterial, and independent of the body; and therefore, that it can exercise the functions of life, of the understanding, affections and will, without the concurrence of the body, and does indeed perform these functions, while the body is mouldering in the dust.

5. That these souls continue in a state of consciousness, enjoyment or suffering, between death and the resurrection; the good going to Paradise or heaven, where Christ is, and the wicked to hell.

6. That the resurrection refers only to the body, the soul having never died.

7. That the wicked, as well as the righteous, from the necessity of their own immaterial natures, will live forever."

Theological Poetry.

Michael Wigglesworth, who was born in 1631, and died in 1705, graduated at Harvard College in 1651, and when unable to preach, on account of an affection of the lungs, wrote a poetical work, denominated "The Day of Doom." The work passed through six editions in this country, and was reprinted in London.

When speaking of the damnation of infants, and anticipating their complaint against the justice of the sentence, on the ground that—

"Adam is set free;
And saved from his trespass,
Whose sinful fall hath spilt them all,
And brought them to this pass,—

he seems hardly satisfied with his own reasoning, but makes the Judge decide that, though—

"In bliss
They may not hope to dwell;
Still, unto them he will allow
The easiest room in hell."

After the infants are disposed of, the general sentence is passed upon the wicked, who begin to—

"Wring their hands, their caitiff hands,
And gnash their teeth for terror,
They cry, they roar for anguish sore,
And gnaw their tongues for horror
But get away without delay,
Christ pities not your cry,
Depart to hell, there may ye yell
And roar eternally."

Truth Advancing.

We are glad to see a man, occupying a position so high as that of Professor Agassiz, speaking out boldly on the side of truth, as in the following conclusion, expressed after a most elaborate investigation of fossil fishes. He says:—"An invisible thread in all ages runs through this immense diversity, exhibiting, as a general result, the fact that there is a continual progress in the development, ending in man. . . . Have we not here the manifestation of a mind as powerful as prolific? the acts of an intelligence as sublime as provident? the marks of goodness as infinite as wise? the most palpable demonstration OF THE EXISTENCE OF A PERSONAL GOD, author of all things, ruler of the universe, and dispenser of all good? This, at least, is what I read in the works of creation."

An Honest Confession.

Mr. William A. Hume, a distinguished trance-speaking medium, when addressing the people at the Town Hall, in Rutland, in the summer of 1856, is reported to have said:—"I am the agent of the Almighty God." (This is the language of the spirit speaking through him.) After stating that he was instrumental in aiding the murders, wars and all kinds of wickedness, and in causing death, he said, "thus shall I move on, while sun, moon and planets move, till this world shall be on fire, then I perish in the burning flames."

Olshausen.—Immortality.

Olshausen, the noted commentator, says: "The doctrine of the immortality of the soul and the name are alike unknown to the entire Bible." Why is it that people will still teach the immortality of the soul, when they cannot find one passage in the whole Bible that declares it, while, on the contrary, there are many texts which expressly teach the opposite? When will [illegible] turn from the fables and traditions of [illegible], and believe the teachings of the blessed Bible?

Public Worship in Vermont.

In 18[illegible], at the General Convention of Congregational ministers and churches of Vermont, a committee was appointed to ascertain and report the facts respecting the attendance on public worship in the state. After a careful investigation, the committee reported in June, 1857, as follows:—"There are in Vermont at least 22,064 families of which there is no habitual attendant on Evangelical worship, which would, allowing five persons to each, embrace 110,320 souls,—a fraction more than 1–3 of the whole population. The average attendance on Evangelical worship is 55,410, less than 1–5 of the population. Upon Non-Evangelical meetings, 9,088.—about 1–34 of the inhabitants. There are 77,640 habitual neglecters of all public worship,—a little less than 1–4 of the whole population."

Italian Prospects.

There is a steady advance of the revolutionary movement in Italy, and every thing indicates a triumphant success over Papal oppression and misrule. Mazzini, the noted Italian leader, who has been at the head of a party, now cooperates with the plans of Garibaldi, for a general attack and overthrow of their cruel enemies, who are drunken with iniquity. He says:—

"I send 200 francs as my contribution to the subscription proposed by General Garibaldi. I am sure that all those who share my political religion will hasten to follow my example.

The name of Garibaldi is for me an assurance that these muskets will not be collected merely to defend the Cattolica and the Mincio. The sacred principle of a united fatherland, violated by every scheme which does not comprehend the whole country from the mountain range of the Tyrol to the Sicilian sea, is his faith as well as ours.

Arms are for us everything. This subscription must be a bond of brotherhood to all Italians, who must at length display a manliness of purpose, and bid farewell to the indecorous twaddle of cowardly optimists, who expect to achieve liberty and fatherland by a delusive conference of foreign princes. JOSEPH MAZZINI."

The Italian question has become the all absorbing one of Europe, but all, except the Italians, are at loss to know what to do. The latter have fully decided, that nothing short of extermination of the Pontifical power at Rome, will secure to the people their heaven-born rights, and prevent the drunken harlot from again gloating on their bloody tortures.

The Independence Belge says:—

"The letters received by us from Italy state that the situation of that country is excessively troubled at bottom, however tranquil the surface may appear. In Parma, tumultuous and terrible manifestations are feared, should the Dictator Farini wish to inflict capital punishment on the assassins of Colonel Anviti. In the Legations the authorities are obliged to watch over the manœuvres of Mazzini, and to observe the greatest precautions to prevent the army from being tainted with the revolutionary element."

Says Garibaldi:—

"I repeat to you that to the last moment of my existence I shall be devoted, body and soul, to my country. For fourteen years, without pay or reward, I have served the cause of liberty in foreign lands. What, then, will I not do for the land of my birth? Events are progressing favorably, but there is still much to be done. The day is come when Italy is to regain its complete independence. This time it must be accomplished, and from the Alps to Sicily she must be free. Providence has given us the man we needed to reknit us together. It is round Victor Emmanuel that we must rally to repulse the stranger from our soil. We will not longer bear the foreign yoke. Let him but retire and leave us to enjoy our possessions in peace, and we will at once welcome him as a friend. But so long as he desires to subject us to his dominion, he has nothing to expect from us but the fire of our artillery. It is only by union and force that we shall obtain our freedom. When we can attain strength, believe me no one will dare to attack us. Before everything it is imperative that we should all be soldiers. Our entire nation must form one army, and if domestic duties detain a few round the family hearth, let them remain there like soldiers, muskets or sword in hand. Fifteen days are enough to make a brave Italian a brave soldier. It is not an embroidered uniform that his merit will consist in. As long as there remains a foot of our soil to be redeemed we will not lay down our arms."

Naples has been a strong hold of the Papal power, but present indications do not intimate that it will long continue its supporter. A Paris correspondent says:—

"The news from Italy is serious enough, for according to all human calculation we may reckon on a rising in Naples before long. At least, if there be not, it will not be the fault of the men who now seem to take the affairs of Italy into their own hands, and whose sincerity is not called in question."

The Romish priests are busy at work to secure their usurped authority. A correspondent of the London Times says:—

"The reactionary party which has been organized by some fanatic priests is busy at work, both in the towns and in the country. The day before yesterday four priests were arrested at Corzano Morziano, a small mountain village of this province. They were secretly conspiring against the government of Bologna, being under the impression that a new and general vote would be ordered by the European Congress in the Legations. They had already formed a skilful plan, which, if carried out with success, would, in their opinion, have insured here the triumph of the Papal government. Of course the [illegible] and excommunication were the means they would now have resorted to, had not the vigilance of the authorities frustrated their plans. The prisoners were [illegible] to Bo[illegible] under a [illegible] escort of carabinieri."

The following shows the state of feeling [illegible] Rome:—

"The reform feeling evoked in Rome at the moment of the departure of the Sardinian Minister had not at all subsided: and were it not for the military discipline and obedience of the French troops, it was thought that the soldiers of Napoleon even would join the inhabitants in again driving the Pope into exile as a temporary ruler.

Quite a number of Americans were arriving in Rome."

France Preparing for War.

Notwithstanding Napoleon talks peace, he is constantly preparing for war, and that too, on a grand scale. He is now assisting the Spaniards in their preparations to fight with Morocco. This is a great annoyance to England, for she fears that France and Spain may take the entire control of the straits of Gibralter, and make the Mediterranean sea a French lake. The Paris correspondent of the London Times speaks of "immense naval armaments in progress, particularly at Toulon, where no less than twenty-two large ships are being constructed." It is said:—

"The Paris correspondents of the London journals generally indulge in gloomy forebodings. The writer for the London Herald states plainly, that the impression gained ground that a rupture between France and England was imminent. Several provincial journals had published simultaneously violent articles against England, which are known to have been supplied by a government official. England is warned that the hour of trial approaches which may put an end to her greatness for ever."

Another writer says:—

"France continues her preparations for war on a scale of gigantic magnitude. Not a moment is lost, not a single fibre is relaxed; steel clad ships and powerful steamers are being continuously constructed, rifled cannon cast by hundreds, munitions and all the elements of war provided in immense quantities. Louis Napoleon does not make these immense preparations in vain. He has in view some great movement, which, when he is prepared, he will make on the checkered board of European affairs."

Increase of Crime.

There is no fact more apparent in morals, than the constant and rapid increase of crime, and yet there are many who tell us the world is growing better, and was never in so good condition morally, as at present. If facts sustained such a position, we should have reason to doubt the truth of the Bible, which declares the opposite. That states in the plainest terms, when speaking of the people, just before the harvest of the world, and says, "Their wickedness is great." This statement, in Joel 3: 13, harmonizes with all the Bible descriptions of the morals in the last days.

The New York Chronicle says:—

"Never was crime more rampant than now. Garroting, burglary, stabbing, lewdness, fraud, forgery, embezzlement, and every imaginable form of wrong, cruelty and murder, meet us at every turn. The morning and evening papers are encumbered with the disgusting details. Police has become impotent. Indeed, crime enters the sanctuary of law and presides on the bench of justice. Rulers have lost the public respect and confidence; wrong doers laugh them in the face and chuckle over the imbecility and wickedness which are set to preserve the public order. There is no respect for rulers, as was felt in the earliest days of our city. Our doors are entered and our halls stripped of hats, cloaks and furs; our necks grappled or our voice stifled as we pass along the streets, while our pockets are relieved of their contents; and it has come to pass that a man who walks out at night feels himself surrounded by robber bands just ready to pounce upon him with fatal results to limb and life."

Another writer says:—

"The daily reports of the newspaper press furnish evidence that crimes and social sins are on the increase in New England. . . . .

The multiplication of crimes and offences of various kinds is a matter for serious consideration by those who have at heart the moral welfare of the community, and it behooves them to inquire into the causes of our degeneracy, and the means of promoting a better state of things."

"The Sick Man."

The above heading is the appellation now applied to the Turkish empire. Mohammedanism is rapidly waning, and it is evident that this once powerful empire is near its dissolution. The great powers of Europe begin to look with jealous eyes upon each other, fearing that some one may get more than his share of the Mohammedan territory. In speaking of the proposed European Congress, it is said,

"We are determined not to neglect the opportunity of calling the attention of Europe to the affairs of the East, which are rapidly approaching a crisis. The conspiracy lately discovered in Constantinople is only a symptom of the incurable disease which is hastening the dissolution of the Turkish empire. The sick man is at his last gasp, and if an agreement is not come to in time, we shall soon see all the great Powers scrambling for his inheritance. Austria has evidently an eye upon the provinces conterminous with her dominions—Wallachia, Servia, Bosnia, etc.—where she would like to establish vassal thrones for the members of the Hapsburg family, who have just been driven from their Italian possessions. But Russia would never consent to such an arrangement, not even to secure the crown of Etruria for the Duke of Leuchtenberg."

☞ It is wiser and better to hold the torch of truth to the mind, than the torch of persecution to the body.

For the Crisis.

Tract Fund for the West.

Having been prevented from leaving home by the care and labor of moving, and also by the dangerous illness of my youngest child and of my mother, both of whom are now, I hope, out of danger; I think it good to say a few words regarding the Tract Fund for the West. I write, especially, because some, no doubt, think that the desired amount ($1,000) is nearly complete, and I wish them to know the exact state of the case. Since my last report I have received a few dollars from various sources, which I may acknowledge by and by, if I can find time.

You need not, however, expect hereafter lengthy reports on the Tract Fund. I have a pile of letters but I have not time or strength to transcribe them. Besides action, not talk, or writing, is demanded. Let us act. The matter has been fully laid before the readers of the Crisis. I shall continue to receive letters, I doubt not, which will stir my deepest heart, and I shall act as best I can. Some who have read the articles in the Crisis will remember them, while with some it will, be "out of sight and out of mind." As I have time I may say a little, but probably not as much as heretofore on the subject.—Enough has been said, and I prefer that all should look up to learn their duty. It remains to speak of the present state of the Tract Fund.

When I commenced writing on the subject, I had serious doubts whether there was enough real, honest, self-sacrificing principle, among those who read the Crisis and have money, to raise $1,000 at once, for any purpose, unless under the pressure of some "time," "cry," or "message," which taught them they must hand over their money or be damned in a very few days. Hundreds of thousands of dollars have been scattered to the wind at such times, or have been used to propagate that which has proved to be untimely and partially untrue, and many single individuals have spent more than $1,000 each, in such movements as that. I thank God, I believe I never had a dollar that was wrung from the hands and pockets of men under any such pressure as that. I hope I shall have none to stop me "in this boasting."

But notwithstanding my doubts, I begun to write and have appealed, as I never appealed for money before in my life, and have brought others to appeal too, in the language dictated by their own personal wants and the pressing needs of the fields where they labor. Now what are the results? I headed the list with the offer, first, to give one twentieth of the whole, $50, and second, to furnish the tracts cheaper than tract societies' usual prices. Bro. Grant followed with $50 more and paid half in cash, and the rest is to be paid in tracts which are ready. Now, besides this, the amount of cash or its equivalent, received for the Tract Fund is $517.25,—excepting a few small amounts to be used at my discretion for tracts or other purposes. Let me re-state it. —The total amount of cash which has been sent to me with directions to apply it to the Tract Fund for the West, is, if I reckon rightly, $532.23. Besides this have been pledged tracts, etc., amounting to $50; making in all, $582.23. Some of the tracts are not yet received, but may be by and by. To this $582.23, if I add my own subscription of $50, makes a total of $632.23. But my $50 is not due to the fund unless the $1,000 is raised, for I did not propose to give one tenth, but rather one twentieth of the amount raised. Of this $582.23, $158 have been paid by seven brethren and one sister, eight in all. Of the remaining $424.23, $150 have been collected by four churches. Leaving $274.23 in scattering contributions from various sources. Of this amount thirteen persons, (including one old backslider—God bless him—and one church) have contributed in sums of $5 or $6, $72—leaving $202.23 to come from other sources. Of this, $25 is given or pledged in pamphlets and tracts by four persons; leaving $173.23, which, as near as I can reckon now, has been paid by one hundred and twenty-four persons, including two or three churches, whose small contributions, less than $5, have been counted with the rest. We have then, as a grand total, contributions from about six or eight churches and one hundred and forty-five or seven persons, to spread the light at the West.

The Crisis has, I suppose, some two or three thousand subscribers,—we will say 2,800. Probably each copy is read by at least three or four persons, on an average, so that it has, we will say, some ten or twelve thousand readers. The appeals from myself and scores of brethren, have been read by them through the tract column, week after week, and month after month, for about six months,—all have been interested, almost all have no doubt said—God speed the tract cause; and now when "the hat is passed," and the collection counted, what is the result? A dime from each reader would make up the amount. "Fifty cents from each subscriber would be enough and more than enough to raise the $1,000. [illegible] or ten used by the readers of the Crisis while we have been talking about it would, I think, be sufficient; instead of that, we have $582.23 paid; and setting aside some six or eight churches, not more than one hundred and fifty persons have contributed at all. One hundred and fifty among ten thousand readers, or about one in sixteen of the subscribers to the Crisis! "Where are the NINE?" Yes, where are the fifteen? Do they love the precious truth? Do they love tobacco? Which do they love best? Do they take an interest in the cause? Do they take snuff too? Which do they take most of? Do they drink down the gospel? Do they drink tea and coffee too? Which costs them the most? Do they put on the whole armor? And ribbons and gewgaws besides? Have they mansions in heaven, or only fine houses here? Are they laying up treasures here? Are they lying like clams at low water, all shut up waiting for a high tide to come along and open their shells? Are they calculating to do something by and by, and have they put it off and forgotten it? Where are the fifteen? I cannot tell. Some I shall hear from. Some have written me to New York. Some have done what they could. For this I thank the Lord and them.

What now? Am I disappointed? not much—I did not expect anything but what the Lord would do,—his will be done. Am I discouraged? not much. Will I give up? not yet. Will I dun folks much more? I think not. Will I give up the idea of scattering 1,000,000 pages of tracts at the West? I think not yet. Can I print $500 worth as cheap as I can $1000 worth? not at all. How shall I print $1000 worth? I do not know. Where is the money to come from to buy the paper and do the work? I cannot tell. Will some who owe me for books pay up a part of their bills? I do not know. Do they know how much I want the money? I think not all of them. Would they pay it if they could? I think so. Are they able? perhaps not. Do they try? some do and some—will, wont they? Has the Lord God $1000 in money anywhere on the earth? Yes, and more too. Will he furnish all that is needed if we pray and trust him and labor? Yes. Let us pray. Amen.

Letters sent to my address, Providence, R. I., or, till Dec. 10th, to care of G. W. Young, box 3124, New York, P. O., will be attended to as soon as possible. Send in your orders for books with cash, and your calls for tracts, with or without price, you shall be attended to if the Lord will, soon. Those who have written will be patient. I will do the best I can.

Your brother, H. L. HASTINGS.
Providence, R. I.

Correspondence.

From W. L. Willard.

Bro. Grant:—It has been a matter of some consequence with me, whether thus to presume to address you, or allow my signature to appear in the columns of your most excellent and worthy paper. But I am encouraged to carry out my desire, by the knowledge of my mother's occasional contributions, and in her name, allow me to present myself.

To me, it seems almost sacrilegious for a name so unworthy as mine, to be found among those who "are the salt of the earth." Yet, as I most sincerely believe that one of the missions of the Son of God, was, when on earth, to raise the weak, and encourage the faint, I cannot but feel it my privilege and duty, if possible, to let my feeble and almost extinct light, so shine, that others seeing my good works may glorify our Father which is in heaven.

At the tender age of seven, I was immersed by one of God's faithful ministers—Bro. S. A. Chaplin—into the faith as it was then understood, and preparatory, as I thought, for that great event which was then looked forward to with such interest and anxiety by those who expected a final consummation of all things by the coming of the Messiah the second time.

The Lord failing to appear at the appointed time (1844) as was anticipated by the believers, wrought quite a change in the minds of many, respecting his second advent, as also other points of weight and interest. The result was, my father (Dr. R. Willard) concluded, in the first place, that he had not gained admittance into the "fold," by the right way, and fearing lest he might have "climbed over the wall," or burglariously entered, and thus be classed as a "thief and a robber," he, as also my mother, and several others were re-baptized for the "remission of sins," while I, like many other lambs of the flock, "wandered from the fold of God," and like the seed which fell by the wayside, "because there was not much earth," "withered away."

Thus things have passed on for fifteen years, and I am now a young man full of hope and high aspirations. Life to me is pleasant and desirable, and the world is all its fascinating loveliness, is spread out before me to please the eye, charm the ear, and gratify the passions. My parents still live, and I have enjoyed the inestimable blessing of religious instruction,—from the time when mother took her three boys and sought for [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] my responsibilities greater than if I had never had these advantages; and thus I feel that my sins and neglect of attending to the "one thing needful," is of greater magnitude, than had it been otherwise. Yet, I, as a second "prodigal," may I trust, return, and if not fortunate enough to secure a son's enviable position, obtain a servant's place. I most earnestly solicit the prayers of the people of God, that I may be among those who shall be found "able to stand," having their names written in the "Lamb's Book of Life."

Bowling Green, Ind.

From Eld. M. Batchelor.

Bro. Grant:—I send a few lines for the Crisis. In Heb. 10 : 38, we read, "Cast not away, therefore, your confidence, which hath great recompense of reward." This exhortation is needed by the waiting church, while there are so many things to try their faith in this time of suspense. Some of us have been waiting and expecting for seventeen years, and still the world goes on. We dare not give up or change our faith in the great truth that the Lord is soon to come. It appears that Rome, the old Babylon of Revelations, must go down soon. Whether the French Empire is the beast of the 17th of Rev. or not, Rome, in its present form, cannot stand long as things appear; although I have no doubt the French Empire as it was and is, has been and now is filling up the remainder of the 11th of Dan. and the 17th of Rev. But be that as it may, we are at or near the downfall of the Man of sin, and the overthrow of Rome. I cannot see how it can go over next year; and when it goes down, then comes the marriage of the Lamb.—Rev. 19 : 1–8. This is God's order of things. When the usurper is cast out, the true bride is rewarded, as there named. Prophetic time will speak; and the true church will understand something of it before the end comes. That day will not come upon them as a thief. Cast not away your confidence in God's word of prophecy. Do not allow yourselves to be bought nor sold for a little of this world's popularity. It is evident that the overwhelming majority of the church will be found out of sympathy with Christ when he comes. The "days" of Dan. 12th must end soon; then Daniel will stand in his lot. We cannot separate the days from Daniel's coming into his lot, and when he comes into it, we shall. God bless you, dear children.

From Eld. J. Parry.

Bro. Grant:—The readers of the Crisis are interested in all that transpires in the conflict now waging between truth and error; and some account of the progress of the war in Sandy Hill by an eye witness, may not be uninteresting; and I propose from time to time to keep them posted on this subject.

Our brethren are aware that Elders Grant and Mathewson have been laboring in this vicinity for nearly six weeks; and if their statement is to be relied on, it is the hardest field it has been their lot to try to cultivate, in all their arduous labors. This arises from several causes; first, the conduct of professors of religion, especially those who would be leaders in the churches, and regard themselves as pillars of the faith. The life and conduct of these flaming professors is so worldly, carnal, and inconsistent with what they profess, that the world have no confidence in them, or in their religion,—they think it all a farce and pretence,—turn from it with disgust, and thus become infidels and unbelievers in all religion.

Another impediment to the spread of truth is, the influence of sectarian prejudice and bigotry—too many love the traditions and creeds of fallible men, more than the truth and the word of God. All through our meetings, the most strenuous efforts have been made by ministers and members of churches, to prevent their people from hearing for themselves. Very few have had courage enough to make the trial, and nearly all, who have done so, have been convinced that the literal meaning of the Bible is on our side of the question; and some have been convinced of the truth, and cordially embraced it. They say the word of God never appeared so plain and clear, they see a harmony and beauty in it, they never saw before; and wonder they have been so long in the dark, on the personal reign of Christ, the sleep of the dead till the resurrection, and the final destruction of all who do wickedly, after the judgment.

Another difficulty is, that these doctrines we hold are not popular, it is only weak-minded, silly, and superannuated people, who embrace them: none of the wise, learned and strong-minded people are ever thus led astray. Most people, in these days, would much rather be esteemed rogues than fools; and this pride of intellect, love of popularity, and fear of man, has kept, and does now keep, multitudes out of the kingdom of God. They are not willing to make themselves of no reputation, and to be called fools for Christ's sake; and the consequence is, they have their reward in this life, but lose it in the world to come. Who will be the fools then?

But one of the greatest discouragements we have met with [illegible]

[illegible] the bottomless [illegible] position of those, who, in their hearts, believe the truths we advocate, but who, from the fear of man, the love of ease and peace, or from a system of expediency, turn a cold shoulder on all the efforts we make to spread the knowledge of the truth, and draw men from the fables of the day, to the realities of the religion of Christ. These are indeed days of apostasy and will-worship. Now trials and persecutions arise because of the word; many go back, and walk no more with us—they sell their birthright for a mess of pottage. They sell their Lord and Master, for less than thirty pieces of silver. They hide the light God has given them under a bushel; they bury their talent in the earth; and, like Demas, have forsaken us, having loved the praise of men more than the praise of God.

I read in God's book, that to whom much is given, much will be required, and for my part, I dare not stand in the position, in the judgment of the great day, that many now take; especially when Christ says he that is not with me, is against me; he that gathereth not with me, scattereth abroad. Curse ye Meroth, saith the angel of the Lord, curse ye bitterly the inhabitants thereof. Why? Because they came not to the help of the Lord against the mighty. I fear some of the inhabitants of Sandy Hill and its vicinity, have placed themselves in this predicament; and have refused to take up the cross; and instead of showing themselves on the Lord's side, have openly espoused the side of the enemy; and used all their influence to oppose, what they knew to be the truth. The language of Mordecai to Esther may be applicable to this case: "If thou altogether holdest thy peace at this time, then shall there enlargement and deliverance arise to the Jews from another place; but thou, and thy father's house, shall be destroyed."—Esther 4 : 14.

Notwithstanding all these difficulties, God has raised up amongst us a little band of faithful soldiers of the cross, who are not afraid or ashamed to stand up for the truth through evil as well as good report; and they now prove the verity of that promise,—"Verily, I say unto you, there is no man that hath left house, or parents, or brethren, or wife, or children, for the kingdom of God's sake, who shall not receive manifold more in this present time, and in the world to come, life everlasting."—Luke 18 : 29, 30. We have had many witnesses to this truth:—"Those who honor me, I will honor." The word has proved a blessing to all those who have been faithful; and, thank God, we are strengthened and encouraged in our work, and are willing to sacrifice earthly honor and friends, for the sake of the truth as it is in Jesus.

In these last days perilous times have come, we need the whole armor of God to resist unto blood, in this last great conflict with the powers of darkness. And we are convinced, that nothing but the Bible truth of man's mortality, and life only in Christ, by a resurrection from the dead, can withstand the demon worship of these last days. And to say these truths are not now of vital importance to the church, and to the world, is to be wilfully blind, both to our danger and our remedy. May God open our eyes, before it be too late, to see and embrace the truth, that the truth may make us free. Amen.

For the Crisis.

"Doubting Castle."

Bro. Grant:—Our Bro. D. T. Taylor says, "I am on the fence." I believe, in very deed, I am in a much worse place. I am in "Doubting Castle" as to some points respecting the entire condition of the dead. The more I search and read, the more doubtful I become. I do not know where I am coming out. Indeed, I do not know as I am coming out at all, anywhere.—Things on "our side of the question" are full as "muddy" to me as they are on the "Immortal soul side."—that is, so far as many points are concerned. I thought once I had "settled the question" forever; but it is all unsettled now. I cannot see evidence that the spirit of man is immortal. I cannot believe that the spirit of man goes into the grave when man dies. I cannot understand how the spirit of man can be conscious out of the body. I am in doubt, doubt, doubt! I believe what the Bible says, but I do not know what it does say. I am a fool. I do not know much. About all I do know is, "I'm a poor sinner and nothing at all, but Jesus Christ is my all in all!" Will you permit me, if I get time this fall or winter, to write my points of doubt in the Crisis, that you and others may see them and do what can be done to dissolve them? Edwin Burnham.

Yes, dear brother,

"Speak, and let the worst be known,
Speaking may relieve you."

We can say for ourselves, we have no doubts on the point named; but we have known in time past the perplexities felt by those in "doubting castle." May the good Lord help you out speedily. We are ready to render all the aid we can.—[Ed.

☞ The highway of the upright is to depart from evil: he that keepeth his way, preserveth his soul.

☞ You should never place so much [illegible]

Obituary Notices.

Died, in Moreau, N. Y., Tuesday, Nov. 15th, Chillians, daughter of Bro Vincent and Sr. Charlotte Stone, aged six years.

It was a lovely child, and sleeps sweetly in Jesus, awaiting the glorious morn of the resurrection, for the happy reunion of loved ones. We laid her in the Union Cemetery, at Sandy Hill, where the waving pines bend over her grave, spreading a gloomy cheer to those who visit this retreat of the dead. Near by lies Jane McCrea, who was murdered by the Indians a short distance from this place. Here lie the venerable sire and blooming youth, the devoted christian, the gay and proud, friends and foes, learned and unlearned, side by side, in quiet slumbers, heedless of the busy world around, that will soon unite with their silent company, to wait for the trumpet morn that wakes the Savior's lovely bride, to join him forever in holy joy, where the oppressor's frown, the deceiver's wiles, and sorrow's tears are eternally unknown.

We endeavored to comfort the bereaved with this hope.—Ed.

Died, in Dover, Oct. 24th, Lucretia S., daughter of Oliver and Betsy R. Wentworth, aged twenty-one years four months and fourteen days.

Died, in Kennebunk, Me., Oct 20, 1859, George E., son of George and Maria Christenson, aged three years and two months.

Also, Oct. 27th, Widow Judith Wentworth, aged eighty-four years and eleven months.

Death will, ere long, cease to destroy, and will himself be destroyed; then will all who sleep in Jesus eternally triumph. May God speed on the glad moment. W. H. B.

Peacefully retired from earth's rude scenes, our beloved Sister Carrie E. Brayton, aged sixteen years.

About two years since, while Bro. Grant was laboring in Danielsonville, she became a christian, not merely in name, but in humility, love and obedience. Many hearts lie bleeding beneath this heavy stroke, yet they sorrow not as those without hope,—they believe that Jesus died and rose again, and the promise is sure that those that sleep in him he will bring with him at the sounding of the last trump. The loved one that lies palsied in the chilling grave, will then arise. Her now decaying body will be changed like to the glorious body of Christ, never more to see corruption. Those eyes, now closed in the dimness of death, will then sparkle with more than natural brilliancy. That voice, now hushed in all the silence of the tomb, will, we doubt not, help swell the mighty anthems of praise to the Lamb who cleanses by his own blood from all sin, and will redeem from the power of the grave. May we all participate in the universal song of praise.

J. D. Roberts.

Died, in Brown Co., Illinois, Oct 31st, Elizabeth, wife of Samuel Twombly, aged eighty years and three months.

She was born in the state of New Hampshire,—spent her youthful days in the state of Vermont. There married, and soon after gave her heart to the Lord. She joined the Freewill Baptist church in Sheffield, Vt., and was an acceptable and devoted member during her stay East. Kept up family prayers under all circumstances. True to her covenant, she would call the family together daily, sing a hymn, and bow and offer prayer to the Giver of every good and perfect gift. They moved to this state in 1840. Here, for the first time, she heard the proclamation of the speedy coming Kingdom, and its kindred doctrines, from the lips of Bro. Chapman. She embraced them with a full heart, with sleep of the saints, destruction of the wicked also, which he proclaimed here faithfully at that time. Her faith was strong—prospects bright—her voice always heard on all proper occasions in favor of those glorious truths. She anticipated the day of deliverance, and hoped to live to witness the event.

She fell on sleep in good faith that she should rest quietly under the care of her Savior a short time, when, by the last trump, she would awake to life and immortality. She suffered much during her sickness, without a murmur, often saying, "Christ suffered for me and I am willing to suffer also." Her funeral sermon was preached by the writer, from Dan. 12 : 12, 13, to a crowded house. She has left a large circle of friends to mourn her loss. May her devoted life and example lead her children to serve God and greet her in the coming Kingdom.

Walter Pratt.

Fell asleep in Jesus, in Saccarappa, Me., Nov. 12th, Sister Jane R. Hezelton, wife of Bro I. Hezelton, Jr., aged twenty-nine years.

A few months ago I first became acquainted with the subject of this notice. At that time I found her sincerely inquiring after the right way, and endeavored to present to her mind the gospel hope, and the way to obtain that hope. This spirit of inquiry continued till a few weeks before her death, when she made a full surrender to Jesus, and found peace in believing. From that time to the last moment of life, she was the happiest person I ever saw. I had the privilege of seeing her a few days before she died, and truly it was a blessed interview indeed. Though fast wasting away and suffering much by consumption, she was patient, and perfectly resigned to the will of the Lord. Supposing it might be hard for her to bid farewell to her beloved companion and her little ones, I asked her if this was not a hard trial? "O no," she replied, "I have no trials now. I have given all up into the hands of Jesus." Although able to speak only in a whisper, and that with difficulty, she joined us in singing, "There is rest for the weary," in a voice so loud and melodious, that all were astonished. Never shall I forget the heavenly radiance that shone around her as she sang so sweetly. Her last words of encouragement to her christian friends, and solemn appeals to those unconverted to God, will never be forgotten by those who heard them. She [illegible] happy and peaceful [illegible] Her last words were [illegible] when she calmly fell asleep in full assurance of [illegible] soon to die no more.

At her request I attended the funeral, and truly I could say, "It is better to go to the house of mourning than to the house of feasting." Our dear Bro. H. is sadly afflicted; but cheered by the gospel hope, and sustained by the abundant grace of God, he can say, "all is well." May he, and his little ones, share largely in the prayers and sympathies of the saints of God.

"Peaceful be thy silent slumber,
Peaceful in the grave so low,
Thou no more shalt join our number,
Here no more our songs shalt know.

Yet again we hope to meet thee,
When mortality is fled;
Then in Eden we shall greet thee,
Where no farewell tears are shed."

R. R. York.

Yarmouth, Me., Nov. 24th, '59.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

[From Liverpool the 11th.]

Nothing yet has transpired regarding the projected Congress.

The three treaties were finally signed at Zurich, on the 10th, by the Plenipotentiaries, who were to leave for home on the 12th.

The Paris Constitutionnel exhorts the Italians to moderation and patience.

Tuscany has followed the example of the other States of Central Italy, and conferred the Regency on Prince Carignana.

The King of Sardinia, under the pressure from France, has refused to grant permission to Carignana to accept the Regency.

Affairs between Spain and Morocco remain unchanged from last advices.

The Russians had a large naval force at Jeddo. It was feared that trouble would arise, owing to the murder of three Russians by the Japanese.

ITALY.

The following is from the Italian correspondent of the London Daily News.

Florence, Nov. 2. In the last letter which I wrote to you from Bologna, I told you that Garibaldi had been hastily summoned to Turin by the Sardinian Government. Fanti followed him a few hours afterwards, and to-day I hear from Turin that both these generals had a long interview with King Victor Emmanuel. I am now in a position to state, on what I think to be good authority, that the affairs of Central Italy were freely discussed at that important meeting. I hear also that there is no doubt that the letter addressed by the Emperor to the King of Piedmont, under date of 20th October last, was the cause of Victor Emmanuel summoning the two commanders of the army of Central Italy to his royal presence. The cabinet at Turin, being fully convinced of the total impossibility of carrying out the plan suggested in that letter by Louis Napoleon, is now under the necessity of taking a decisive step towards a speedy solution of the Central Italian question.

My informant tells me that after the interview with the King was over, Garibaldi was heard to say that the hour for action was near at hand, and that both Victor Emmanuel and his ministers had finally determined to follow a more decided line of policy. I should not, therefore, be surprised at all if the telegraph from Rimini should bring the news that Garibaldi is on the eve of crossing the Tavollo on his way to Pesaro. This, at any rate, is the opinion, which, if I am rightly informed, prevailed here this morning among official people. All sensible men in Florence believe now that there is nothing to be expected from the Emperor, and that, regarding the letter to the King as the last expression of the Imperial will, the only chance which remains for Italy is to take the matter in her own hands, and to force Europe to accept her liberation as a fait accompli.

PRUSSIA.

Berlin, Nov. 8. It is stated on reliable authority that, at the interview held at Breslau, the Emperor of Russia and the Prince Regent of Prussia determined not to consent to a revision of the treaties of 1815, nor to take part in any congress in which England would not be represented; the last resolution being proposed by Prussia.

[One day later.]

The Patrie is assured that the King of Sardinia, in his reply to the Emperor, expressed confidence in the sympathies of the Emperor in favor of the Italian cause, and declares that he will leave to the decision of the Congress all that relates to the reorganization of Italy.

Garibaldi had subscribed 5000 francs to the million musket fund, and issued a stirring proclamation in furtherance of the scheme. The Florence correspondent of the Times says the subscription was filling beyond the most sanguine expectations.

The Times Paris correspondent says the election of Prince Carignana was received with extreme displeasure in Paris.

The Piedmontese government, having been requested from Paris to restrain the impetuous spirit of the Italian patriots, declared that it could not be responsible for the acts of populations over which the King was not permitted to exercise even a temporary control.

Farini, Dictator of Modena and Parma, and Provisional Governor of Romagna, had issued a proclamation, which says "Europe knows that it can secure the peace of Italy by rendering Italy to the Italians. It is aware that we are ready to give the necessary grantees for order throughout the country, but it also knows that the people of the Romagna, if forbearance and moderation should be of no avail, sooner than submit to the yoke, would be advised only by their duty to their country and the pursuit of the path of honor."

According to high authority, the American treaty with China would not go into effect until matters are settled with England and France.

The Chinese forts at the mouth of the Peiho had been strengthened, and the general bearing of the Chinese lead to the belief that they contemplated resistance.

Fresh hostilities had been commenced in Cochin China. The Anamese were repulsed with loss, in an attack on the French entrenchments.

The Times has an article showing the prevalent feeling in France on the question of a war with England. The chief authority for the opinions expressed is a respectable French Review, published in London. It is stated that in France the prospect of a war with England is incessantly discussed in the high places of power, in the public offices, in the army and navy, among the working classes, and men of business. The army is reported to be unanimous for war, in the navy the desire for it amounts to a frenzy. The Church is as eager as either army or navy. The conclusions are that in a war with England the French Emperor has the power to satisfy the army and navy, of gratifying the clergy, of winning over the Legitimists, and of securing the suffrages of an united people.

SPAIN AND MOROCCO.

The blockade of the coast of Morocco had been commenced by Spanish men of war.

The brother of the Sultan was encamped four leagues from Tangier, with about 12,000 horsemen. He is said to have received from the Sultan full power to grant the demands made by Spain, as the ultimatum of the 5th of October.

The Florence correspondent of the Times [illegible]

"Everything that Garibaldi takes in hand is sure to thrive. The subscription opened by him for the [illegible] not of 1000, but of 10,000, but of 1,000,000 of muskets, is filling fast, beyond his most sanguine expectation. His success is, indeed, so rapid, that he has found himself under the necessity of appointing two deputies for the management of the fund.

A Remarkable Astronomical Statement.—Professor O. M. Mitchel delivered, on Tuesday night, in Philadelphia, an astronomical lecture in which he gave the following remarkable statement:—

He had not long since met, in St. Louis, a man of great scientific attainments, who for forty years, had been engaged in Egypt in deciphering the hieroglyphics of the ancients. This gentleman stated that he had lately unravelled the inscriptions upon the coffin of a mummy in the London Museum, in which he had discovered the key to all the astronomical knowledge of the Egyptians. The zodiac, with the exact position of the planets, was delineated on this coffin, and the date to which they pointed was the autumnal equinox in the year 1722, before Christ, or nearly 3600 years ago.

Professor Mitchel employed his assistants to ascertain the exact positions of the heavenly bodies belonging to our solar system on the equinox of that year (1722 B. C.) and send him a correct diagram of them, without having communicated his object in doing so. In compliance with this the calculations were made, and to his astonishment, on comparing the result with the statements of his scientific friend already referred to, it was found that, on the 7th of October, 1722 B. C., the moon and planets had occupied the exact points in the heavens marked upon the coffin in the London Museum.

An Immense Iceberg.—Capt. Kirby, of ship Uncowah, at San Francisco from New York, reports that he passed an immense floating island of ice about fifty miles south of Cape Horn, on the 9th of August. It was eight to ten miles long, and very high—a solid mass of ice, against which the sea broke, as upon the iron-bound shores of a continent. At four miles distance the water about the ship was agitated with eddies and ripples caused by the opposing presence of so large a body to the usual ocean currents. The sides along which the ship passed appeared to be precipitous for more than a hundred feet from the water, when they broke up towards the peaks in the interior of the island, and down the steeps, the spy-glass showed the existence of great gullies and water courses. When the sun shone full upon the island it reflected the light with great brilliancy. It was a majestic spectacle.

Editorial Notices.

Errata.—In the last No. of the Crisis in the article on "The five Hells," for "Satan," etc., read Saturn "is said to have given the infernal regions to his son Pluto."

A little below this, for "Eates," read Fates.

☞ The "Christian Lyre" will be ready for delivery next week.

☞ Notice.—Those who may have sent in orders for "Fables of Infidelity," or "Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion," will please have patience till we receive a supply, when we will attend to them with due promptitude.

Notices, &c.

☞ The Discussion between Mr. Hudson and Mr. Cobb is being published as a book. It will make about 450 pages 12mo, and will be ready about the 20th of December. Price $1.00. It contains, of course, the Rejoinder to Mr. C.'s argument, which appeared in the Freeman for Nov. 18th. Bro. Hudson's argument will not be published separately in its present form, though he hopes to give a more full critique upon Universalism at some day, or years hence, God willing.

Those wishing the Discussion can secure it, by mail or otherwise, of Bro. Hudson, care of J. P. Jewett & Co., 20 Washington street, Boston. Also at the Crisis office, of Bro. Hastings or H. W. Pray, Providence, R. I., G. W. Young, 138 William St., New York, L. P. Judson, Lockport, N. Y., and S. C. Griggs & Co., Chicago, Ill.

A Request.

As I am unable to travel, I wish the brethren whom I have left my books with for sale would send them to me—those that are not sold, and the pay for those that are sold—40 cents each. I wish my brethren would be prompt in returning the books or cash. Let me hear from you, as I cannot come and see you. H. Munger.

Conference.

There will be a conference in Wilton, Iowa, or where the brethren in that vicinity may think best, commencing Wednesday, Dec. 21st, (eve.) and continue over the following Lord's day. Let there be a general gathering. Walter Pratt.

Conference

In Earlville, Ill., will commence on Wednesday, Jan 4th, 1860, and continue over the Lord's day following. One and all, come and pray the Lord to give us a feast.

W. Pratt.

☞ I will hold a conference in Elizabeth, Joe Davis Co., Ill., Wednesday, Jan 18th, and continue over Lord's day following. The brethren must write me if they wish the above named meeting, and name where (what depot) they will meet me. Direct Muscatine, Iowa, care of J. Covell.

Walter Pratt.

Notice.

There will be a quarterly meeting in Earlville, Lasalle Co., Ill., to commence Wednesday, Dec. 14th, 1859, in the evening, and continue over Sunday. We hope the church in that district will be well represented. We give a general invitation to all the preachers in that region to attend. It is expected that Bro. Walter Pratt will be there without fail, and the friends wish Bro. John Howell to be there. In behalf of the friends,

Moses Chandler.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

J. S. White will preach at [illegible] Sunday, Dec. 4th.

[illegible] I will preach in [illegible]

Miles Grant.

[illegible]

Eld. Wm. Sutherland will preach in

Palmer, Mass. .... Dec. 7th

(where Bro. Higgins may appoint.)

Brimfield .... Dec. 8th

Sturbridge .... Dec. 9th

(where Bro. Stone may appoint.)

Southbridge, (in Bro. A. Streeter's District) Sabbath, ... Dec. 11th

W. S. Campbell will preach at Peace Dale, R. I., the third Sunday in December, and at River Point the Friday evening before. At East Boston the first Sunday.

The Lord willing, Bro. J. W. Crabtree will preach in Pleasant Valley, Ct., Dec. 4th.

Wm. J. Ripley.

Eld. C. Goodrich will preach at

Lafayette .... Dec. 2d

Fisherville .... Dec. 4th

Bro. J. K. Bellows will preach in

North Adams .... Dec. 4th

Savoy, Mass. (and through the week) .... Dec. 5th

(as the brethren may arrange.)

Plainfield Pond, Mass. .... Dec. 11th

Goshen, Mass .... Dec. 12th

Chester Factories, Mass .... Dec. 13th and 14th

Blandford, (Bro. Henry's) .... Dec. 15th

New Boston, Mass. .... Nov. 16th

The Lord willing, I will preach at

Harwinton (Bro. Elliot's district,) .... Dec. 1st

Litchfield Station .... Dec. 2nd

(where Bro. G. Humphreyville may appoint.)

Newfield .... Dec. 4th

Pleasant Valley .... Dec. 6th

Wolcotville .... Dec. 7th

Plymouth Hollow .... Dec. 11th

L. S. Ludington.

Wm. B. Davis appoints to preach in

Northfield .... Dec. 4th

Bro. Joseph Gregory will meet with the brethren and sisters in

Roxbury, Ct. .... Dec. 3d

Wauramaug .... Dec. 6th

Business Matters.

To Correspondents.

J. D. C. Wheeler.—There is no vacancy now—will not be probably this winter.

G. S. Hitchcock.—Such a Bible as you speak of would probably cost from $5 to $6, and might be had in Boston or New York.

Jos. Whitman.—All right.

J. P. Babcock.—All right.

Cash Receipts.

P Brackett 234, $1 11, T Hay 219, 60 cts.; F T Wales 270, $1 25, W Bailey p. p. 244, $1.12, P Dagle $4 00, Mrs. F Eaton 234, $1 21.

W Edwards 231, S Stiles 231, W A Fox 231,—50 cents each.

G Doe 242, F S Diman 243, L F Chase 245, F T Wales, for poor, J Blaisdell 210, W Hale 218, K H Simons 245, I D Shaw 244, P H Walt 244, I D Fancher 244, M Cornell 244, Seth Smith 244, Mary Crane 244, W Harvey 234, G S Hitchcock 244, Jeff. Higgins 234, W F Leathe 234,—$1 00 each.

T P Perkins 234, H H Arnold 258, C Fairservice 248, E Wakeman 244, F T Gallop 244, Ira Fancher 306, Mrs. R P Freeman 270, J McCammon 244, J C Foster 244, W Fish 239, C W Buringer 244, L Clark 264, C W Sargent 234, A F Stark 253, D W Perry 208, J J Johnson 208,—$2 00 each.

D C Terry 247, W Woodman 284, M Green 218, W F Higgins for Worcester Brn.,—$3.00 each.

Books and Tracts.—Mrs. U Bucklin $1.00, L E Chase $1.00, A D Eastwood 28 cts, J N Boxwell $1.00, Eld. A Cleaveland $1.00, Dr. A Fuller 15 cts, R R York $1.00.

Books and Tracts.

Law requires all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on tracts is only one half cent per ounce, if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for any of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the Crisis, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

The Rich Man and Lazarus; Thief on the Cross, and the Souls under the Altar; with other interesting matter. By Miles Grant. Price, single, 5 cents; $3.00 per hundred; 1-4 off per dozen. Postage 1 cent.

The Soul—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words nephesh and psuche as employed in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant, Boston. 32 pp.; 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. They weigh about one ounce each. A valuable tract for the times. Get one.

The Spirit—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words ruakh and pneuma as found in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant. 32 pp., price 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. A valuable aid in the study of the Scriptures.

The Parable of the Rich Man and Lazarus, does it imply eternal future suffering? By C. F. Hudson. 24 pp. Price, 3 cts. single. $2.00 per hundred.

The Doctrine of Everlasting Punishment: a discussion of the question, "Do the Scriptures teach the doctrine of the eternal conscious suffering of the wicked?" Between Dr. J. Litch and Eld. Miles Grant. Price, single, 25 cts. Postage 8 cts. 1-4 off per dozen.

What is Man? A Bible view of his creation. The meaning of soul, spirit, death and hell, by Miles Grant. Price, single copy 5 cts; $3.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

"The Speechless Guest at the Marriage Feast," by John F. Cotton, being a short review of the parable, with statistical remarks of its illustration in the destruction of Jerusalem; and its positive negation of the doctrine of election and reprobation. Price 5 cts. single, postage 1 ct. $3.00 per hundred.

Anti-eternal Torment. By Edwin Burnham. Price 1 cent, single; 75 cts. per hundred. Postage 1 ct.

Death not Life: or the Destruction of the Wicked scripturally Established. By J. Blain, Baptist minister. Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cents single, postage 5 cents. Bound, 40 cents; postage 5 cents.

Church Debts. By W. Ramsey, D. D. A rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cts—postage 5 cts.

The Rights of Wrong, or, Is Hell Eternal? By C. F. Hudson. [illegible] copies for 20 cts. [illegible] hundred. Sold by G. W. Young [illegible] New York; Truman and [illegible] S. C. Griggs & Co., Chicago.

[illegible]

[illegible] designed for [illegible] by J. V. Himes [illegible] per dozen. Postage [illegible]

Bible meaning of [illegible] Hell. Price 2 cts. single; postage 1 ct.; $1 per hundred.

Words of Warning [illegible] single; postage 1 ct.; $1.50 per hundred [illegible]

English Bibles.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many singular circumstances connected with camp-meetings and revivals. Written by himself. This is a very entertaining work, and will be read with interest by all. Price 60 cts.—postage 10 cents.

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed; or Christ the promised Messiah. By [illegible] A. Seymour. An excellent tract to throw light upon the Scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $3.00 per hundred,—5 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

200 Stories for Children, compiled by T. M. Preble. An excellent collection of interesting incidents, well calculated to benefit the readers. Price 40 cents; postage 7 cents.

Foster's Letter and Tract on Hell, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage paid.

Son of God, by H. Grew, 10 cts. single; postage 1 cent.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Geneseo, N. Y. Price $1., postage paid.

An Appeal to Pious Trinitarians. By H. Grew. Price 3 cts., postage 1 ct.

The Saint's Inheritance, by Wm. Shepherd.—A good tract to give your neighbor. Price $4.00.

The Wicked not Immortal. Two hundred texts quoted to prove the destruction of the wicked. By Eld. Jacob Blain. Price 2 cents single; $1.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

The Great Error Exposed; or, Endless Misery not a Bible Doctrine. In this tract all texts relied on to prove endless misery are explained, and two hundred for destruction quoted. By Eld. Jacob Blain. Price 2 cents single; $2.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

We also have the following works, published and for sale by H. L. Hastings, Providence, R. I.

1.—The Voice of the Church on the Coming and kingdom of the Redeemer, or a history of the Reign of Christ on Earth, by D. T. Taylor, edited with a preface, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. 12mo. pp. 420, price $1, postage 18 cents.

2.—The Great Controversy between God and Man. Its origin, progress and termination, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. pp. 167, neatly bound in cloth, price 60 cents—postage 10c.

3.—Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion, and a Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. Edited with a preface, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. 12mo. pp. 122. Price, in paper covers, 30 cts.—postage 8 cts; cloth gilt, 40 cts.—post. 8 cts.

4.—The Fate of Infidelity: or the Dealings of Providence with Modern Infidels; together with an appendix, containing a brief account of the special judgments visited upon the early opposers of Christianity; by a converted Infidel. 1 vol. 18mo. pp. 175, cloth gilt, 35 cents—post-paid.

5.—Future Punishment: an Argument in two parts, from Reason and Scripture, by H. H. Dobney, Baptist minister of England; with an appendix on the State of the Dead, by John Milton. This work is one of patient thought and calm, and christian argument. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 312, price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

6.—Debt and Grace; or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C. F. Hudson. A most learned and valuable work, exhibiting great candor, ability and research, containing quotations from some four hundred writers of all ages and languages, and showing conclusively that eternal life is the peculiar privilege of the believer in Jesus Christ. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 480, price $1.25—post paid.

7.—Pauline Theology; or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. A convincing argument, deduced from a careful examination of every passage on the subject of Future Punishment in Paul's fourteen epistles. 12mo. pp. 54, 15 cts. single, $10 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

8.—The Old Paths: or the Primitive Doctrine of a Future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolic fathers, with arguments and remarks, by H. L. Hastings. pp. 48 12mo. 15 cts. single, $12 per hundred—post. 1c.

Important Questions—3 Nos., 4 pp. each. Price, per sett, 3 cts. single; $1.50 per hundred.

Fables of Infidelity, and Facts of Faith. By R. Patterson. 12mo. Price, postpaid, 15 cts; $6 per dozen.

Tracts on Prophecy, (bound,) 224 pp. Price, postpaid, 40 cts.

Tracts on Immortality, (bound,) 220 pp. Price, postpaid, 60 cts. Both volumes mailed for $1.

Tracts of 24 pages. Price, 5 cts. single copy; $3 per hundred: postage 1 ct. each, or half a cent per ounce if ordered to the amount of eight ounces or upwards.

1—Church not in Darkness; 2—The Three Worlds; 3—The Last Days; 4—Plain Truths; by Hastings. 5—Noah, his Age and Ours; 6—Desire of all Nations; 7—It is Done; by John Cumming. 8—A Voice of Warning; 9—New Heavens and Earth, by D. T. Taylor. 10—*Ancient Landmarks; 11—State of the Dead; by Milton. 12—Intermediate State, by Grew.

Tracts at 3 cents single copy; $1.50 per hundred: postage 1 ct. each, or half cent an ounce for packages of eight or more ounces.

1—Future Punishment; by Grew. 2—Scripture tract number one, Destiny of the Wicked. 3—Outline of the coast of Man; by Landon. 4—Key of Truth; 5—Man's Future State; by Sheldon. —6†Olive Leaves, by the sett.

Tracts at 2 cents single copy; $1 per hundred.

1—The Night Cometh; by J. Adey. 2—The Day of Judgment; by St. Cyril.

Tracts at 1 cent single copy; 50 cents per hundred.

1—Olive Leaves, separate; 2—Ancient Landmarks, separate, 3—Forty Questions on Immortality, 4—Scripture Statements, one, two, three, four, five and six.

The above Tracts are on hand, and orders can be filled at once. Let no orders [illegible] Orders with the cash are solicited. Persons ordering tracts should order as much or more than fifty cents worth, as packages of tracts containing eight ounces or more go cheaper than smaller quantities. Those who buy books to sell will receive [illegible] liberal discount. The poor can have them free by sending stamps to pay the postage,—[illegible] free, poor also.

Address H. L. Hastings, Providence, R. I.

For sale also by N. Branch, Moline, Ill.; G. W. Young, 138 William St., New York.

* The Landmarks are issued in setts of six. [illegible] which can be separated for distribution. The sett contains, The Coming and Kingdom of Christ; [illegible] 20,000 Baptists; the Duration of the Earth, by A. Clarke; Hope and Duty of the Church, by [illegible] ry; Restitution, by Cyril; Warning Voice, by Cotton Mather; Loving Christ's Appearing, by [illegible]

† The Olive Leaves are three neat [illegible] that can be separated for distribution [illegible] Little Children, Love one Another; two, The Resting Place; three, My Friends; four, [illegible] Love, five, Abundant Grace; six, [illegible] by Hastings. Just the thing [illegible] classes of saints and sinners.

Glad Tidings; or Bible proof that [illegible] and sin are to end in the universe by a [illegible] struction of [illegible] All texts on Future Punishment collected and arranged. By [illegible] Price [illegible] 1 cent.

The Three Kingdoms: or, the Kingdom of God the Father, the Kingdom of [illegible] of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a [illegible] as it was, as it is, and as it is to be [illegible] Publio. Price 50 cts per hundred [illegible] 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

☞ The above [illegible] obtained of our agent in [illegible] Barnes, No. 8 [illegible]

☞ The following [illegible] be had of [illegible] The Race, by [illegible] tery.

[illegible]

For the Crisis.

Death.

There's such a "thing as death;"
To those [illegible] bright;
[illegible] the [illegible] cutting off
What most impedes his flight."
It is a dreadful "act
Life's drama must contain;
One struggle keener than the rest,"
Of nature's fearful pain.

There's such a "thing as death;"
[illegible] "thus unsealed;"
[illegible] its galling "chains;"
ALL must be thus "enthralled."
Death "a once hidden star!"
No, 'tis the darkest night;
No "gentle radiance" emanates,
Nor feeblest ray of light.

There's such a "thing as death,"
For then the whole man dies;
All thought, and sense, and love are gone,
So God's own word replies.
Death is the curse of sin,
The holy truth declares;
Jehovah's mandate—guilty man—
And his displeasure bears.

There's such a "thing as death;"
Yet shall our conq'ring King
"From each sad remnant of decay"
His ransom'd followers bring.
Not death, but CHRIST, shall give,
With resurrection power,
The glory of our holy faith—
O haste the welcome hour!   R. G.

Philad., Nov. 15th, 1859.

For the Crisis.

The Baptism of the Holy Ghost.

CORRESPONDENCE.—No. 7.

DEAR SISTER G.:—I might have given you facts, derived from the writings of devoted christians, demonstrating the truth that the miraculous gifts of the Spirit have been manifested within the last two centuries; and even in this our day, there are those who could speak of miracles, and say, "We speak that we do know, and testify that which we ourselves have seen." But I will not protract these letters to that extent which would be necessary, in order to give you these illustrations.

I said that I would show in this epistle how the state of things, referred to in my last, might be brought about. I do not for a moment believe that we ought to seek for any one of these several gifts, nor offices, that were presented in my last. "How then shall we attain unto them?" I answer, in just the way that the primitive church attained. Did that company of disciples, assembled together in that "upper room" at Jerusalem, continue in prayer and supplication, with one accord, for the reception of divers gifts? No such intimation is recorded. But they did pray continually and unitedly for something—what was it? Need we be in any doubt respecting the specific object for which they prayed? For what had Jesus bid them "tarry" at Jerusalem? For what commanded them to "wait?" Answer. The "promise of the Father"—the reception of "power from on high." How did it come? A mighty baptism of the Holy Ghost descended upon them, and filled the room and all their hearts with its glorious "power!" What was the result? A divine unction accompanied the word preached by Peter, and the testimony given by the rest of the disciples, so that three thousand were convinced of the truth, and received it into good and honest hearts. People of various nations were enabled, by the gift of tongues, to understand in their own language the wonderful story of the crucified One. Union prevailed to such an extent as to carry conviction to the unbelieving heart that they were indeed Christ's disciples. There was no longer a rich disciple enjoying his wealth, while his poor brother suffered for food and raiment; but as members of one family, they ministered one to the other, sharing alike in love and harmony. Such was the state of the Jerusalem church, and we think that not one of its members ever suffered for lack of food or raiment, while another had a sufficiency for each. Such was the extent of their liberality toward one another, and toward others, in endeavoring to spread abroad the gospel, that by and by other churches, in other places, (for they did not all remove to Jerusalem and live together in a community) had to send means to relieve the wants of the "poor saints at Jerusalem." (They were not cast upon the city authorities for support.) And they did it "cheerfully" for the church at Jerusalem, and the church at Corinth, Rome, and Ephesus, were all one church, and had a mutual care and love one for the other. We have no account that they sold their possessions, and distributed their property, in any other place as they did at Jerusalem, and this was probably done because they well knew that in a few years their city was to be destroyed, and then they could no longer hold their possessions. And in this there was no compulsion, no law, as Peter evidently shows in his language to Ananias. [illegible] not in retaining a part of the price of the land, but in lying to the Holy Ghost, by pretending that what was offered was all the money received. Various miracles [illegible] by the power of the Spirit [illegible] were cast out—the [illegible] healed, and those who were sick [illegible] made whole. And [illegible]

[illegible] with the spirit of wisdom [illegible] with the word of knowledge—others had the gift of faith, and the gift of healing, &c. &c., and these were brought into effective action for the edification of the church, through the operation of the Spirit.

We therefore see that all this was brought about in answer to importunate, believing prayer; a prayer for the baptism of the Holy Ghost, embraced in the promise of the Father. Turn to Acts 4: 31.—"And when they had prayed, the place was shaken where they were assembled together; and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and they spake the word with boldness." Turn also to the eighth chap. 14: 15.—"Now when the apostles which were at Jerusalem heard that Samaria had received the word of God, they sent unto them Peter and John; who when they were come down, prayed for them, that they might receive the Holy Ghost; (for as yet he had fallen upon none of them, only they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus.) Then laid they their hands on them, and they received the Holy Ghost." These were a company of disciples who had embraced the gospel, and been baptized in the name of Jesus, but they had not received this gift of power, the baptism of the Holy Ghost. The apostle did not seem to think, as do many modern teachers, that it was enough that these persons had embraced the gospel—given themselves to the Lord, and publicly professed their faith by baptism; but they deemed it essential for them to receive the holy anointing—the unction of the Spirit—the establishing grace—the keeping power, in order that they might thus be qualified for the work of God. O, if ministers at the present day would thus feel and thus pray for the young convert, the world would not so often have occasion to triumph over the quickly apostatizing disciple! They need to receive the keeping power—to have impressed upon them the seal of the Spirit, which is the earnest of the inheritance until the redemption of the purchased inheritance.

Our business, our duty is, to seek with consecrated hearts, in the exercise of importunate believing prayer, for the Holy Baptism; and then, under its guiding, illuminating influence, we shall be enabled to understand what is the gift given us to edification, and through its power be assisted to occupy upon it for the good of others. I said believing prayer. Not hoping the blessing may sometime be ours, but after having first established the fact that the promise of the Father is unto us—it is "unto us," my sister—it is unto me, as one whom the Lord has called from darkness to light, then claim the blessing now. Not next week, not tomorrow, but now, just now, by simple faith, and the blessing embraced in the promise is ours! Every promise, my dear sister, belongs to God's saints. They are promissory notes, payable on demand. Now you want this specific blessing that is embraced in the "promise of the Father," it is not classed with Christ's promises, but detached therefrom, as one of special value, (and it is the most valuable note the christian holds in possession) now present your note at heaven's bank—"the banker is within," and you will draw therefrom the very thing and the full amount of that which is embraced in the note.

O how many have I seen reach out the "promise," and thus by faith embrace the blessing. "I do believe, I claim the blessing now. It is mine. It is mine." Then would quickly come the assurance, and next would flow from the lips the joyous shout of praise. Do you say, "O that looks presumptuous!" "I cannot thus believe without evidence." When you present a good note at the bank, what is the evidence upon which you rest your faith that it will be paid? Is it anything outside of the note? "O no," you say, "I have confidence in the man who gave me this note, and know that his name is current at the bank, therefore I shall receive the amount due." Very well, cannot you rest with the same confidence on the promise of God? Cannot you believe that the draft which you present—a draft given you by the Banker himself, through his agent Jesus Christ, will be responded to whenever you present it to him?

"But it seems like taking a step in the dark." So said a disciple a few weeks since, to one who was seeking to direct her to the point of present faith. The sister thus addressed, replied, "I have a book in my hand. Your eyes are closed, so that you neither see me, nor my book. You have heard of the book, and of its value, by those who have obtained it, and you desire greatly to possess it. I say to you I have the book, and if you will extend your hand, I will give it to you. Now, although you see neither me, nor the book, yet if you have faith in my word, would you not extend your hand to receive it?" "Yes," said she, "I would." Just there her faith took hold, and also that of another disciple who stood near listening attentively, and as they believed, the power of the Holy Ghost descended upon them, and they fell overcome by its revelation, and lay for hours prostrate in the arms of some sisters; their countenances shining with the glory that filled their souls, and occasionally their lips whispering forth the praises of the Lord. And it was then [illegible] faith that [illegible] that night received the Spirit's baptism, and thirteen lay slain by its power.

Some will turn away from this, and say that it was excitement, or Magnetism. On the day of Pentecost they scoffingly said, "These men are filled with new wine." Of course, had they not presented somewhat the strange, out-of-the-way appearance of drunken persons, they would not have been thus accused. But now this accusation can no longer be consistently pleaded, and so it is charged to another. But whatever influence it was that came upon these disciples referred to, it came very quickly, in answer to a simple, believing prayer, offered just where they were sitting or standing. To God it was offered—the "promise of the Father" was the one note presented. Did the devil come, and through an agent of his breathe upon them mesmeric power? We were an eye-witness, and if it was not the Holy Spirit moving in subduing power upon those, we confess that we are ignorant of its manifestations. No boisterousness was manifest there for five hours, during which this work of faith went on, but such a sacred awe—such a consciousness that God was there imparting power to the weak, and to those that had no might increasing strength, I never before saw.

When we become familiar with the brief experiences of those of olden times—the three thousand on the day of Pentecost—the Ethiopian in his chariot—the jailor and his family, and the baptisms granted in immediate answer to the prayer of faith, we shall no longer doubt the "shorter way."

Yours,   M. D. W.

For the Crisis.

Conference in Hancock Co., Oct. 26.

(Report concluded)

Our meeting in this place was very good. It was held in a new school-house built last season. It was not central for the friends, hence, not so large a gathering as we could desire. The Baptists took the responsibility of closing the doors of the house against us, which house was partly built by our brethren with an understanding they (Advent brethren) should occupy it a certain portion of the time. But without any ceremony or understanding they shut us out, and the Lord also, no doubt. I preached seven sermons, scattered tracts among the people, and left the seed for the Lord to give the increase. Bro. Scott is doing what he can to supply that region. After getting little rest, we started for the CONFERENCE IN BROWN CO., NOV. 2D.

After a pleasant ride of some thirty-five miles,—as good roads as you ever saw, and you would hardly have dreamed there ever was any mud here—weather as beautiful as May,—we arrived at the pilgrim's hotel, at Mt. Pleasant, so called. Although the place is quite pleasant, the Mount is much wanting to make the name significant—very level prairie. We had no one to help, hence the preaching fell on me. I gave them eight discourses. The congregation increased during the meeting, and quite a portion could not get inside of the house. The word no doubt was treasured up by many, and by the blessing of God I hope to see or hear of the fruit at some future time. Of course I did not forget to scatter tracts. I have not done with this place yet.

I am inclined to think there are a number of jewels in this community that will be gathered. I will wait patiently and see. There is one serious objection to our meetings here; the house is too small to hold the people; although a good sized school-house, yet not large enough. There is a meeting-house within thirty feet of said school-house, that was built partly by brethren and in use only part of the time, but too sacred to let one of God's servants preach the most glorious truths that infinite wisdom has revealed to mortal man.

If rejecting the message of God in past days, stand as a witness against that people, what will be the condition of those who shut their doors against the last great and all-important message God is giving to a perishing world? Will not the Ninevites and Jews rise in judgment and condemn them? Will not God say thou hast rejected my word and I will reject thee? Does not Christ say, as much as ye did it unto the least of these my brethren, ye did it unto me? Who would not tremble for fear of the judgments that hang over nominal christendom in consequence of their fearful position. O unhappy church! have you gone so far there is no recovery? Will it be said of you as it was said of those in our Lord's day, "O! if thou hadst known in this thy day the things that belong to thy peace; but now are they hid from thy eyes."

Ye ministers, listen to the voice of God while he speaks in mercy. Ye professors, hearken to the message of love and the last awful warning. Speak, ye servants, before ye stand dumb, gazing on the Judge of quick and dead! Arise! all ye that are resting on your lees, before the Master shuts the door and you are found without!

W. PRATT.

☞ A lazy christian will always want four things—comfort, content, confidence and assurance. Assurance and joy are choice donatives that Christ gives to laborious christians only. The lazy christian has his mouth full of complaints, when the active christian has his heart full of comfort.

For the Crisis.

Religion.

IS IT PROGRESSIVE IN PRINCIPLE?

(Continued.)

Our forefathers, in the laws against the violation of the christian Sabbath, and other serious faults, even the enactments forbidding certain liberties of speech,—not to forget the statute against scolding with the penalty of ducking,—were in the extreme, we grant; but what was that extreme? Was it the extreme of superstition? Was it the bondage of bigotry? Was it the real enchainment of the press, of opinion, of speech? Was it not the extreme of morality and religion; which, owing to the weakness of human nature, gave erroneous views concerning it, and made coercion one of the necessities of the operation of morals, as well as the reaction from abuses in the old countries which took on these excrescences?

I have seen a noble oak, one of thrifty growth withal, which winds could not move, with wide shelter and umbrageous shade, but with many an excrescence, many a gnarl, often very uncouth,—still it would always leave out in spring time—it would bear the seeds of other trees—it was sound timber. We are now, if you please, scioning from that old Puritanical and theological oak which our forefathers planted and cultured. We find the heart sound; and while many a notion they entertained concerning man and government, with some of God, some of law and morals, may have been wrong, the firm root was in the ground of godliness and truth—the religious element was the great one. Suppose it was somewhat misdirected; it was radically of the right stamp. It was the operative force of the movement to plant religious and civil freedom on our shores. Still the ages must progress.

The Puritanic establishment of worship in New England was a link in the connection of the ages—a step in their process. Yet who would abandon the testimony of the ages? It is not what our age is, or may be, as such; but in a relative point of view; for without the ages we had had no age. Ours is one of the great fraternity. In the immense brotherhood, who shall excel? and by how much? And yet would you admit, with whatever excellence, which is independent—the superiority of this over all others—the super-excellence of to-day above the indefinite yesterday? Would you again be happy to admit that the darkest hour of past time, black with the record of human defection and degeneracy, when Letters sunk in obscurity, and morals mourned the veil of midnight—is brother to the latest noon-period of theologic and philosophic light? As sure as the midnight gloom is inseparably united to the noon-tide glory, by the action of the same sun.

The earlier ages may indeed have paternity; and while the latest cannot be separated, we discover unmistakable evidence that the growth of the later proposes and secures illimitable improvement. There is no end to improvement, especially in christianity. The darkness, abiding on the nations by the long dominion of Paganism, could not cloud the sun of truth which rose with the birth of Mary's Son; that grew into glory and power by the spread of the gospel; that became the great aggressive force upon the ignorance of the heathen mind, and planted itself in the affections of men as well as in their understandings. Its birth was a divine fire lit on the mountains of idolatry. Its very inception was the beginning of the world's progress. Its motto—the watchword of improvement to all successive generations.

In the ages which followed the first victorious achievements of the truth over the combined forces of darkness and ignorance, the ages of superstition and bigotry; when religion stood in forms in a splendid and yet frigid outward performance; with nothing to redeem it from its idolatrous degeneracy, its practical worship of images, but some abstract doctrines—a few terms and names which had been retained from the pure theology and spiritual worship of the gospel—then religion lived; then there was worship in the hearts and lives of the faithful; and then the true progressive spirit of the gospel developed itself; and because the theology of such was in itself a process, moving man forward to the noble and glorious end of his being and illumination; because the knowledge of God inspired the desire and the effort to improve, and at the same time imparted the hope of success. Reactionary as were all the established forces of the christian world over all the land, and the ages of papal domination, the true, divine element of improvement lived on, firm and perpetuous, in the souls of men. Underlying the whole was a theology which made men religious, and strengthening each fortress secured, reaching forward to explore new fields, it was prepared to seize the favorable moment to revolutionize. As if rising for the first time, its banner is unfurled on every plain; its signal fires lighted on every hill; the old battle-cry renewed; the great demand is improvement; that is obtained as a position, and that is the constant accomplishment of the reformation. The certain extermination of error follows. Persecutions prevailed; but by the very principle, here involved, persecution could never succeed. In its worst form, it was ever at a disad-vantage; and by all the means it could employ, [illegible] its advantage, because it brought to man a religion based on a theology which led to his improvement, and, appealing to his heart, with his own necessity, its inspiration secured the avenue to the prize, with light thrown along, and aid at every step.

That the religion which is adapted to the wants of mankind is progressive in its very elements of being, is plain, from the fact that in all instances in which it has appeared, after depression, in the brightness of a new victory, its improvement is manifest—the conception of God, which secures the existence of worship, and this makes the religion a man will seek for, improve with the faculty to know the divine. While, therefore, the abstract revelation of God need not be improved—will not be—cannot be—the theological mine can be and must be theologically explored. Quarrying from the great rock of revelation, we finish for adjustment, in the great building, those truths which will make a perfect structure. True, men may err in the ideal, and, again, in the attempt to measure the ideal by the facts, there may be errors; but without the ideal there can be no improvement, because there can be no aim. In this condition, precisely, lay the multitude, for ages, who were so deeply engulphed in the gloom of papal blindness and misapprehension; but these were religionists; and so were pagans before them. Christians indeed, with the pure worship arising from pure theology, i. e., pure for the time, were religionists; but they had a basis which was operative—an active faith—not taking hold merely of the future world; but the future of this world—an ideal—an aim—which could not but require advancement.   W. S. C.

For the Crisis.

Heavenly Mansions.

Mansions! bright mansions are waiting for me,
Jesus, my Savior, has gone to prepare;
This is my hope, for by faith I can see,
Though one of the least, I have a home there.
I know that my Lord will come and receive,
And welcome me soon, to those mansions fair;
Then his blessed presence no more I shall leave,
Clothed in the robe that makes me an heir.
The night is far spent, the day is at hand,
Let us rejoice, for redemption draws nigh!
Soon, soon we shall reach that long promised land,
For which, and its mansions, we daily now sigh.

Our dear precious ones, whose loss we deplore,
In those "many mansions" soon we shall meet;
Oh! then what greetings on that shining shore,
When we lay down our crowns at Jesus' feet.
Father, mother, brothers and sisters dear,
And many beloved have wasted away,
A cheerful adieu they bade to us here,
In confident hope to awake "in that day."
The last, just budding into manhood's prime,
Died "in the Lord," and by faith had a sight
Of Eden restored, and that happy clime—
His home in those mansions, those mansions bright.

Now, as over life's stormy sea I glide,
By faith embarked on a favoring sail
That will waft me at home, I have a sure guide,
For Jesus is near to hush the loud gale;
Toward my dear home I'd soar like a bird,
While Jesus, my Captain, is guiding me there.
Or, like a winged cloud by gentle breeze stirred,
While onward and onward I go in his care.
With faith and hope firm, life's storms we outride,
And reach the celestial city of light,
For Jesus has promised—in him I confide,
He's gone to prepare mansions—mansions all bright.

Those mansions most holy! when shall I behold,
The Lamb has purchased—that here was once slain—
In that city whose streets are all of gold,
Where never can enter a sin nor stain?
The gates, night and day, stand open there,
Where enter the ransomed to dwell evermore,
The burdens of sorrow, and sin, and care,
Are left behind, on Time's trackless shore.
Moments! roll swiftly till Jesus shall come,
And give the Life-crown to all dear in his sight,
To bestow on his servants the plaudit, "Well done!"
And welcome them home to those mansions of light.   MRS. ALLEN

Selections.

Love of Money.

It brought down cruel stones on the head of Achan and his wife, and sons and daughters. It was within an hair's-breadth of driving the angel's sword through Balaam's breast. It turned Gehazi into a leper as white as snow. It set Judas on betraying Jesus, "his own familiar" Lord and Master.

And what myriads of souls it has ruined since! I recollect a terrible case, some years ago, of a mother murdering her own first-born for his purse. He was discharged from the army together with another, and they went home in company to the village. As they approached it, they talked about the surprise which it would be to their relatives, and they concluded to try whether or not they would know them, by introducing themselves as strangers—travellers who would be glad of a night's lodging, and pay handsomely for it. The mother of the first was completely deceived, and no sooner had he retired to his room, than she determined to get rid of him for his heavily laden purse. She persuaded a negro to strike the fatal blow as he lay asleep, and they buried him, by the light of the moon, in the back-yard. In the morning, his comrade came laughingly round and asked for Jack, but could hear nothing of him. Then he inquired of the woman if she had not a son in the army. She had. "Well," said he, "I can declare that I parted from him at the head of the lane which leads to your cottage, at such an hour yesterday, and he told me that he should not tell you who he was until to-day, to see if you would recognize him. I am confident he is here somewhere." The wretched woman fainted, and then confessed her crime. She had, in her "love of money," imbued her hands in the blood of her own son.

When that splendid California steamer, the Central America, caught fire and was sinking, the [illegible] ran to the cabins of the passengers, and collected all the gold she could. She then tied it in her apron round her waist. A boat was ready to start. [illegible] to be saved, she sprang from the deck, missed her aim, and shot head first into the brine like a cannon-ball, the weight of her ill-gotten booty dragging her down as effectually as a mill-stone would have done!—Rev. James Bolton.

Scotland's Maiden Martyr.

If to words that so beautifully and tenderly set forth the tender sympathy which Christ, as their Head, cherishes for his beloved people, I could venture to add any that ever fell from mortal lips, I would select those of Margaret Wilson, Scotland's Maiden Martyr.

Some two hundred years ago, there was a dark period of suffering in this land, when deeds of bloody cruelty were committed on God's people, not outdone by Indian butcheries. One day the tide is flowing in the Solway Frith, rushing like a race horse, with snowy mane, to the shore. It is occupied by groups of weeping spectators. They keep their eyes fixed on two objects out upon the wet sands. There two women, each tied fast by their arms and limbs to a stake, stood within the sea mark; and many an earnest prayer is going up to heaven that Christ, who bends from the throne to the sight, would help them now in their hour of need. The eldest of the two is staked farthest out. Margaret, the young martyr, stands bound, a fair sacrifice, near by the shore. Well, on the big billows come, hissing to their naked feet; on, and further on they come, death riding on the top of the waves, and eyed by those tender women with unflinching courage. The waters rise and rise, till, amid a scream and cry of horror from the shore, the lessening form of her that had death first to face, is lost in the foam of the surging wave. It recedes, but only to return; and now, the sufferer gasping for breath, the death struggle is begun; and now for Margaret's trial and her noble answer. "What see you yonder?" said their murderers, as, while the water rose cold on her own limbs, they pointed her attention to her fellow confessor, in the suffocating agonies of a protracted death. Response, full of the boldest faith and brightest hope, and all the divine unfathomed consolation of my text to you, she firmly answered, "I see Christ suffering in one of his own members." Brave and glorious words! borrowed in that hour from the precious language of my heart, and leading us to the Apostle's most comforting and sublime conclusion, "We have not an high priest that cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities, but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin. Let us therefore come boldly to the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy and find grace to help in time of need."—Dr. Guthrie.

The Reward.

A minister in the early part of the seventeenth century was preaching before an assembly of his brethren, and in order to direct their attention to the great motive from which they should act, he represented to them something of the great day of judgment. Having spoken of Christ as seated on his throne, he described him as speaking to his ministers, examining how they had preached, and with what views they had undertaken and discharged the duties of the ministry.

"What did you preach for?" "I preached, Lord, that I might keep a good living that was left me by my father, which, if I had not entered into the ministry, would have been wholly lost to me and my family." Christ addresses him, "Stand by, thou hast had thy reward."

The question is put to another, "And what did you preach for?" Lord, I was applauded as a learned man, and I preached to keep up the reputation of an excellent orator, and an ingenious preacher." The answer of Christ to him also is, "Stand by, thou hast also had thy reward."

The Judge then puts the question to a third, "And what did you preach for?" "Lord," said he, "I neither aimed at the great things of this world, though I was thankful for the conveniences of life which thou gavest me—nor did I preach that I might gain the character of a wit, or of a man of parts, or a fine scholar—but I preached in compassion to souls, and to please and honor thee; my design, Lord, in preaching, was that I might win souls to thy blessed Majesty!"

The Judge was now described as calling out, "Let this man come and sit with me on my throne, as I am set down with my Father on his throne; he has owned and honored me on earth, and I will own and honor him through all the ages of eternity."—Ex.

Bad Temper.

A bad temper is a curse to the possessor, and its influence is most deadly wherever it is found. It is allied to martyrdom to be obliged to live with one of a complaining temper. To hear one eternal round of complaint and murmuring, to have every pleasant thought scared away by their evil spirit, is a perpetual nettle, destroying your peace, rendering life a burden. Its influence is deadly; and the purest and sweetest atmosphere is contaminated into a deadly miasma wherever this evil genius prevails. It has been said truly, that while we ought not to let the bad temper of others influence us, it would be as unreasonable to spread a blister upon the skin, and not expect it to draw, as to think of a family not suffering because of the bad temper of any of its inmates. One string out of tune will destroy the music of an instrument otherwise perfect; so if all the members of a church, neighborhood and family do not cultivate a kind and affectionate temper, there will be discord and every evil work.—Steel.

OLD GRUDGES.—A writer in the Congregational Journal says:—

"I take this opportunity to say that, according to my acquaintance and prayerful observation of many of our feeble churches, the greatest cause of decline, and of the withholding of God's blessing, are old grudges among the brethren and sisters, and a destitution of family religion. Old grudges are like old ulcers within the body, unseen except by their effects, wasting away the moral and spiritual life of man, and imparting to it an effluvium that poisons the whole atmosphere of Zion."

Reading for Youth.

Spare Moments.

A lean, awkward boy, [illegible] morning to the door of the principal of a celebrated school and asked to see him. The servant eyed his mean clothes, and thinking he looked more like a beggar than anything else, told him to go around to the kitchen. The boy did as he was bidden, and soon appeared at the back door.

"You want a breakfast, more like," said the servant-girl, "and I can give you that without troubling him."

"Thank you," said the boy, "I should have no objections to a bit of bread; but I should like to see Mr. ——, if he can see me."

"Some old clothes, may be, you want," remarked the servant, again eyeing the boy's patched trowsers. "I guess he has none to spare; he gives away a sight;" and without minding the boy's request, she was away about her work.

"Can I see Mr. ——?" again asked the boy, after finishing his bread and butter.

"Well, he's in the library; if he must be disturbed, he must; but he does like to be alone sometimes," said the girl, in a peevish tone. She seemed to think it very foolish to admit such an ill-looking fellow into her master's presence; however, she wiped her hands, and bade him follow. Opening the library door, she said:

"Here is somebody, sir, who is dreadful anxious to see you, and so I let him in."

I don't know how the boy introduced himself, or how he opened business, but I know that after talking a while, the principal put aside the volume which he was studying, and took up some Greek books and began to examine the new comer. The examination lasted some time. Every question which the principal asked, the boy answered as readily as could be.

"Upon my word," exclaimed the principal, "you certainly do well," looking at the boy from head to foot over his spectacles. "Why, my boy, where did you pick up so much?"

"In my spare moments," answered the boy.

Here he was, poor, hard-working, with but few opportunities for schooling, yet, almost fitted for college, by simply improving his spare moments. Truly, are not spare moments the "gold dust of time?" How precious they should be! What account can you show for them? Look and see. This boy can tell you how very much can be laid up by improving them; and there are many, many other boys, I am afraid, in jail, in the house of correction, in the forecastle of a whale-ship, in the tippling shop, who, if you should ask them where they began their sinful course, might answer, "In my spare moments."

"In my spare moments I gambled for marbles."

"In my spare moments I began to smoke and drink. It was in my spare moments that I began to steal chesnuts from the old woman's stand. It was in my spare moments that I gathered wicked associates."

Oh, be very careful how you spend your spare moments! Temptation always haunts you in small seasons like these, when you are not busy; he gets into your hearts, if he possibly can, in just such gaps. There he hides himself, planning all sorts of mischief. Take care of your spare moments.—Mrs. C. Knight.

Like Jesus.

I want to be like Jesus,
So lowly and so meek;
For no one marked an angry word
That ever heard him speak.

I want to be like Jesus,
So frequently in prayer,
Alone upon the mountain top—
He met his Father there.

I want to be like Jesus,
Engaged in doing good;
So that of me it may be said—
"She hath done what she could."

Alas! I'm not like Jesus,
As any one may see;
O gentle Savior, send thy grace,
And make me more like thee!

Don't Tattle.

Children, don't talk about each other. Don't call one of your schoolmates ugly, another cross, behind their backs. It is the meanest sort of sin. Even if they are ugly, stingy, or cross, it does you no good to repeat it. It makes you love to tell of faults—it makes you uncharitable—your soul grows smaller—your heart loses its generous blood, when you tattle about your friends. Tell all the good you know about them, and carry their sins in your heart; or else tell them to God and ask Him to pardon them. That will be Christlike. If anybody says to you, "Oh! that Mary Willis did such a naughty thing!" call to mind some virtue that Mary possesses, and hold it up to her praise. For your own sake, learn to make this habit.—Young Reporter.

THE CRISIS.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION,

Payable in Advance.

For a single copy one year..........$2.00
For a single copy 6 months..........1.00
For a single copy 3 months..........50
Five copies to one address for 6 months...4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months...8.00
Twenty copies to one address, 6 months...15.00
Thirty copies to one address, 6 months $2[illegible].00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the paper within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability, when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send as much in addition to their subscriptions as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts, and 26 cents to any other part of the United States.

[illegible]

The World's Crisis.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 221. BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 7, 1859. VOL. X. NO. 14.

The World's Crisis
IS PUBLISHED
EVERY WEDNESDAY MORNING
AT
No. 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
HENRY V. DAVIS, JOHN COUCH, | MILES GRANT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

MILES GRANT, Editor.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially, the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and the final destruction of the wicked.

For terms, see fourth page.

Original Contributions.

For the Crisis.

The Chief of Sinners.

If there's a depth in Jesus' love,
Deepest of all that boundless sea,
Highest of all the heights above,
Be that for me.

If there's a penitence more deep
Than ever other sinners see—
A bitterer tear than others weep—
Be that for me.

If there's a cross more hard to bear
Than those of all thy children be,
O! while I in thy mercy share,
Be that for me.

If there's a tearful, gloomy path,
That leads at last to rest with thee,
Though on it Satan pours his wrath,
Be that for me.

If there's a wilder, fiercer storm,
Than all that other voyagers see,
A sadder fate, "a hope forlorn,"
Be that for me. H. L. M.

For the Crisis.

On the Pre-existence of the Son of God.

BELOVED BRETHREN IN THE LORD:—The inspired apostle has well exhorted us to guard against the subtle devices of the Adversary. If he fails to keep us in the belief of an error, he will attempt to drive us over the line of truth to an erroneous extreme. If he cannot induce us to rob the FATHER of the glory of being "The ONLY true God," John 17: 1—3, by persuading us to give that glory to other persons, he will tempt us to rob the SON of the glory of being "the FIRST BORN of every creature," Col. 1: 15; the very "BEGINNING of the creation of God," Rev. 3: 14; associated with him in glory "before the world was."—John 17: 5. These plain and positive testimonies of his personal, veritable existence having precedence of that of all other created intelligences, are confirmed by many others of like import.

Our blessed Lord told his disciples that he "came down from heaven."—John 6: 38. He declared the same fact to Nicodemus.—"No man hath ascended up to heaven, but he that came down from heaven, even the Son of man whose abode is heaven" (G. Campbell).—John 3: 13. "What and if ye shall see the Son of man ascend up where he was before?"—John 6: 62. "For the bread of God is HE which cometh down from heaven" etc., 33 verse. "I came forth from the Father, and am come into the world; again, I leave the world, and go to the Father. His disciples said unto him, Lo, now speakest thou plainly, and speakest no proverb."—John 16: 28, 29. Is it not most manifest, dear brethren, that he was truly and literally with the Father, before he came into the world? Is it true that he spake plainly and "no proverb," if this is denied?

If we may figure away the obvious import of these testimonies that he "came down from heaven," at his first appearing, may we not with equal propriety figure away the obvious import of the no plainer passages, which teach us his second appearing?

Both John, his Harbinger, and his apostles, who succeeded him in the ministry of the glorious Gospel of the blessed God, have established the great truth of his glorious pre-existence.

"He that cometh from heaven is above all."—John 3: 31. "This is he of whom I said, after me cometh a man which is preferred before me: for he was before me."—John 1: 30. So our Lord, when the Jews "said unto him, thou art not yet fifty years old, and hast thou seen Abraham?" replied, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, before Abraham was, I am."—John 8: 58.

Another conclusive argument of the pre-existence of the Son of God, is found in the repeated plain declaration of the fact, that he was the actual agent of the Father, in the creation of the world. The apostle states this fact ... that he is "the first-born of every creature." "Who is the image of the invisible God, the first-born of every creature, for by (or through) him [illegible] and that are in earth." etc.—Col. 1: 15, 16. Whatever translation we may give to the Greek preposition en, it is evident from his argument that the apostle believed that the Son was an active, living agent in the work of creation; otherwise, it fails utterly to prove his declaration that Jesus Christ was "the first-born of every creature;" which our Lord himself teaches us imports, not simply that he is the chief but "the BEGINNING of the creation of God."—Rev. 3: 14. The apostle affirms the same fact to the Hebrews, chap. 1: 3.—"By whom also (the Son) he (God) made the worlds." To the church at Ephesus also, 3: 9.—"God, who created all things by Jesus Christ."

Moreover, the apostle John declares that the Word "was in the beginning, (Gen. 1: 1,) with God,"—John 1: 2, and that "All things were made by him; and without him was not any thing made that was made," verse 3; "the world was made by him," verse 10. The personality of the Word is proved, not only by the application of the personal pronoun (v. 3) but also by the identification of the Word with the son of God, verse 14.—"And the Word was made flesh ("a body hast thou prepared ME," Heb. 10: 5) and dwelt among us, (and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father,) full of grace and truth." The glory of the Word and the glory of the only begotten Son, is one and the same. "His name is called The Word of God," Rev. 19: 13, with significant propriety; for as a word is the medium of communication of mind to others, the Son, who is the "one Lord BY whom are all things, "Heb. 8: 6, is the grand medium of communication of the mind of the "one God the Father, OF whom are all things, to his intelligent creatures. "No man hath seen God at any time; the only begotten Son (the Word in the 14th verse) which is in the bosom of the Father, he hath declared him."—John 1: 18. "Let this mind be in you, which was in Christ Jesus; who being in the form of God, thought not the being like God, a thing to be seized, (or tenaciously retained) but made himself of no reputation and took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men" etc. Such, it is, believed, is the import of the passage. Whether, however, it is so or not, the passage evidently implies a pre-existent state of glory, which he voluntarily gave up for a time, for the great work of our salvation. The inspired apostle represents him, in this wondrous fact, as an example of voluntary humility. He "made himself of no reputation" in being willing to be "made in the likeness of men." The supposition that he never actually existed before, ignores this truth. There is no voluntary humility on the part of any creature in being made in a particular manner, if he never existed in a superior manner before. The supposition divests the passage of its force and beauty. If, on the contrary, we believe our Lord himself, that he enjoyed glory with the Father before the world was, John 18: 5; we have here the most striking example of humility ever presented to the intelligent universe.

Other passages, though not expressing so plainly and positively the pre-existence of our blessed Lord as those I have quoted, appear to imply it. Peter wrote that it was "the Spirit of Christ which was in" the prophets which "testified beforehand the sufferings of Christ, and the glory that should follow."—1 Peter 1: 11. The Spirit of Christ, therefore, which subsequently took the body prepared him, must have then existed. By comparing Isa. 6: 1—8, with John 12: 41, it appears to prove, that the prophet saw both the Father and the Son. The words Adonai and Jehovah are both used by the prophet. Although the Lord, in our version, is in capitals, it is not Jehovah in the Hebrew, which word occurs in the third verse. The plural word us is also used in the eighth verse; "who will go for us." See also Ps. 110: 1. But we need not adduce these and other passages in this discussion. The plain and simple declaration of "The faithful Witness" of the Truth, "I CAME DOWN FROM HEAVEN," settles the controversy. I challenge my dear christian brethren to adduce anything from the living oracles, which can outweigh its literal import, on any just principle of biblical interpretation.

And now, I ask, on what scriptural, rational, or philosophical principle, do we object to the one God and Father of all, creating or begetting a Son to be "the brightness of his glory, and the express image of his person," who shall excel all other created beings in dignity of nature and glory of perfections? Is it said that he is called "the man Christ Jesus," "the son of man," "the son of David? Why do we stumble here, my brethren, when the apostle plainly and repeatedly informs us, that it was "according to the flesh," and "concerning the flesh" that he was so; plainly intimating that concerning another nature, he had some other origin, and positively declaring that in respect to that superior nature, he is "the Son of God."—Rom. 1: 3, 4. 9: 5. He who was of "the fathers—as concerning the flesh—is over all, God blessed forever." The Father, who is God supreme,—John 17: 1—3, has anointed him in the high office of God or Ruler in Zion, having put all things under him, himself only excepted.—1 Cor. 15: 27. Heb. 1: 8, 9.

Rom. 1: 3, 4, is an instructive passage on the subject of his two natures. The term translated "Spirit of holiness," is never used in reference to the Holy Spirit of God, it refers to Christ's pre-existing Spirit as the "first begotten" Son of God, and "first-born of every creature."

To the honor of him who is both "the root and offspring of David; the bright and morning star, which, according to our Father's infinite wisdom and love, has arisen on this benighted world, I submit, dear brethren, these considerations, as your servant for Jesus' sake. H. G.

Phila. Nov. 7th, 1859.

For the Crisis.

The Beast of Rev. 17.

BRO. GRANT:—I feel desirous of presenting to the readers of the Crisis the following extracts from "The Divine History of the Church," by the Rev. Frederic Fysh, M. A., as I consider all testimony that has a tendency to throw light on the glorious volume of Inspiration, of vast importance to every sincere lover of, and diligent inquirer after, truth. It is not for the sole reason that it corresponds with my own views for some years past, but it looks like truth to me. Please let others read and decide for themselves.

"1. THE BEAST THAT WAS AND IS NOT. It has been already observed that the fourth beast of Daniel corresponds, in its early stage, to the dragon; in its later, to the beast of St. John. It corresponds, in its Pagan state, to the beast. In one respect, therefore, the beast of St. John is a continuation of the dragon; in another respect it is different.

2. The beast ascends out of the abyss, and goes into perdition. The origin of popery is from Satan, from 'the abyss' of hell. The end of popery is destruction: it 'goes into perdition.'

3. The inhabitants of the earth 'wonder; whose names were not written in the book of life from the foundation of the world.'

* * * *

8. They are also seven kings. These 'kings,' or ruling powers, are (1) kings; (2) consuls; (3) dictators; (4) decemvirs; (5) military tribunes with consular authority; (6) Pagan emperors who refused the diadem. Of these, the first 'five had fallen' in John's time; the sixth was then in existence, the seventh was not yet come, and when it did come, he only continued 'a short space' of time.

6. 'The beast that was, and is not, even he is the eighth and is of the seven.' This teaches us that what is said of the beast is said chiefly of his eighth head, and that this eighth head is not a new head, but the old seventh head revived. It will be necessary, therefore, to show that this is the case.

That the Pope claims to be emperor and to wear the diadem, will be made manifest by perusing the following document, embodied in the papal code, and known by the name of the forged donation of Constantine:—

'Constantine, the emperor, conceded the crown and all the royal dignity in the city of Rome, and Italy, and all the parts of the west, to the apostolic see. For so it reads in the acts of the blessed Sylvester.

'Constantine the emperor, on the fourth day of his baptism gave this privilege to the Roman church that the priests in all the Roman world should have this for their head, as judges have the king. In that privilege, among other things we read as follows:'

'We have judged it useful, with all our satraps, senate, nobles, and all our people, that as the blessed Peter seems to be constituted the vicar of the Son of God on earth, so also the pontiffs, who are vicegerents of that prince of apostles, obtain in grant from us and our empires the princely power, more amply than the terrene gentleness of our imperial serenity seems to possess it; choosing to ourselves the prince of the apostles, or his vicar, for our firm patrons with God.'

'And we decree that even as our earthly, imperial majesty, so the most holy Roman church be honored with veneration; and that the most holy see of the blessed Peter be gloriously exalted, more than our empire and earthly throne; rendering it power and exaltation of glory, and strength, and imperial honor.'

'And we decree and confirm that it have principality over the four chief sees, as well as over all the churches of God in the whole world. And let the pontiff who for the time may preside over the holy Roman church, be higher than all the priests of the whole world, and their prince; and by his judgment let all things be disposed [illegible] stability of christian faith. To the churches of the blessed Peter and Paul we yield the sacred control, both in the east and in the west, the north and the south; in Judea, Greece, Asia, Thrace, Africa, Italy, and divers islands, in such sort that all things be disposed by the hands of our most blessed father Sylvester, the supreme pontiff, pope of the whole city of Rome, and all the pontiffs his successors, who to the end of time shall sit in the see of blessed Peter; we now give the Lateran palace of our empire; next the diadem or crown of our heads, the superhumeral or collar, which is wont to surround the emperor's neck; and also the purple cloak and the scarlet tunic, and all the imperial robes; conveying further the dignity of the imperial sceptre, and also the imperial signia and bands and various imperial ornaments: and all the pomp of imperial elevation, and the glory of our power. And as imperial soldiery are adorned, so we decree that the clergy of the holy Roman church be adorned likewise. And as the imperial power is honored by various offices of chamberlains and porters, and all the variety of guards, so do we will that the holy Roman church be decorated. And that the pontifical glory may shine forth in highest refulgence. We decree that the horses of the clergy of the same holy Roman church be adorned with white trappings, and that in this guise ride forth. And as our senate uses sandals decorated with white, so let the clergy also use them; that both heavenly and earthly things may be decorated to the glory of God.

We decree this also, that our most holy Father Sylvester and his successors use the diadem, namely, the crown which we have granted him from our head, made of the purest gold, and set with precious gems, and wear it on their head to the praise of God in honor of St. Peter. And that the Pontifical dignity may not be lightly esteemed, but honored with glory and power more than the dignity of earthly empires, behold, we give and resign to the said blessed Pontiff, Sylvester, the universal Pope, both our palace, as said before, and the Roman city, and all the provinces, countries, and cities of Italy, and the western regions; and decree that they be disposed of by him and his successors, and we yield them to the perpetual control of the Roman church. Whence we have thought it meet, that our empire and the power of the kingdom be transferred into the Eastern regions; and a city built at Byzantium with our name and our empire be placed there; since where the princedom of the priests, and the head of the christian religion has been appointed by the heavenly Emperor; it is not just that there any earthly emperor should have power.

These things we have enjoined and confirmed and we decree that they continue unimpeached and unshaken to the end of the world. Whence we protest before living God and his terrible judgment, to all the emperors our successors, the nobles, governors, senators, and all the people of the whole world, now and forever, that to none of them it shall be lawful in any way to infringe these things, or any point to distrust them. But if any one (which we do not believe) shall break or despise them, let them lie bound under eternal damnation; let him find the saints of God, the princes of the Apostles Peter and Paul, his adversaries in the present life, and in the life to come, and let him perish, burnt in the lowest hell, with the devil and all the wicked. Confirming the page of this our imperial decree with our own hands, we have placed it over the venerable corpse of the blessed Peter, Prince of the Apostles. Given at Rome, the third of the Calends of April, our Lord Flavius Constantine Augustus, for the fourth time, and Gallicanus, being consuls.'

The object, however, for which we have quoted the above document, is to show that the Pope claims to be Emperor, to possess the imperial palace, to wear the imperial diadem, the imperial collar, the imperial purple cloak, the imperial scarlet tunic, the imperial robes, to wield the imperial sceptre, to have the imperial banda, the imperial insignia, the imperial ornaments, the imperial soldier, in short, all the glory of imperial power. It is remarkable that the chief stress is laid upon his right to wear the IMPERIAL DIADEM. "We decree this also, that our most holy Father, Sylvester, and his successors, use the diadem, namely, THE CROWN WHICH WE HAVE GRANTED TO HIM FROM OUR HEAD, made of THE PUREST GOLD, and set with PRECIOUS GEMS, and wear it on their head to the praise of God in honor of St. Peter."

* * * *

"As the Popes resemble Diocletian in persecution, so also in idolatry and the use of Pagan rites and ceremonies.

As the Pagan emperors encouraged image worship, with its concomitants of cringings, bowings, kneelings, kissings, offerings, incense, lights, processions, pilgrimages and the like, so also the Popes, Ludovicus Vives, a learned Papist, confesses that no difference can be found between Pagan and Popish image worship, but this,—that names and titles are changed. The church of Rome has indeed learned the way of the heathen.—Jer. 11: 2. An exact parallel exists between Rome Pagan and Rome Papal, in regard to rites and ceremonies, as is well shown in Stopford's "Pagano Papismus."

It is therefore manifest that the ancient seventh head, that is, the Pagan, persecuting, idolatrous, diademed, imperial head, has been revived in the Popes. They jointly form "the eighth" head.

The above is submitted most affectionately by your brother in the bonds of the gospel of love, peace and purity.

S. S. BREWER.

For the Crisis.

I'm Sad and Lonely.

I'm sad and I'm lonely, thick darkness and gloom
O'ershadow my heart as I think of the tomb,
For there laid away from life's bitter woes,
Is the loved of my heart, in his last repose.
The guide of my steps o'er life's troubled sea,
The light of my pathway, is taken from me!

I'm sad and I'm lonely, since from me has flown
All the sunshine and joy my heart has e'er known;
Since hopes that I cherished have vanished and fled,
And the truest of hearts now sleep with the dead!
Lonely and weary, and with sorrow oppressed,
My sad heart is sighing, and longing for rest.

I'm sad and lonely, but I wait for the morn,
When my tears will be ended, my sorrows all gone,
I wait for the morn, when my loved one shall wake,
When th' archangel's trump death's fetters shall break.
I'm sad and I'm weary, and lonely I sigh,
But I know that the morn of Redemption is nigh.

H. E. FELTON.

Marlboro, Mass.

"The Union Movement:"

A MEETING OF THE LAY-MEMBERS OF THE VARIOUS CHURCHES OF THE TOWN OF UNITY ON DEC. 3, 1858.

CHAPTER VIII.

The parties having met at an early hour, proceeded as follows:

Pres. Mr. C., your catholic ground is bound to fail you this evening. You, in common with all Baptists, claim that nothing but immersion is baptism. Now I do not question the candor of the Baptists, for I believe they are christians, but Presbyterians, and many others, are just as candid, while they believe that sprinkling or pouring is just as good as immersion. Now sir, how can you find catholic ground here? Are all sprinklers to sacrifice their consciences to Baptists?

Meth., Lu., and Ep. That is an important matter, and must be settled before we can proceed. I do not see how Mr. C. can get over it.

Bap. There will be no difficulty in finding catholic ground to stand upon here. Mr. M., have I not repeatedly seen you immerse?

Meth. Certainly, when the candidate demanded it.

Bap. Well, of course you believed in what you were doing—you believed that immersion was valid.

Meth. Certainly, our Discipline admits its validity, but recognizes sprinkling and pouring also.

Bap. Very well; brother P. also believes that immersion is baptism, for he received Mr. H., a Baptist, into his church, without requiring him to be sprinkled. Brethren L. and E. have also received Baptists into their church, without being sprinkled. You all, therefore, believe that immersion is baptism. This you all hold, in common with Baptists. Immersion is, therefore, catholic or orthodox. We all, in common, believe that it is valid baptism. But sprinkling and pouring are not catholic. They are not held in common, and are not orthodox. A large number, as wise and good as ever lived, have never believed that sprinkling and pouring are baptism. Sprinkling and pouring can never be practiced by such conscientiously. But immersion can be practiced by you all, without any violation of conscience, for you admit it to be valid. Here, gentlemen, is common ground. We can all unite and practice what we all hold in common.

Pres. Well done, Mr. B. You have turned your coat and joined in with Mr. C.

Bap. I ask your pardon, sir, I have not turned my coat at all. My argument is perfectly a Baptist argument, and I can show you where the same argument was used more than a century ago.

Pres. I should like to know, Mr. B., if you think Presbyterians are weak enough to give up their practice, and the practice of their fathers, and yield to you Baptists to be immersed!

Bap. I presume, sir, they are weak enough to do immensely worse. They are weak enough to continue a practice that was never catholic or orthodox—that was never believed in common by all christians, but has always been in doubt, in debate, in strife, and dispute, when they could have practiced that which all believed to be safe and valid, which was truly catholic or orthodox.

Meth. Brother B., I confess there is much force in your observations. I admit that at this point I have always felt staggered in my arguments with Baptists. In conscience and in concurrence with all sprinklers whom I could regard with any confidence, I was compelled to admit that the practice of Baptists, in immersing, was valid, and that I believed in it. This was admitting, at the start, that my opponent was right. There was no further dispute about his position, for I admitted it right. But the dispute then came up, whether I was right, or in other words, whether there were two right ways? This perplexed me.

Bap. Brother M., I am truly pleased to hear you speak with so much candor. Any man can see that it is safer and wiser to occupy an undoubted and indisputable position, admitted by all to be right, than one held in doubt by a respectable part of the world.

Meth. I am compelled, brother B., to make a still further admission, which has had much weight upon my mind. I can look back over my experience, and reflect upon circumstances that I frequently met with, very profitably. When I have had the charge of a church, it has frequently happened that a Baptist minister would deliver a number of discourses in the same place. It would almost invariably turn out, that some of my members who would hear him, would become distressed about baptism, and insist that I should immerse them. Sometimes, when I refused to comply with their request, they would go to the Baptists and be immersed by them. I have known this done frequently. But, on the other hand, I never knew a Baptist to become dissatisfied and come to us to be sprinkled. This is not all; I frequently was with Baptists at death, and I never knew one to be dissatisfied with his baptism and desire to be sprinkled. But I frequently knew of persons who had been sprinkled, and became dissatisfied at death, and were either immersed or desired to be. I was in the habit of telling my church, and indeed thought so at the time, that those members of our church who desired to be immersed, were weak-minded. But still I was staggered in this view, for I found that they were the more thinking and better-informed. But, I think, I now see a reason for all this. My own practice was in doubt and dispute. The Baptist practice was in no doubt. I admitted the validity of it myself, and the admission was in our discipline. What could we expect but that our members would frequently depart from that which was in doubt, and only regarded by a part of the pious, and receive that which was in no doubt, and believed in common by all?

Pres. Brother M., I think you are becoming weak-minded yourself! I am perfectly astonished at you. Do you not know that the prophet says, "He shall sprinkle many nations?"

Meth. I do not think it is any evidence of weakness to see a man, when he has the opportunity, take his stand upon indisputable ground, in the place of doubtful. I have quoted the words, "He shall sprinkle many nations," many times myself, but it is not right clear that they have any reference to baptism; but if they do, I lose nothing, for no one doubts that immersion is baptism.

Pres. We are then to look upon you as a Baptist in his first love. I should be sorry to become a turncoat.

Meth. I can not see, sir, with what propriety you call me a "turncoat." Did you not admit, at the commencement of our meeting, that the Baptists are christians? Does not your whole church admit that their baptism is valid? Do not all sprinklers admit the same? You know they do. What is the use for us, then, to attempt to withstand them in argument, when we commence by admitting that they are right? This I have always admitted. The only admission I now make more than formerly is, the propriety of invariably practicing that which we all admit to be right, in the place of that which has been always held in doubt. This, sir, is safe ground, and it is orthodox ground. I can practice immersion invariably, without any violation of conscience, and with the assurance that all parties admit it is scriptural.

Pres. I suppose you are convinced that sprinkling is not baptism.

Meth. No, sir, I have seen no new light on that subject. I always knew that it was held in doubt by many, as wise and good as there are in the world, and on this account I never could feel precisely the same assurance that those sprinkled were baptized, that I could in the case of those immersed. I shall never forget a remark a Baptist minister made as he came up out of the water, after baptizing about a dozen persons. Turning to the persons baptized, he said, "There was an end to all controversy about their baptism. Their own consciences would always approve it, and all pious persons admit its validity." I have always, I must confess, felt the same way when I have immersed persons, but I never could say the same about sprinkling. I am now struck with the force of the theory that the reason of this is, that immersion is received in common by us all, while sprinkling is [illegible]

Chris. That is very [illegible] popularity of immersion is [illegible] there must be a genuine reason, [illegible] this, some place, why immersion is so universally admitted, and sprinkling [illegible] such extensive doubt.

The True State of Protestantism.

The following startling description of the present state of Protestantism in England and the other countries in Europe, as well as America, is from the pen of a devoted minister of the gospel, in Torquay, England, who is a very close observer of the signs of the times, and a careful student of the prophetic Scriptures. He says:—

"It is no longer doubted that a confederacy exists between France, Russia, and Austria, the object of which is to divide Turkey, and to humiliate Protestantism. It is the Græco-Roman Church against both Protestantism and Islamism. When that confederacy begins to show itself in action, in what state will it find Christendom at large; and what will be the final result of this modern crusade? We believe that it will find Christendom so corrupt as no longer to be held together. A putrid carcass, falling to pieces by its innate putrefaction! And we believe that the result will be the setting up of a false god, in opposition to the true God. The total corruption of Christendom is proved by this single fact, that even the bulwark of the Protestant faith has been overthrown, and no impediment is left to beat back the most corrupting vices. We call England the bulwark of Protestantism, and what is her true condition? She is so weak POLITICALLY, that she has become a province of France, and dares not take one step in any direction without asking leave from Napoleon the Third. Those who look into the affairs of the day, will find that ever since our wicked war with Russia, we have become the mere vassals of the French Emperor; played with, lectured, petted and controlled, according to his interests or caprice. Our MORAL weakness is still more deplorable. The love of money is now the only passion that is left: the passion of time-worn men, and of worn-out nations. Our societies, our missions, all our religious machinery, have been little else than expedients for getting money. As instruments of conversion, their name is Ichabod—'the glory has departed from Israel.' To this fatal love of money is joined another crime not more fatal, but more infamous—the LOVE OF MURDER. The monsters who planned the assassination of the French Emperor, and who actually killed ten persons, have been cheered and almost worshiped by the English populace; while every native of India who lifted a finger against us, was denounced and put to death! One British officer, with his own hands, and in cold blood, assassinated two native princes, and was honored for having done so. The son of an Archdeacon must have received a truly pious education. Another British officer has been amusing himself with shooting Austrians, as if he had been shooting partridge. He kept a book, entered all his dead shots, and had the satisfaction of finding when the sport was over, that he had killed twenty-five outright, besides several marked as "uncertain." This was done from the mere love of sport, without the slightest provocation. Now, as all these men are assassins, they ought all to have been executed on the gallows: but such is the madness of the age, that they are held up for admiration as heroes, when they ought to die as villains; and the story of the Austrian-shooting captain has been repeated in every journal as an excellent piece of humor. Twenty-five murders constitute a Protestant joke! Yet we revile the Pope and the King of Naples for punishing men for high treason. Do you think that God has not seen your crimes, and that he will not call you to account? The Love of Money, and the Love of Murder, are now the ruling passions of Protestant England. One is "the root of all evil," the other has been the ruin of every nation that indulged it. Every nation that justifies murder, becomes a MURDERER ITSELF; and as a murderer it will be dealt with. Such is the horrible state in which the New Confederacy will find Protestant Christendom—a blood-stained criminal, ready for [illegible] thing so guilty as to justify [illegible]. Is it to be endured that we, who revile every foreign prince that [illegible] a man for insurrection, should, with the same breath, just with a British gentleman for the murder of twenty-five men, as a capital day's sport?

Again: If we look from the Old World to the New, we shall find Protestantism in the same position. In the American [illegible] the love of money, and the [illegible] assassination are daily [illegible] we are forced to this [illegible] the Anglo-Saxon [illegible] which has so long [illegible] flower of the [illegible]

THE WORLD'S CRISIS. WHOLE NO. 221.

[illegible]; setting before all men an example of the greatest of crimes—the love of gold, and the profusion of blood.

When Jugurtha had visited Rome, he left it with this remark, "I see that Rome will be bought whenever it can find a buyer." We may imitate this remark and say of Protestantism, "Protestantism will worship idols, whenever it can find an IDOL." It has renounced the external idolatry of Rome, only to set up the more impure idols of its own heart. It abhors the worship of saints, but exults in the worship of itself, and of its own abominations. Now we would rather see a man worship the Virgin Mary, than worship money. The Virgin Mary is a nobler idol than a "shilling." Some of the noblest and brightest minds that ever existed have worshiped the Virgin Mary, with all the fervor and purity of an honest heart. Their idolatry was, at least, free from every sordid thought. But the Protestant love of money—that idolatry which has driven out all sanctity, both from Church and State—is the vilest of idolatries; it drags down every thought from heaven; fixes every eye upon the earth; it never looks up, for there is no gold in heaven; it never looks forward, for there is no money in eternity; it buries all hope in the dust; cuts off all expectation, with the stroke of death; and is, above all idolatries, earthly, sensual, and devilish! Protestantism will become (altogether) idolatrous, whenever it can find an idol.

This future IDOL seems ready to appear. To seduce Protestantism, he must play skilfully with its two favorite passions, the Love of Money, and the Love of Murder. He will then be sure of success. But, poor foolish man, he does not yet understand his trade. He goes to war for liberty or glory. No Protestant cares for either. Let him take our advice in his next campaign. Let him announce that he is going to war for the "Dissemination of the pure Gospel" in order to prepare the way for English Missionaries, and for Bible Societies, by shedding rivers of blood, and raising mountains of dead bodies. He will then be imitating the hallowed example which we have set him in India. The Apostles always sent an army before them to kill men, before they converted them. The Anglo-Saxons have invariably done the same, when they could; and should HE imitate such good examples, we shall be captivated at once. But he must do it tastefully. He must get up the true Protestant whine of "love for souls," while he is butchering men's bodies. To kill a man without one word of Christian sympathy, would be a barbarous act. We ourselves never blow men to pieces from our guns without the consolation of some lovely sentiment of Christian peace! Let the coming Idol, then, give us war, and victory, and bloodshed, to our heart's content. Let him throw a "halo" of missionary zeal round his warlike achievements, and half our Protestant affections will be gained. We believe, in good earnest, that, with all our talk of peace, we are ready to worship any imperial conqueror who will only imitate our own hypocrisy, and pretend that he conquers for the "Dissemination of the Gospel."

He must not, however, forget the other ruling passion of Protestantism—The Love of Money. Above all, the coming Idol must be a money-getting deity. He must talk immensely of commerce, speculation, material prosperity, and free trade; he must outdo that precious minister of the Gospel, who lately taught us how to make the best "of both worlds." He must open the way, by arms, to vast commercial enterprises, and lucrative speculations, and then the work is done,—Protestantism, renouncing God altogether, will fall prostrate at his feet; and all who dwell upon earth shall worship him, whose names are not written in the Book of Life.

The thorough corruption of the Protestant world, and its ripeness for man-worship, are too evident to require any elaborate proof. Our recent bloodshed, and our love of money, are quite evidence enough that we have made the world our god, and have banished Christ from Christianity. Let any man have power and genius to gratify our favorite lusts, and that man will, from thenceforth, be our GOD. If we now look to the condition of the other half of Christendom, we see no difference, excepting in degree. We ourselves possess the privilege of exceeding all nations in "Love of Money;" this distinction, even the most envious have not ventured to dispute. For the last generation we have also had the honor of exceeding all nations in the Love of Murder. There are more murders in England than in any other country of Europe; and beyond comparison, more sympathy with the murderer. But in the legalized murder of war lies our crowning triumph. [illegible] has shed more blood, in the [illegible] years, than the Roman Inquisition [illegible]. Yet, still, the rest of Christendom, though left behind in the race, is not wanting in the competition of crime; with a little further exertion, it may get [illegible] and both may reach [illegible]. The world is running [illegible] of the [illegible] the Church for the [illegible]

[illegible] G[illegible]. The o[illegible] may hope [illegible] up with [illegible] after a [illegible] and the [illegible] be divided between [illegible] all.

It is on this gloomy field of strife and bloodshed the future Antichrist is to run his career; it is with such auxiliaries that he is to work out his ends—with men besmeared by slaughter, and blackened with the earthly dross which they call "gain." There is now ONE MAN, and only one, whose reach of vision can take in all that field; whose piercing glance can note every strong position; and whose dexterity can play upon every variety of passion. Such a man may justly hope to be master of the field whose occupants are no more than puppets in his hands. He will offer military glory to the warlike; commercial wealth to the avaricious; vengeance to the vindictive; pleasure to the rich; employment to the poor; and, in true Antichristian opposition to Christ, he will be so lifted up from the earth, not in suffering, but in power, that he "will draw all men unto him."

(To be concluded.)

For the Crisis.

"Things New and Old."

"Wherefore (in consequence of the revealed time for the first advent and the second to salvation) gird up the loins of your mind, be sober, and hope to the end, for the grace to be brought unto you at the revelation of Jesus Christ."—1 Pet. 1: 11-13.

The girdle was designed to keep loose garments in place, and also to brace up the loins, and so sustain the person in earnest labor. This girdle is truth, and applies to the christian armor, (Eph. 6: 14, Luke 12: 35); it brings and binds the mind of the believer within the limits of the divine. The mind girded by God's truth will have time and event in their proper place. Its perceptions and argumentations will not be yea and nay; but all yea to the glory of God. This girding up of the mind with truth (with events as God sees and adjusts them) forbids that the imagination should run riot over the understanding, or over the grand outline and landmarks that God has given in the gospel. But without this divine girding, the mind may wander like the fool's eyes "to the ends of the earth." With such "the trumpet" has no "certain sound"—there is to them no strength to "contend for the faith once delivered to the saints."

The precise range of truth here urged on us, is that of which the prophets (as a class) inquired diligently, and into which the angels desire to look. The theme is "salvation." The time embraces the sufferings of Christ, and his appearing the second time to accomplish the glorious and God-appointed purpose. The Jewish mind, if girded up by this truth, could not sway or spring off through the gospel age, and hope for the Messiah at the predicted period—the seventy weeks or four hundred and ninety days—from their captivity in Babylon; because this time for the sufferings of the Messiah did expire in the age of Jesus of Nazareth. All the false Christs have appeared out of time as well as out of character. This one great practical principle of all true piety, would compel every Jew to admit the Messiahship of Jesus. This principle applied would constrain the christian church to hope on, and hope ever, till the end, because the Gentiles who know not God rule in Zion, and also over all the people of God till then. Luke 21: 24; Rom. 11: 25; Rev. 11: 15-18. The governments of earth, till then, are beastly, sensual and satanic. Hence no hope for the christian inheritance is possible under this manifested reign of death and the devil. The hope, the only hope is, that the end of this world (the present order of things) will come, and "the world to come" will open at "the revelation of Jesus Christ."

The mind girded with truth has these grand outlines and landmarks ever present and in their proper place. Thus the second advent of Christ is forever distinguished from the first; from death and from all forms of Gentile government, as well as from all other events in the history of divine dispensation. The second coming is for the crowning consummation of the purpose of God as to human salvation. Hope anchors only there! The mind well girded will hold "the first resurrection" distinctively; and also "the resurrection of the dead, both of the just and the unjust."

Thus girded, we shall have and hold "the day of the Lord as a thousand years," and not a natural present day. 2 Pet. 3: 8; Rev. 20: 1-10. We shall see and say that the Sabbatism that remaineth to the people of God is the proper antitype of "the seventh day,"—the limited day.—Heb. 4. Girded by God's truth, we shall not confound Israel and the church—God Almighty and his Son—this world and the world to come. No; each will come and be kept in its relative and right position, as matters of faith and hope. Amen.

J. B. C.

☞ Oh, that the young would begin to be good betimes, that so they may have the greater harvest of joy when they come to be old! It is sad to be sowing seed when you should be reaping your harvest. It is best to gather the summer of youth against the winter of old age.

☞ We may tempt God as well by neglecting means, as by trusting in means. It is best to use them, and, in the use of them, to live above them.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, DECEMBER 7, 1859.

Queries and Answers.

A correspondent wishes to know whether "the comforting message" of Isa. 40: 1, is in the past or future?

The verse reads,—"Comfort ye, comfort ye my people, saith your God." In order to answer the inquiry, we need to look at the context. This was spoken in the reign of Hezekiah, who "did that which was right in the sight of the Lord, according to all that David his father did." 2 Kings 18: 3. Hezekiah had been sick, and expected to die, which caused him much grief and weeping; because, said he, "The grave (sheol) cannot praise thee. . . . The living, the living, he shall praise thee, as I do this day." When sorrowing at the thought that he was going where he could not praise the Lord, the prophet Isaiah was sent to comfort him, by telling him the Lord says:—"I have heard thy prayer, I have seen thy tears; behold, I will add unto thy days fifteen years."—Isa. 38: 5. If he was immortal, how could fifteen years be added to his life? If the good man expected to go to his reward at death, and be in heaven, why did he feel so bad about it?

After Hezekiah's recovery, Merodach-baldan, king of Babylon, sent letters and a present to him, which caused him joy. Hezekiah showed the messengers from Babylon, who brought him the letters and the present, all "his precious things." After this, the prophet Isaiah was sent again to him, to say that all the treasures of his house, and his sons, would be carried to Babylon. In the verse preceding the one under consideration, Hezekiah replies to Isaiah, and says:—"Good is the word of the Lord which thou hast spoken. He said moreover, for there shall be peace and truth in my days." Then he says:—"Comfort ye, comfort ye my people, saith your God."

We see no possible way to conclude that this remains to be fulfilled. He rejoices in the fact that his life is to be prolonged, and that "peace and truth" are to prevail in his days. On this account, he would have the people be comforted.

After speaking of Jerusalem, the prophet refers to the preparation for Christ's first advent, as performed by John the Baptist. See Matt. 3: 1-3. "In those days came John the Baptist, preaching in the wilderness of Judea, and saying, repent ye, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand. For this is he that was spoken of by the prophet Esaias, saying, the voice of one crying in the wilderness, prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight."

All this is fulfilled, and hence we cannot look for its repetition.

Bro. A. G. H. asks the following questions:—

1. "What are the original terms from which soul and spirit are translated" in Heb. 4: 12?

The text reads:—"For the word of God is quick and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, and of the joints and marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart."

In answer, we would say, psuche is the word rendered soul, and pneuma is the one rendered spirit. Psuche occurs one hundred and five times, and is the only word rendered soul in the N. T. Out of the one hundred and five times, it is rendered life and lives forty times. Wakefield renders this verse as follows:—"For the mind of God is alive and active, and sharper than any two-edged sword, and piercing even to a separation both of life and spirit, both of joints and marrow." Thompson, also, renders psuche, life in this passage.

2. Does not soul mean life, and spirit motive? I do not mean by life mere animal existence, but those acts of a man that make up his life. I understand the act of a man may be one thing, and the motive or spirit that prompts that act another. To illustrate my idea. The man who feeds the hungry, clothes the naked, visits the sick, and gives largely for charitable purposes, and yet does all this to be seen of men and get their applause; I understand the word of God would be quick and powerful to discern the thoughts and intents of that man's heart, and would so far divide that spirit or motive from the act, that the act itself would benefit the object on which it was bestowed, but no benefit would result to the actor. I understand from this text and context, that we may deceive men, "but all things are naked and open unto the eyes of him with whom we have to do."

A. G. H.

We frequently use the word life in the sense specified; as, "he lived a life of wickedness;" i. e., a life characterized by wicked deeds. We often use spirit, also, in the sense mentioned by our correspondent; as, when we meet one with like motives and feelings with ourselves, we say "he is a kindred spirit;" meaning, we two have a union of purpose. This idea may be the one in the text, but we have not so applied it. We have understood the expression, "dividing asunder of soul and spirit," to refer to death, which may be caused directly by the word of the Lord, as David says: "Thou hidest thy face, they are troubled, thou takest away their breath, they die and return to their dust."—Ps. 104: 29. The word here rendered breath, corresponds with the one rendered spirit in Hebrew: Ruach [illegible]

[illegible] Notices.

We have received No. 7 of the Emphatic Diaglott, published by Benjamin Wilson, Geneva, Ill. It includes the gospel by St. Luke from chap. 4: 23 to 10: 24. We have never seen a work which we consider better worth the money than this new and valuable translation of the New Testament, with its choice philological and exegetical foot notes. Every lover of truth should have a copy. The numbers are issued once in two months. Price of a single number 20 cents, or 12 numbers for $2.00.

"A TREATISE on the causes of the Premature decay of American youth." By Dr. Andrew Stone, Physician to the Hygienic and Lung Institute, No. 96 Fifth St., Troy, N. Y. Price 6 cts. including postage.

This valuable pamphlet should be read by every young man and woman in the world. It is emphatically a work for the times. Let every parent see that a copy of it is in the hands of his sons and daughters. If read and observed, it would save thousands from imbecility, and many from insanity. Get it at once. For sale at the Crisis office.

Our Country.

A dark cloud of revolutionary character hangs over our land of boasted freedom. The storm is rapidly gathering, and may burst upon us at once like a tempest at sea, and leave but a wreck to survive the storm. Men are getting in earnest, as the following extracts from a late work will show. The book is entitled "The Impending Crisis of the South, how to meet it;" and purports to be written by Hinton Rowan Helper, of North Carolina; but it is surmised that this is only a fictitious name for some northern man. A plan is now on foot to raise sixteen thousand dollars for the purpose of a gratuitous distribution of one hundred thousand copies of a compend of this work. Some thousands of dollars have already been subscribed. Among the list of contributors are sixty-eight members of Congress and many of the most wealthy and respectable citizens of our country. Among other similar sayings in this work, we notice the following:—"Slavery must be throttled." In the appeal to the Southern men of northern principles, the address says:—

"Now, as one of your own number, we appeal to you to join us in our earnest and timely efforts to rescue the generous soil of the South from the usurped and desolating control of these political vampires. Once and for ever, at least so far as this country is concerned, the infernal question of slavery must be disposed of . . . .

Do not reserve the strength of your arms until you shall have been rendered powerless to strike; the present is the proper time for action; under all the circumstances, apathy or indifference is a crime."

In the address to the slaveholder, we notice the following:—

"Henceforth, sirs, we are demandants, not suppliants. We demand our rights, nothing more, nothing less. It is for you to decide whether we are to have justice peaceably or by violence, for whatever consequences may follow, we are determined to have it one way or the other.

THE BANNER TO STAND OR DIE BY.

Inscribed on the banner which we herewith unfurl to the world, with the full and fixed determination to stand by it, or die by it, unless one of more virtuous efficacy shall be presented, are the mottoes which, in substance, embody the principles, as we conceive, that should govern us in our patriotic warfare against the most subtle and insidious foe that ever menaced the inalienable rights and liberties and dearest interests of America:

1. Thorough organization and independent political action on the part of the non-slaveholding whites of the South.
2. Ineligibility of pro-slavery slaveholders; never another vote to any one who advocates the retention and perpetuation of human slavery.
3. No co-operation with pro-slavery politicians: no fellowship with them in religion; no affiliation with them in society.
4. No patronage to pro-slavery merchants; no guestship in slave-waiting hotels; no fees to pro-slavery lawyers; no employment of pro-slavery physicians; no audience to pro-slavery parsons.
5. No more hiring of slaves by non-slaveholders.
6. Abrupt discontinuance of subscription to pro-slavery newspapers.
7. The greatest possible encouragement to free white labor.

Affairs in Europe.

The latest advices give nothing encouraging for a better state of things in Europe, so long as the Pope has a vestige of temporal power left. Notwithstanding all the contrivances of diplomatists, all things seem converging to an awful crisis, which must soon be reached. No human device seems able to prevent the coming storm. The nations of Europe are moving like a ponderous team of cars upon a downward grade, after their momentum has overcome all the power of the brakes. Destruction appears inevitable. They are rushing to perdition, and our own country is fast getting up the steam to follow in hot pursuit. France has united with Spain against Morocco, and already gained one victory, to the astonishment of England, and the other great powers of Europe, which were not anticipating such a rapid movement on the part of France. Of course, Napoleon will be the principal gainer in this war, as in every [illegible] in which he engages. He is fast bringing the [illegible] approaching [illegible] point where he may be universal dictator.

A Paris correspondent of Nov. 3d, says:—

"One thing all men concur in—that is, that the hour is come for Italy to help herself if she can. A friend indulged me yesterday with a peep at a letter addressed to him by Garibaldi, with whom he has long been on intimate terms. It was dated Oct. 24, and might have been written with a knowledge of the Emperor's letter, though nothing appeared to that effect. Without entering into details, Garibaldi uses these words, as near as I can recollect, for I was not permitted to copy them: "Believe me, my dear friend, all will yet come right with us; in France, you do not perfect justice to the Italians; they are capable of far greater endurance in the cause than any foreigner can be brought to suppose. Already the people are moved to the very heart: an attempt to bring back these satraps of Austria, will surround the land with a girdle of fire. Your Emperor could not do all for us that his great heart desired, but he has done enough to rouse Italy to do more; depend upon it she will do it."

Napoleon continues to be the man of wonder to all the world, and increasingly so from month to month. It is thought he is conniving with Garibaldi for the liberation of Italy, and is secretly advising against the Pope. A London correspondent of Nov. 11th, says:—

"Louis Napoleon gives the Foreign Office an immense deal of trouble, and all the more, that it is so difficult to find what he is driving at. This is because he holds his tongue about his plans and his schemes, and nobody but himself, and perhaps Old Nick, can know when he is going to dive, or where he is going to come up. Everybody is pretty sure that Spain would never have thought of a fight with the Moors, however romantic it sounds, without the knowledge and consent of Napoleon III."

A Florence correspondent of the London Times states that,

"The Pope had declared that if the Emperor Napoleon's letter to Victor Emanuel was a proof of his Catholicity, then the Catholic church had no more hope from man. The Pope concluded by defying the Emperor, through his ambassador, to do his worst."

A correspondent of the London Post, writing from Rome, under date of Oct. 29th, says, it is rumored that the Pope and Napoleon are to have an interview, and come to some conclusion, more or less satisfactory.

These stir up feeling, like those in the mariner's bosom, after a long and tedious voyage, when he draws near his native land and the home of his loved ones. He is almost impatient for the sight, and wishes a strong wind to waft him quickly into port. We would say in the language of Dr. Watts:—

"How bright the vision, oh how long
Shall this glad hour delay?
Fly swifter round, ye wheels of time,
And bring the welcome day."

"Things as they are."

In the Reveille, published at Seneca Falls, N. Y., we noticed an editorial with the heading,—"Things as they are." After speaking of our enlightened age, and privileges enjoyed, which are far superior to any other people, the Editor remarks:—

"It is fair to suppose that the world, especially this enlightened part of it, is at present in a moral, intellectual and religious condition, altogether unprecedented in the history of the race. Such is the inference. What are the facts? Look around us and what do we see? Justice and crime arm-in-arm; politics and plunder one and indivisible, churches going up by the score, and sin daily increasing, the worst class of men receiving the highest popular honors; temperance proclaimed from the house-tops and drunkards reeling through every thoroughfare, legislation sometimes a matter of bargain and sale, sometimes of pernicious fanaticism and wildest pecuniary extravagance. Self aggrandizement seems to be the all-controlling element of man's nature, and over-reaching and fraud, characterize nearly every private business transaction; while recklessness, selfishness and insincerity is everywhere prominent. This, every man of truth, who looks with an observing and philosophic eye upon the world around him, will acknowledge to be no overdrawn picture of society in this blessed 'Age of Progress.'"

Reports similar to the foregoing are coming in from all parts of the world, thus showing that we are near the great harvest, when "their wickedness is great." The boasted progress of the times is "worse and WORSE," as declared by the inspired apostle.

Christian, gird on "the whole armor of God," and "stand up for JESUS."

For the Crisis.

"Behold the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world!"

The above is the language of John the Baptist, the forerunner of Jesus of Nazareth, the Anointed of God. The circumstance, which as the cause, gave origin or utterance to the expression, was that of Jesus coming to John, for the purpose of being immersed, or buried beneath the gentle waves of the river Jordan; not, however, to remain or rest in its watery grave under the power and dominion of death, but to come forth in the triumphant likeness of a more glorious resurrection. Hence John baptized him; and it was upon this ever memorable occasion, that he saw for the first time, perhaps, in his life, the Son of the Most High. And being filled with wonder and admiration, he exclaimed, "Behold the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world!" The language, although very simple, is still the more comprehensive, and the sentiment it expresses, although uttered from the impulse of the moment, [illegible] than ebullition [illegible] fact, of a heart overflowing with the love of God, and a mind that had been thoroughly instructed and completely informed in the truth of the law and the prophets; and especially those scriptures relating to the mission and ultimate destiny of the Son of man; hence, when he spoke of Jesus as the Lamb of God, it was according to the law and testimony; for thus he was revealed by the united testimony of the law and prophets. The law, as a shadow of good things to come, spoke of him by virtue of its types.

The continued sacrifice of a lamb, and particularly the paschal lamb, under the Jewish economy, pointed to him, and represented the continual efficacy of his blood. Hence Jesus, as the great antitype, or in other words, the substance of the shadow, is truly and emphatically the lamb, not of man, but of God; for all the lambs offered under the law were furnished by men, but this one is provided by God, and taketh away sin, not only of the Jewish nation representatively, as under the law, but of the whole world in reality; consequently, the law which accomplished nothing in reality, but representatively as a shadow, reveals Christ as the perfect lamb, without spot or blemish, acceptable to God. The prophet also testifies concerning him in like manner in the fifty-third of Isaiah, in the following pathetic language, which embraces the whole history of Him who is denominated the "man of sorrows:—"He shall grow up before him as a tender plant, and as a root out of dry ground. . . . . He is despised and rejected of men; a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief; and we hid as it were our faces from him; he was despised and we esteemed him not. Surely he hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows. . . . . The Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all. . . . He is brought as a lamb to the slaughter. . . . For he was cut off out of the land of the living. . . . Yet it pleased the Lord to bruise him; he hath put him to grief, when thou shalt make his soul an offering for sin, he shall see his seed."

Such is the testimony of the law and the prophets concerning One, who, as a lamb, should be made an offering for sin. Now we have Jesus of Nazareth, recognised by John the Baptist, his forerunner, as the person in whom these predictions had their literal fulfillment. John therefore spoke of Christ understandingly. Thus John exclaimed, as he saw Jesus approaching him,—"Behold the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world!" And to establish the fact beyond controversy, that Jesus was the true Messiah, as well as to make known to John his success, a voice was heard from heaven, saying, "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased;" positively declaring, and publicly avowing, that Jesus, born in Bethlehem, and baptized of John, was the Son of the Most High God, who suffered and died that we might live. Hence we hear him say, "I am the way, the truth and the life." Again, "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." "And this is the will of Him that sent me; that every one which hath the Son and believeth on him, may have everlasting life, and I will raise him up at the last day."

Life here depends on belief; but how are we to believe? I answer, according to the testimony of the law and the prophets, and thereby, like John the Baptist, embrace Christ understandingly. If those who profess to be believers in Christ would follow this criterion, and take heed to the testimony concerning him, there would not exist so many different articles of faith as are now advocated in the world; many of which are so opposed to each other and so inconsistent with themselves, that if it could be proved that one or more is true, it would make the Bible commit suicide, inasmuch as their truth once firmly and incontrovertibly established would demonstrate that the Christ of the New Testament and the Messiah of the Old, are not identical; which is all sufficient to confirm the faith of the sceptic and the infidel. God testified of his Son through the law and the prophets; hence Jesus said to the Jews, "Search the Scriptures, for in them ye think ye have eternal life, and they are they that testify of me." The Scriptures spoken of here are the Old Testament, by which Jesus would establish his claim to be the Son of God. Now if the Jews had understood the Old Testament, the scriptures referred to, and believed them, the result would have been, their reception of Christ understandingly, as the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world.

Let us take heed to the testimony God has given concerning his Son. The prophets speak of him as the man of sorrows who suffered and died for us. We believe it has been literally fulfilled. The same prophets predict with joy and gladness that he will come again; not, however, as the Lamb of God, but as the Lion of the tribe of Judah; not to suffer on the cross, but to save his people, and destroy his enemies; not as the carpenter's son, who had not where to lay his head, but as the avenging King of Zion, clothed with great power and glory. Do we believe it?

GEO. MOYER.

Oslo Creek, Ind.

(To be continued.)

[illegible]

Correspondence.

From B. Spaulding.

BRO. GRANT:—I thought it good to acquaint the brethren generally with my whereabouts and success. I left Holden, Oct. 15th for Moosehead Lake,—went to Hermon the first day, and stopped over the Sabbath. The brethren are holding on well to the doctrines of the Gospel. Monday, I started again, on foot, with a large bundle of tracts in one hand, and a staff in the other, and walked sixteen miles to Bro. Patten's in North Newport, where I was refreshed. Next day went to Corinna, had a meeting of the brethren, and then went twelve miles to Sangerville, where I gave six lectures. The brethren are firm in the faith. Went on ten miles to Abbott, where I spent several days visiting and giving lectures to very candid, attentive congregations, and conviction seemed to take hold of several minds. Next, went into a retired neighborhood in Monson, where I spent several days and one Sabbath. Several were convinced of the truth and acknowledged their convictions publicly. All along, in every place, I supplied them well with the tract,—"The wicked not immortal," and "The great error exposed," or "Death not life," and several others, which show the destruction of the wicked,—and they were well received.

Many of the people in these towns have never heard the Advent doctrine at all; their minds have been prejudiced. One brother, talking with me, ranked Millerism, as he called it, with Spiritualism, as a great delusion of the present day; yet when he came to hear, he was the very first man to receive this same Millerism. People are ready to hear. Many, I find, whose minds are led into the idea of the unconscious state of the dead, and the destruction of the wicked, without hearing it preached; yet they have not dared to confess it, lest they should be put out of the synagogue. Praise God, the truth prevails; yes, and will prevail more and more!

From Monson I went to Blanchard, where I gave only one lecture, then went on to Shirley, where there has been a good band of Advent brethren; but since the disappointment of '54, they have become disheartened, and have had no preaching since; lately, no meetings at all. I came into the place without their knowledge, and had one meeting before I was known as an Advent man. There are two little Freewill Baptist churches at variance one with the other, so I stood on an equal footing with them all. I got them all out to hear, and never saw more attentive congregations. Conviction rested upon all. One Freewill Baptist elder, seventy-four years old, yielded to his conviction, and publicly acknowledged his belief in the personal reign of Jesus, and the literal resurrection of the dead; and it had a thrilling effect on the whole community, for he had long opposed these doctrines. I spent ten days, giving fourteen lectures in Shirley, visiting almost every family.

I went then to Greenville, at the foot of Moosehead Lake, and gave two lectures, without much interest; found them carried away with popularity and pride, and overcharged with business. Visited four Indian families, but could not do much with them, on account of their Roman Catholic religion, although I offered to stop and teach them reading, writing and arithmetic gratis; they were afraid of a heretic, and I had to leave them to their ignorance. I teach a good many writing, in my travels, so I try in every possible way to benefit the people where I go. I spend all my time in visiting, teaching children, exhorting, writing letters, etc. etc. My health is good, my spirits are good, I find work enough, and if I had a dozen bodies, I would keep them all at work in this cause. I enjoy the light of God's countenance, feel his approbation and see the effects of my labors. My heart is encouraged. Praised be God for his mercies to unworthy me.

During the last three months, I have written 130 letters, full sheets, have given 67 lectures, and have walked on foot 480 miles, and visited 510 families; and the expense of all this labor is only about twenty dollars, which I have paid out of my own money. I have not received more than three dollars in the time. I have been very kindly received generally, and hospitably treated. I praise God, and am grateful to the good people where I have been for their kindness.

To the brethren generally, let me say, take courage, persevere in the good work of the Lord, the cause is prospering greatly; there is great encouragement to labor; error is being exposed, truth prevailing, and it is our privilege to be co-workers together with God, in spreading the light of truth; and he that laboreth receiveth wages, even eternal life in the glorious kingdom.

I am on the border of the State of Maine, or the border of civilization, at least,—fifteen minutes' travel will bring me to the forest, which ends only in Canada, and which is inhabited only by bears, wolves, deer and moose; yet I find people here just like other people, yes, more willing to hear with candor [illegible] believe, than in the cities and villages. [illegible] propose to return on a different route, [illegible] Sebec and Brownville [illegible] to Bangor; this [illegible] great [illegible]

I have enjoyed much in distributing the bundle I received at the World's Crisis office. And if there are any, who want to help in this cause, and cannot go themselves, if they would give something towards making up another bundle for me, I should feel very grateful indeed, for the privilege of distributing them. The last bundle has been scattered broadcast over four counties, and put generally right into the hands of those whose minds were inquiring. We have reason to believe a great amount of light will be diffused by these little messengers of truth, which cost but little, and can be distributed so economically.

The Lord willing, I shall be at home in a few weeks, and I propose making a tour into New Hampshire. Pray for your unworthy brother, that I may have health of body, and the wisdom from above to lead and guide me, that I may have a humble mind, and a heart devoted to God, and access to the minds of the people.

Elliotsville, Me., Nov. 16.

From Eld. Wm. Sheldon.

Bro. Grant:—After writing you my last epistle, I continued my meetings a short time longer in Springville, Wis., evidently much to the annoyance of a class who have clothed themselves with garments of bigotry, thrice-lined with prejudice. But the saints were feasted, and the wavering strengthened.

On Saturday, Oct. 15th, I went to Viroqua Village, where, by request, I dined with the gentlemanly editors of the Viroqua Expositor. In the evening I preached in the Court House to attentive listeners. We endeavored to prove that the saints would be real beings in the kingdom of God, instead of mere shadows, or immaterial ghosts.

On Sunday I preached again in Springville, and proved that men are wholly mortal, and dependent upon Christ for immortality.

The sticklers for the immortal soul dogma now saw that truth was fastening itself upon the minds of some who stood connected with other persuasions; hence, something must be done to counteract this work, therefore a Baptist clergyman's services were secured, and an appointment put in circulation that he would "preach on the immortality of the soul" on Sunday evening in Springville, I having an appointment to preach at Viroqua the same evening, some three or four miles distant. Great pains were taken to circulate the notice, because, as was alleged, I had "got some of the people on to the fence." Bro. Morse, thinking if the man was posted on the matter, he would be willing to discuss the question in public, proposed to him to discuss the following question with me: "Do the Scriptures teach that the soul of man is immortal?" In the first place, by way of excuse, he inquired if I was an able speaker, stating that he would not condescend to "fool his time away with a poor speaker." Bro. Morse gave his mind upon this point, stating also that I was versed in the Greek, etc. Here he excused himself upon the plea that I had an advantage over him in point of education.

He preached his sermon at the appointed time, but his arguments were so few, so weak, and so far-fetched, that the people were not swept "off of the fence" by them. I preached in Viroqua two or three evenings longer, under very unfavorable circumstances, it being rainy and muddy, and other meetings being held in the village at the same hours.

On Wednesday evening I preached my farewell sermon in Springville, to a full house of solemn hearers. This was my twelfth sermon in that region. One Baptist, and two Methodist members, I think, are satisfied that our message was the word of the Lord. May they be free in the truth. The saints were much refreshed by the meetings, and community favorably impressed. Eld. Higgins is to continue his labors with them. I continued to make my home principally with my honorable friend, Mr. Savage, who, though not a professor, spared no pains in rendering my stay agreeable. His boundless generosity towards me has interested me in his case. May he soon give himself away to the Lord. He clearly sees, I think, that we have the Bible on our side, and only lacks the work of grace in the heart to make him an ornament to the cause of truth. He will soon send for the Crisis. Sister Savage (his wife) is a Baptist member of great influence in community. She has been deeply interested in the preaching of the truth, and I think will hereafter uncompromisingly contend for it.

The kindness which I received at the hands of all of the Springville friends, is indelibly engraven on my memory. May they continue faithful. Friends can still write me at Castle Rock, Dakota Co., Minn. Shall soon be at home.

From Eld. W. Sheldon.

Bro. Grant:—Having returned home from a six weeks' tour in Minn. and Wis., I will now write a few lines concerning it, commencing where I left the matter in my last epistle.

On Oct. 23d, I commenced a meeting in Fairfield, Wis., having been invited there by Eld. G. W. Barnes, who is zealously engaged in combatting error in that region. Our meetings were interesting and profitable. [illegible] came to the anxious seat for prayers. The meeting made a good impression upon a prejudiced community; the friends of truth were strengthened, and several backsliders were reclaimed. I preached sixteen sermons in the town, and baptized three souls. Others will doubtless soon obey. The brethren came into gospel order. The little church now numbers fourteen members, with a fair prospect of liberal additions. Bro. Barnes will labor with them a portion of the time. While I ministered to them in spiritual things, they generously bestowed upon me their temporal things. The Lord prosper them.

From Fairchild, Bro. Barnes conveyed me to Ironton, Wis., where Eld. G. W. Turner resides and preaches. Here I commenced meetings on the evening of Nov. 4th. Our congregations were large, and appeared eager to know the truth. On Sunday evening we enjoyed a solemn scene around the Lord's table, and organized a little church before leaving the table. On Monday evening I preached my sixth sermon to about an hundred and fifty hearers. After the close of the sermon, about 9 o'clock in the evening, we repaired to the river for baptism, as I was to leave early the next morning. At that late hour of the night I led three souls down into the river and "buried" them in the likeness of our Master's death, while both shores were alive with spectators and the night air was redolent with the happy songs of believers. It was a good time. One more would then have gone forward, had it not have been for the lack of a change of raiment. Bro. Turner, who is greatly respected in the place, will continue to preach to the people.

Thus, in sixteen days, I preached twenty-two sermons, set in order two bodies of believers, and baptized six souls. Bro. Barnes conveyed me to the cars on Tuesday morning, and I arrived safe at home in due time. Bro. B. is fully resolved to raise a "muss" in the ranks of the enemy, in the regions round about home, this winter. The God of truth help him!

As soon as I can get matters arranged for winter, at home, I will try to comply with calls from brethren, which I have now on hand, and which I may hereafter receive. Brn. in making their claims upon me as an "Evangelist," will please say when they would prefer my services—first, or last of winter?

Castle Rock, Dakota Co., Minn., Nov. 13th, '59.

From Charles Stevens.

Bro Grant:—I have been a careful reader of the Crisis for a number of years, and I rejoice that I ever embraced those truths which it inculcates. The truth is precious. What light shines on God's word in this day of peril! I am often encouraged and made to rejoice when I see the tears of joy flowing down the faces of those whose animated countenances denote the joy they have in hearing the word. I often contemplate the situation of perishing mortals with mingled emotions of love and pity—and I have thought of late, had I health and the means, I would make my way to every destitute place and strive to turn them from their vanities to the living God.

And under a firm conviction that necessity is laid upon me by the great Head of the church, and woe is me if I do not preach his gospel, I have commenced the work in earnest to persuade men to act accordingly, believing except they do that they will not perfectly answer the end for which they were made. "I made thee for my glory, and created thee for my praise," said the Lord to one anciently. Except we are real christians and divested of every thing that may prevent us from keeping the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace, we cannot glorify God to the extent of our privilege, nor praise him under the influence of that wisdom that is without partiality and without hypocrisy.

I believe he that is owned of God, should be owned by all christians, and would be if ignorance, tradition, or prejudice, did not influence the minds. We have a few prayers that Jesus left on record, and one of these was that his disciples might be one as he and his Father are one; and is it not a pity that christians by their acts should pray a different prayer? and that if a christian meet with his fellow creatures to wait on his God, he should be in any way restricted from doing that which the Lord requires at his hand, or forbidden to serve his Maker and denied liberty of conscience?

The Lord is converting souls in this region. The work is progressing gloriously. The old ship of Zion is still on her course. She has survived wind and wave, whirlpool and under current, quicksands and rocks, and bids fair to outride all the storms this side of the Kingdom. Those who have left are heartily invited to get on board again. She is built of Gospel timber, bless the Lord; and with some reforms and improvements suggested by the past, which we propose to make, we anticipate a very pleasant voyage. Jesus Christ is our Captain, chart, compass, fare,—regulations same as usual,—only we propose a little order, to have the commands of the Captain more promptly and cheerfully obeyed. We hope also that the crew will love each other better than ever before. Come, brethren and sisters, get on board, and let us have [illegible] [illegible]. Let the winds blow high; let the winds blow low; still she's making for the harbor. I am glad that I ever got on board the ship. Praise the Lord.

Compton, C. E., Nov. 25th, '59.

From E. Macomber.

Bro. Grant:—I have been away from this isolated spot in the ocean, for a little while, to see how the children get along. I left Newport, R. I., (Sodom, it should be called, because of the wickedness that abounds in it. I do not know of any one in the place that loves the appearing of the Savior. I wish some one of the sons of God could be directed that way, for there is a field that needs laborers as much as the great West. Reader, servant of the Lord, think, look, and pray, and consider what your duty is. I think there are some anxious to hear, and to take the word of God into their hearts; and I believe some of them have honest hearts. May the Lord direct,) Oct. 28th, and crossed the river to Rocky Brook, called on Bro. P. C. Rodman,—found him and wife rejoicing in hope of a better world than this—stopped with Bro. John Dixon, found him and family striving to enter in at the strait gate. I hear that one of his daughters was baptized last First day. Glory to God for this! I hope Bro. John and family will be in the kingdom after it comes. I stopped with another brother, (I have forgotten his name), a German. Well, if he continues faithful, and walks in the light as he receives it, he will be in the kingdom, and his wife, and that brother who felt the power of God come on him when we asked the blessing of the Lord upon us. I hope he will so run that he may gain the prize, and all the dear children in Rocky Brook. The Lord is working in the place and some of the people do not know it.

I left Tuesday morning. Reached Centerville before night—went to meeting, and heard Bro. Champlin speak to a room full of attentive hearers. The word spoken was in season. Stopped the night with a brother-in-law. I hope he and sister Deborah and family will get ready to meet the Lord.

I then went over to Natick with brother and sister Wright, and heard Bro. Bellows speak to the brethren and sisters in this place. I believe the Lord spoke through him for the good of them that took heed to what was said. I believe there is some salt in Natick that has not lost its savor. O Lord, bless the brethren in Natick! The next day I thought I would go into the mill and see some of the brethren there and talk about the coming kingdom. The first man I saw I asked him if he loved the coming of the Lord. He says, "What do you mean? The Advent?" I told him "Yes." He ordered me out of the mill forthwith, and told me if I did not go he would have me thrown out. So I thought I would go out and save him the trouble of throwing me out. I told him I hoped the Lord would bless him.

In the evening I went to a meeting at Bro. Rose's. The Lord worked, and the devil also. This is the way, wherever the children of the Lord are. Brethren and sisters, victory is promised to the children of the Lord. First know we are right, and then go ahead, and the Lord will give us the kingdom; for it is his good pleasure so to do. Amen.

First day, Bros. Bellows preached to the church in River Point, and the word spoken was in season. In the evening we went up the river with some brethren from River Point, and the good Lord met with us. We had a rejoicing time.

The next morning I started for Providence to see Bro. H. L. Hastings. Found him, after some search, traveling about like a man full of business; and I found before I left that he had all he could attend to. I think if he does as the good Lord wants him to, he will have an abundant entrance into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior. It is good, brethren, to obey the commandments of God, because the promise is to such, they shall have a right to the tree of life, and enter through the gates into the city. Hallelujah! we are almost there, and I am glad.

Dear reader, let us seek faithfully to get the Spirit of Christ in us, and then be led by it; then we shall be sons of God, for the word of the Lord says—"As many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the Sons of God." Are you led by the Spirit of God? If so, your prayers will be heard, your conversation will be seasoned with the grace of God; every word will have meaning, they will be attended with power, and your living in this last hour of time will amount to something. One word directed by God through you will have its effect; it will be a savor of life unto life, or of death unto death. We should be living epistles, known and read of all men.

"Oh, for a closer walk with God,
A calm and heavenly frame;
A light to shine upon the road
That leads us to the Lamb."

New Shoreham, R. I., Nov. 16th.

From H. C. Wright.

Bro. Grant:—I am the least and most unworthy of all my Father's children; but he has promised a home in his kingdom to all those that love him, and I feel that I have a claim to his promise. I love the Lord because he first loved me. Precious Savior, I love him, and know it is good to trust in his name. May he ever give me grace, and the aid of his Holy Spirit, that I may live to his honor and glory, love and serve him with a perfect heart, and at his coming be prepared, with all the saints of every age and clime, to enter into his kingdom.

I appreciate the Crisis more and more; I love the precious truth it promulgates. I lend it to my neighbors, and many of them read it with pleasure, and I trust with profit. One man and his wife have embraced the truth as it is in Jesus, and are rejoicing in that truth which maketh free indeed, and in hope of the glory of God. I have procured within the last two years several hundred pages of tracts and scattered them among the inhabitants of this village and vicinity, and I find many willing to read and anxious to know the truth. I ask an interest in your prayers, that I may be faithful in the discharge of duty, and to my God.

Cascade, Iowa.

From Eld. T. M. Preble.

Bro. Grant:—We are having very good meetings in this city—the prospect is brightening—a number of young people and heads of families have recently hoped in the pardoning mercy of God, and some have been revived and reclaimed, while a more general interest is quite visible.

Concord, N. H.

Obituary Notice.

Died, in Magog, Nov., 1859, Stephen G. Chapman, aged ninety-three years, six months and seventeen days.

He was born in the town of Epson, N. H. He moved into Canada in the year of 1806. He was sick about six months, and confined to the bed three months. His sufferings were great, but be bore all patiently, as becometh a meek disciple of Christ. He joined the Baptist church in the sixty-second year of his age. He died in full faith of meeting his Savior when he comes to bring forth his sleeping saints. His funeral sermon was preached by Eld. Daniel Blake, from Joshua 1: 2,—"Moses, my servant, is dead." He leaves five children and a large circle of friends to mourn his loss, but they mourn not as those that have no hope.

Eld. John Chapman.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

[From Liverpool the 19th ult.]

Ratifications of the treaties lately concluded between France, Austria and Sardinia, are to be exchanged at Zurich by the representatives of those Powers on the 21st of November.

France has issued letters of invitation to the European Congress, to those Powers who signed the Vienna treaties, and three Italian rulers.

The attitude of the English and French newspaper press is daily becoming more warlike.

The London Times calls on the Emperor Napoleon to put an end to the suspense felt by the English nation.

The Congress of the European Powers is expected to meet at Paris, but no date has as yet been mentioned for its session.

The London Society of Art has inaugurated a movement for a great Exhibition, to be held in 1862.

It is reported that the Emperor Napoleon opposes the assumption of the Regency of Central Italy by Buoncompagni.

A report is in circulation that Garibaldi has resigned the command of the forces of Central Italy, and joined the Sardinian army.

O'Donnell has also taken precautions against internal convulsions, by imitating the Emperor of the French previous to the late war, by dividing the Spanish Peninsula and the Balearic Islands into five great military commands, so that the troops depending on each may be organized as a corps d'armee, and the command of those forces, and of the territory they occupy, is confided to a field marshal as General-in-chief. There seems to be vast preparations for a campaign against the Moors.

The Italian Question.

The London Morning Post says: "The king of Sardinia has not refused to allow the Prince Carignan to accept the regency. His Majesty has expressed his wish to postpone for the present any immediate decision on the question."

A French journal states that the Piedmontese government has informed the various European powers that it will interfere militarily should anything take place in Central Italy to make intervention necessary.

THE PAPAL STATES.

Rome, Nov 10. General Garibaldi lately wrote to General de Guyon to ask what he would do in case a conflict were to take place between the Pontifical troops and the army of Central Italy. The French general commanding the army of occupation of Rome evaded the precise question put to him, but he told the questioner plainly that if in any conflict in which the French army should ever take part he (Garibaldi) should happen to fall into his hands, he would have him shot immediately.

The Mercure de Souabe states that Prince Gortschakoff has addressed a circular to the Russian representatives abroad. "It appears certain," says this journal, "that from this time neither Prussia nor Russia will support the project of an Italian Confederation. This combination, in fact, would give the preponderance to France in Italy, and we have good reason for believing that England will reject it on the same ground."

[From a foreign correspondent.]

"We have, therefore, we think, established that there is considerable irritation in the mind of the French army and nation against England, and that that irritation has mainly been caused by the action of the French government. From this it necessarily follows that the French government wishes that irritation to exist, but it does not necessarily follow that the French government has resolved to go to war with this country. It may well be that a profound politician like the Emperor of the French is not unwilling to have it believed that his people are burning to avenge the misfortunes of the last war upon England, and that if peace be preserved it is entirely owing to his good sense and moderation. It may be that the Emperor Napoleon, while exciting the national spirit of his subjects against us, and making such preparations as would be required if a war were really in contemplation, only wishes to place himself in an [illegible] position—that England, which desires peace above all things, may be intimidated into following whatever impulse he may please to give to the affairs of Europe; or, lastly, it may be that these things really mean what those politically opposed to the Emperor declare they mean, and that we have a danger to confront in the existence of which we cannot yet persuade ourselves to believe. Unhappily, we cannot afford to speculate on the alternative. The hatreds and passions of mankind are more easily stimulated than allayed, and it is not our fault if we are forced to act in a time of profound peace as if the camp of Boulogne was already formed again, and another flotilla awaited the orders of its Imperial master."

Married.

In Bridgewater, Ct., Nov. 23d, 1859, by Eld. George Teeple, Mr. JOSEPH WARREN of Windsor, Mass., and Miss ELIZABETH STRONG of Bridgewater.

Notices, &c.

"☞ Christian Lyre." ☜

The Christian Lyre is now ready. Through much labor and expense it has been prepared, and we hope that it will repay the toil, anxiety and outlay of money which was necessary to its completion. The stereotypist has affirmed that it is the best collection of sacred music which has passed through his hands for years. Owing to the heavy expense which the work has incurred, it is considered necessary, that, for the present, the sales should be STRICTLY FOR CASH. And in view of this, the publishers will make a reduction where six or more combine to order them, thus:—Single copies 60 cents, postage 8 cts. Six copies $3.00. One dozen, or more, at $5.40 per dozen, exclusive of postage.

Orders received in accordance with the above, will receive prompt attention.

Editorial Notice.—Discussion.

We are to have a discussion with Eld. W. W. Clayton, from Auburn, N. Y., at Seneca Falls, commencing Dec. 5th, and continuing five evenings. The Eld. has forwarded the following two questions:

1. "When man dies, his spirit remains in a conscious state, separate from the body, till the resurrection."

2. "The punishment of the wicked will consist in the eternal extinction of their being."

Dedication.

The new Advent chapel in East Windsor, Conn., one mile below Warehouse Point, in Prior District, will be dedicated to the service of the Lord, Providence permitting, on Friday, Dec. 16th, at half past one o'clock, P. M., the meeting to continue over the following Sabbath. It is expected that Eld. J. Turner will preach the dedication sermon. We invite our brethren and sisters from abroad to come and join us in this feast of love, for we expect the Lord will be with us.

For the brethren, S. P. Babcock.

Notice.

The next meeting of the R. I. Conference will be at River Point, Dec. 28th, 29th, and 30th. Let the Brethren and Sisters come with warm hearts expecting or intending to have a good meeting. Joseph D. Brown, Clerk.

☞ Eld. N. F. Nason will meet the brethren in Windsor, Me., Dec. 23d to continue over Sunday, and will stop in the adjoining towns a short time. Let all that have an interest in the coming King, make one effort to save those that have no hope in Christ.

☞ I live at 16 Division St., Troy, N. Y., between River and First Streets. Should any of the brethren coming this way, feel disposed to call on me, I should be much pleased to entertain them. They will find the pilgrim's home. Place of business 257 River St.

Solomon Hale.

☞ Will any Bro. or Sr., who knows the hymn called the "Choir of angels," send them to the Crisis office for publication, and oblige a Sister?

Conference.

There will be a conference in Wilton, Iowa, or where the brethren in that vicinity may think best, commencing Wednesday, Dec. 21st, (eve.) and continue over the following Lord's day. Let there be a general gathering.

Walter Pratt.

Conference.

In Earlville, Ill., will commence on Wednesday, Jan. 4th, 1860, and continue over the Lord's day following. One and all, come and pray the Lord to give us a feast.

W. Pratt.

☞ I will hold a conference in Elizabeth, Joe Davis Co., Ill., Wednesday, Jan. 18th, and continue over Lord's day following. The brethren must write me if they wish the above named meeting, and name where (what depot) they will meet me. Direct Muscatine, Iowa, care of J. Covell.

Walter Pratt.

Notice.

There will be a quarterly meeting in Earlville, LaSalle Co., Ill., to commence Wednesday, Dec. 14th, 1859, in the evening, and continue over Sunday. We hope the church in that district will be well represented. We give a general invitation to all the preachers in that region to attend. It is expected that Bro. Walter Pratt will be there without fail, and the friends wish Bro. John Howell to be there. In behalf of the friends,

Moses Chandler.

Pulpit Notice.

Bro. Edwin Burnham has taken the entire charge of the pulpit in the "Advent Chapel" at Portsmouth, N. H., for the present, and therefore, all who wish to correspond in relation to that matter, must do so with him at Newburyport, Mass.

In behalf of the church, E. S.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

Bro. D. T. Taylor will preach in Boston, Chapman Hall, Sunday .... Dec. 11th

J. G. Smith will preach in Holderness .... Dec. 11th
Hooksett .... Dec. 18th

I have an appointment to preach at Sutton, Mill Village, in the Union Meeting-house, the second Sabbath in this month, Dec. 11th.

T. R. Preble.

The Lord willing, I will preach at
Exeter, N. H. .... Sunday, Dec. 11th
Lowell, Mass. .... Dec. 12th
East Princeton, Mass. .... 13th, 14th and 15th

H. F. Carpenter.

Providence permitting, I will preach in Albany Monday evening, Dec. 12th; and commence a series of meetings in the Town-house Hall, Danbury, Ct., Tuesday evening, Dec. 13th, and probably continue every evening till the 25th inst.

Miles Grant.

L. D. Thompson will preach in Pomfret, Vt. .... Dec. 11th
Auburn, N. H. .... Dec. 12th
Lawrence, Mass. .... Dec. 13th
Haverhill .... Dec. 14th
Kingston, N. H. .... Dec. 15th
Exeter .... Dec. 16th
South Reading .... Dec. 18th
Westford .... Dec. 19th

The Lord willing, I will preach in Ashford, Ct., (school-house) Axe Factory .... Dec. 18th

C. W. Baker.

Eld. C. F. Sweet appoints to preach in Somerset, N. Y. .... Dec. 12th and continue until the 18th.
Coeymans .... Jan. 10th to the 15th

O. D. Gibson will preach in West Roxbury, Vt .... Dec. 11th
Roxbury Hollow .... Dec. 18th
(as Bro. D. Braily shall appoint.)

Bro. J. K. Bellows will preach in
Chester Factories, Mass. .... Dec. 13th and 14th
Blandford, (Bro. Henry's) .... Dec. 15th
New Boston, Mass. .... Nov. 16th

Business Matters.

To Correspondents.

Eld. S. S. Brewer's P. O. address is South Glastenbury, Ct.

P. B. Morgan.—Send your order for "Concordance" to H. L. H. We cannot supply you at that price.

C. B. Walker.—All right.

G. L. Rice.—Your paper is sent regularly from this office weekly.

Cash Receipts.

Preachers' Aid Society.—F. A. Baker, $2.00. To Dec. 6th, $87.00.

P. Bradford 234, $3.20, J. P. Babcock $1.30, S. Pray 234, $1.16, Geo. Henry for Collinsville Brn., $7.50, C. C. Pickering 234, $2.36, J. Crowley 232, 50 cts.

R. Dickens 238, H. Taft 244, A. Hemenway 241, T. T. Holloway 244, C. Farrington 221, J. P. Ellis 244, A. Burgess 244, J. G. Heath 242, O. W. Wentworth 244, J. P. Longee 226, R. M'Fadden 213, J. G. Baker, 239, N. G. Howard 234, N. Tibbils 244, Jno. Moore p. p. 236, J. Rogers 245, Mrs. L. Howard 245, J. C. Pettingell 234, C. H. Randall 241, J. S. Moulton 244, J. S. Binsdell 234, Jas. Berry 224, Jos. Harris 230, E. G. Kingsbury 234, P. West 245, A. Dolloff 247, J. Dean 246, Mrs. L. Mather 234, F. Devinney 234, J. H. Horton 234, K. Springer 246, F. A. Baker p. p. 228, Jos. Kenyon 248,—$1.00 each.

S. Brownell 231, A. Douglass 234,—$1.50 each.

W. G. Poor 247, D. C. Fourtelot 260, Mrs. L. Thayer 276, Jas. Lord 257, J. E. Healey 235, J. H. Hall, 2 copies, 247.—$2.00 each.

Books and Tracts.—J. Crowley 50 cts., W. G. Poor 6 cts., W. W. Buck $2.33, H. V. Reed $1.00, I. Bowles 28 cts., B. H. Taylor 15 cts., P. A. Smith 8 cts., Jos. Parry $6.00, H. B. Martin 69 cts., R. R. York $5.00, C. W. Law 5 cts., J. P. Longee 24 cts., G. Noble $1.24, C. H. Sutton $2.00, H. Drake $5.00, J. B. Dodge $8.00, W. A. Grinnell 68 cts., Mrs. M. C. Kershaw $1.00, G. T. Collins $1.24, A. W. Sibley 12 cts., W. Collins $1.00, J. B. White $1.00, C. B. Walker $1.00, F. Devinney 50 cts.

Books and Tracts.

Law requires all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on TRACTS is only one half cent per ounce, if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for ANY of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the Crisis, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

The Rich Man and Lazarus; Thief on the Cross, and the Souls under the Altar, an exposition of Matt. 10: 28, Gen. 2: 17, with other interesting matter. By Miles Grant. Price, single, 5 cents, $3.00 per hundred, 1-4 off per dozen. Postage 1 cent.

The Soul—what is it? or a careful ex-amination of all the uses of the words nephesh and psuche as employed in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant, Boston. 32 pp., 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. They weigh about one ounce each. A valuable tract for the times. Get one.

The Spirit—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words ruach and pneuma as found in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant. 32 pp., price 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. A valuable aid in the study of the Scriptures.

The Parable of the Rich Man and Lazarus; does it imply eternal future suffering? By C. F. Hudson. 24 pp. Price, 3 cts. single. $2.00 per hundred.

The Doctrine of Everlasting Punish-ment: a discussion of the question, "Do the Scriptures teach the doctrine of the eternal conscious suffering of the wicked?" Between Dr. J. Litch and Eld. Miles Grant. Price, single, 25 cts. Postage 8 cts. 1-4 off per dozen.

What is Man? A Bible view of his creation. The meaning of soul, spirit, death and hell, by Miles Grant. Price, single copy 5 cts., $3.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

"The Speechless Guest at the Marriage Feast," by John F. Cotton, being a short review of the parable, with statistical remarks of its illustration in the destruction of Jerusalem; and its positive negation of the doctrine of election and reprobation. Price 5 cts. single, postage 1 ct. $3.00 per hundred.

Anti-eternal Torment. By Edwin Burnham. Price 1 cent, single; 75 cts. per hundred. Postage 1 ct.

Death not Life: or the Destruction of the Wicked scripturally Established. By J. Blain, Baptist minister. Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cents single; postage 3 cents. Bound, 40 cents; postage 5 cents.

Church Debts. By W. Ramsey, D. D. A rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cts—postage 9 cts.

The Rights of Wrong, or, Is Evil Eternal? By C. F. Hudson. Price 5 cts. single; 8 copies for 20 cts. Mailed post paid. $2.00 per hundred. Sold by G. W. Young, 138 William St., New York; Truman and Spofford, Cincinnati; and S. C. Griggs & Co., Chicago.

Cruden's Condensed Concordance. Every Bible student should have a copy. Price, postpaid $2.50.

Son of God, by M. Grant, 10 cts. single; postage 1 cent.

[illegible] The Harp: a [illegible] by J. V. Himes. Price [illegible] off per dozen. [illegible]

Words of Warning. [illegible] postage 1 ct.; $2.50 per hundred.

English Bibles.—We have [illegible] ments so that we can furnish [illegible] than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

Life and Religious Experience of [illegible] Munger, including [illegible] connected with [illegible] ten by himself. This is a very interesting work, and will be read with interest by all. Price 40 cts.—postage 10 cents.

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed; or Christ the promised Messiah. By Miss Mary A. Seymour. An excellent tract to [illegible] the Scriptures, and upon the [illegible] day. Every one should have a copy. Price $2.00 per hundred,—5 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

200 Stories for Children, compiled by T. M. Preble. An excellent [illegible] of interesting incidents, well calculated to benefit the readers. Price 40 cents; postage 7 cents.

Foster's Letter and Tract on Hell; $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 2 cent.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Genesee, N. Y. Price $1., postage paid.

An Appeal to Pious Trinitarians. By H. Grew. Price 2 cts., postage 1 ct.

The Saint's Inheritance, by Wm. Sheppard.—A good tract to give your neighbor. Price $4.00.

The Wicked not Immortal. Two hundred texts quoted to prove the destruction of the wicked. By Eld. Jacob Blain. Price 1 cent single; $1.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

The Great Error Exposed; or, Endless Misery not a Bible Doctrine. In this tract all texts relied on to prove endless misery are examined, and two hundred for destruction quoted. By Eld. Jacob Blain. Price 3 cents single; $2.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

We also have the following works, published and for sale by H. L. Hastings, Providence, R. I.

1.—The Voice of the Church on the Coming and Kingdom of the Redeemer, or a history of the Reign of Christ on Earth, by D. T. Taylor, edited with a preface, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. 12mo. pp. 420, price $1, postage 18 cents.

2.—The Great Controversy between God and Man. Its origin, progress and termination, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. pp. 167, neatly bound in cloth, price 60 cents—postage 10c.

3.—Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion, and a Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. Edited with a preface, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. 12mo. pp. 122. Price, in paper covers, 30 cts.—postage 5 cts; cloth gilt, 60 cts.—post. 8 cts.

4.—The Fate of Infidelity: or the Deal-ings of Providence with Modern Infidels; together with an appendix, containing a brief account of the special judgments visited upon the early opposers of Christianity; by a converted Infidel. 1 vol. 12mo. pp. 175, cloth gilt, 35 cents—post-paid.

5.—Future Punishment: an Argument in two parts, from Reason and Scripture, by H. H. Dobney, Baptist minister of England; with an appendix on the State of the Dead, by John Milton. This work is one of patient thought and calm and christian argument. 1 vol. 12mo. pp. 312, price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

6.—Debt and Grace: or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C. F. Hudson. A most learned and valuable work, exhibiting great candor, ability and research, containing quotations from some five hundred writers of all ages and languages, and showing conclusively that eternal life is the peculiar privilege of the believer in Jesus Christ. 1 vol. 12mo. pp. 480, price $1.25—post paid.

7.—Pauline Theology: or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. A convincing argument, deduced from a careful examination of every passage on the subject of Future Punishment in Paul's fourteen epistles. 12mo. pp. 84, 15 cts. single, $10 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

8.—The Old Paths: or the Primitive Doctrine of a Future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolic fathers, with arguments and remarks, by H. L. Hastings. pp. 67 12mo. 15 cts. single, $12 per hundred—post. 5c.

Important Questions—3 Nos., 4 pp. each. Price, per sett, 3 cts. single; $1.50 per hundred.

Fables of Infidelity, and Facts of Faith. By R. Patterson. 12mo. Price, postpaid, 75 cts; $6 per dozen.

Tracts on Prophecy, (bound,) 224 pp. Price, postpaid, 60 cts.

Tracts on Immortality, (bound,) 220 pp. Price, postpaid, 60 cts. Both volumes mailed for $1.

Tracts of 24 pages. Price, 5 cts. single copy; $3 per hundred: postage 1 ct. each, or half a cent per ounce if ordered to the amount of eight ounces or upwards.

1—Church not in Darkness; 2—The Three Worlds; 3—The Last Days; 4—Plain Truths; by Hastings. 5—Noah, his Age and Ours; 6—Desire of all Nations; 7—It is Done; by John Cumming. 8—A Voice of Warning; 9—New Heavens and Earth, by D. T. Taylor. 10—Ancient Landmarks; 11—State of the Dead, by Milton. 12—Intermediate State, by Grew.

Tracts at 3 cents single copy; $1.50 per hundred: postage 1 ct. each, or half an ounce for packages of eight or more ounces.

1—Future Punishment; by Grew. 2—Scripture tract number one, Destiny of the Wicked. 3—Outline of the coast of Man; by Lambert. 4—Key of Truth; 5—Man's Future State; by Sheldon. —6 Olive Leaves, by Grew.

Tracts at 2 cents single copy; $1 per hundred.

1—The Night Cometh; by J. Adey. 2—The Day of Judgment, by St. Cyril.

Tracts at 1 cent single copy; 50 cents per hundred.

1—Olive Leaves, separate; 2—Ancient Landmarks, separate; 3—Forty Questions on Immortality. 4—Scripture Searchers, one, two, three, four, five and six.

The above Tracts are on hand, and or-ders can be filled at once. [illegible] Orders with the CASH are solicited. Persons ordering tracts should order as much or more than fifty cents worth, as packages of [illegible] ounces [illegible] Those who buy books to sell will receive a liberal discount. The poor can have them free by sending stamps to pay the postage,—and those that FEEL poor also.

Address H. L. Hastings, Providence, R. I.

For sale also by N. Branch, Moline, Ill.; G. W. Young, 138 William St., New York.

* The Landmarks are issued in sets of six. Each which can be separated for distribution. The set contains, The Coming and Kingdom of Christ, by 20,000 Baptists; the Duration of the Earth, by A. Clarke; Hope and Duty of the Church, by [illegible] ry; Restitution, by Cyril; Warning Voice, by Cotton Mather; Loving Christ's Appearing, by Baxter.

† The Olive Leaves are three [illegible] that can be separated for distribution [illegible] Little Children, Love one Another; [illegible] Resting Places; three, My Friends; [illegible] Love, five, Abundant Grace; six, [illegible] Hastings. Just the thing [illegible] classes of saints and sinners.

Glad Tidings: or Bible proof that [illegible] and sin are to [illegible] struction [illegible] ment. All texts [illegible] and arranged. By J. Blain. [illegible] 1 cent.

The Three Kingdoms: [illegible]

☞ The above [illegible]

☞ The following [illegible] be had of J. R. W[illegible]

[illegible]

For the Crisis.

"Lovest Thou Me?"

Lord, the question now we hear,
[illegible] of old,
[illegible], "Lovest thou me?"
[illegible] one belong the fold.

My reply is just the same,
Lord, thou knowest all things well,
[illegible] I love thee—if not thee,
[illegible] I love, I cannot tell.

"Lovest thou me" more than these,
[illegible] pleasures of this world;
[illegible] nothing when compared
[illegible] my love, and cross unfurled?
[illegible], then—feed my sheep,
Lead them to the Shepherd's fold,
Showing thus thy love for me,
Tribute small, for love untold!

"'Lovest thou me?' feed my lambs,
I have my example given;
Many need thy friendly aid,
Many from the fold are riven.
All the kindness shown to them,
Is the same as done to me;
Ne'er be weary in the work,
Sure reward 's awaiting thee."

"Lovest thou me?" O that I could,
With my mind, and heart, and soul,
Love as pure as Jesus showed,
Thought, and word, and act control,
Kindled at the living fount
Of Jesus' own abiding love,
Loving ever to the end,
Pleading for his own above.

M. C. A.

For the Crisis.

When at Home.

Once more I stand beneath a parental roof, wondering, and recalling past days—lost in deep thought. Truly, this is the home of my childhood. This is the place where I received a kind father's counsel and protection, and the care of a mother, as kind, affectionate, solicitous and benevolent, as any one could wish. Here is the place where time passed so tardily. Hours seemed as long as days—days like weeks—weeks like months, and months like years. Yet how pleasantly and joyfully they rolled away. Here, five brothers and three sisters, with grandchildren, met yearly to spend Thanksgiving with their parents. Then was heard the violins, the bugle, the clarinette, the flute, and as sweet voices as ever fell on a musical ear. The music was animating and sweet, but since, I have heard sweeter in the congregation of the saints.

Here is the hearth-stone on which I bowed at the midnight hour and resolved before God, whose eye only saw me, I would give my heart to him and my life to his cause. Here are the fields I ranged when the woe was ringing in my ears, if I preached not the gospel. Here is the same fence on which I sat, when I, for the first time, called in question the doctrine of the consciousness, suffering and happiness of the dead, from the fact, those that Christ resurrected gave us no intimation of what they suffered or enjoyed when dead. This was on my return from my bower of prayer, which was behind a large rock, where I found a sweet place to commune with my God and learned much of my theology. Ah! the bower of prayer is an excellent theological school. At this secret altar I often tested the promises of God—always found them true, and received blessings that will never be forgotten.

Here is the room where our affectionate mother and noble-hearted father were so long confined by sickness and ended their earthly pilgrimage. O what a change! Although the house retains its form, and a brother and wife are there, and many things that were very dear in past days, only stand as monuments of memory, unless their silence is a witness of the sad change and time's rapid flight. The old clock, that has been at work ever since my remembrance, is still diligent at its post, but its vibrations and alarm are as a knell of death to the surviving children. Yes, it is constantly speaking—the hands which placed me here are silent in death. The old family Bible lies in its wonted place, but there is no father or mother to call the family together, and if living, the children could not come readily to the call. One dear sister sleeps in death, and the seven living ones are scattered over the dreary earth, never to be gathered in earth again, and, I fear some will not come to the call when angels gather the elect. O what a sad thought! We were obedient to our earthly father's call, and were glad when the time drew near to greet each other. Why not all obey our heavenly Father's call, and share in the feast our God is to prepare for all who love and serve him?

Brothers and sisters, all of us have lived long enough to satisfy us there is nothing earthly worthy of our devotion, and life is but a dream. Shall we not as wise men [illegible] seek a home in the kingdom, [illegible] more meet with our parents under circumstances far more favorable, more joyous, more glorious, more heav[illegible] all our earthly meetings? I can [illegible] thought, and endure the toil and [illegible] of wandering and preaching through [illegible] all that is dear—my [illegible]—in the present world; [illegible] my kindred [illegible] is too much to bear. [illegible]

For the Crisis.

The Judgment.

1. Will there be a future punishment? Says Paul, in Acts 17: 31, "He hath appointed a day in the which he will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained." Says Daniel, chap. 7: 10, "A fiery stream issued and came forth from before him; thousand thousands ministered unto him, and ten thousand times ten thousand stood before him; the judgment was set, and the books were opened;" and all this after the last earthly monarchy had found its fiery doom.

Again, Rev. 20: 12,—"And I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God; and the books were opened, and another book was opened, which is the book of life: and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books"—according to their works. Hence there will be a future judgment.

2. When will this judgment sit? 2 Tim. 4: 1—"I charge thee, therefore, before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom." Again, Matt. 25: 31,—"When the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory, and before him shall be gathered all nations."

3. Will the wicked dead appear at the judgment? Says Solomon, Eccl. 11: 9.—"Rejoice, oh young man, in thy youth, and let thy heart cheer thee in the days of thy youth, and walk in the ways of thine heart, and in the sight of thine eyes; but know thou, that for all these things God shall bring thee into judgment." 2 Pet. 2: 9.—"The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptation, and to reserve the unjust unto the day of judgment to be punished." Says Paul, Acts 24. 15, "And (I) have hope (or confidence) toward God, which they themselves also allow, that there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust." But were there any doubt that the wicked would have a resurrection, to whom ought the christian to refer to decide this matter? Most certainly to the "Lord of the dead;" for says Inspiration, "It shall come to pass, that whosoever will not hear that prophet, shall be destroyed from among the people." Again, says the Almighty,—"This is my beloved Son, HEAR HIM." What does the Master say? "I say unto you, that every idle word that men shall speak, they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment." "Hear Him!" "The men of Nineveh shall rise in judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it, because they repented at the preaching of Jonas; and behold a greater than Jonas is here." "Hear Him!" "The queen of the south shall rise up in the judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it; for she came from the uttermost parts of the earth to hear the wisdom of Solomon, and behold a greater than Solomon is here." "Hear Him!" "Marvel not at this (the resurrection of the widow's son, Jairus' daughter, or a Lazarus from the tomb,) for the hour is coming in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and come forth; they that have done good unto the resurrection of life, and they that have done evil unto the resurrection of damnation." But will they come up alive? The Master says they shall give account for every idle word in the day of judgment; and dead men cannot do that. Says Paul, "For we shall all stand before the judgment seat of Christ; for it is written, As I live, saith the Lord, every knee shall bow to me, and every tongue shall confess to God." Dead men cannot do that. Peter says the unjust are reserved unto the day of judgment to be punished. Paul says that death is the wages of sin. Now it is certain that dead men cannot be punished with death. Sheriffs do not hang men that are found dead in prison.

Now as Jesus Christ is to execute judgment, and as the judgment or punishment of death cannot be executed upon a dead man, and as Peter says they are reserved unto judgment to be punished, it follows that all must be made alive, as Paul says, "For we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ, that every one may receive the things done in the body according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad." And "we are sure that the judgment of God is according to truth against them which commit such things; and thinkest thou this, oh man, that judgest them which do such things, and doest the same, that thou shalt escape the judgment of God?" "Who will render to every man according to his deeds."

H. PRATT.

MUSIC AS A MEDICINE.—Eugene de Mirecourt, in his lively little biography of Felicien David, the composer, tells that when in the East, David cured a man, sick with the fever, by his piano-forte performances. The sick man at the sound of the instrument felt his fever leave him, and when it threatened to renew its attacks, David would chase it away by a few preludes. In a week the man was well. This was not unlike the genuine original David playing before Saul.

This fact is worth receiving the attention of the faculty. To treat people by music would be an excellent method of introducing harmony into the conflicting medical systems.

☞ Clothes and company do oftentimes tell tales in a mute, but significant language.

For the Crisis.

Where Your Treasure is there Will Your Heart be also.

Why should we love earth's glittering toys,
Which scarce a moment stay,
While pure and everduring joys
Invite our souls away?

Why should we love to linger where
Sin's withering blight is seen,
And where the friends that we've held dear,
Death's victims long have been?

Where tears of sorrow oft do flow,
And cares our bosoms fill;
Where all our joys are mixed with woe,
And all our good with ill?

I thirst for that immortal life,
Where death can never come,
Beyond the reach of care and strife—
There is the christian's home;

A home prepared by Him, who died
A ruined world to save;
By Him who once was crucified,
And triumphed o'er the grave.

E. M. F.

West Killingly, Ct.

Correspondence.

From Sr. A. Mussey.

BRO. GRANT:—While remembering past blessings from the Lord, I will communicate some of my thoughts to the saints scattered abroad.

The blessed privilege I enjoyed at the Westford meeting, with the dear saints, was not a misspent opportunity; and although many weeks have passed since, I often think of scenes enacted there. My mind wanders back to the sacred spot, but oh how changed! That beautiful grove, that then resounded with the praises of God, is now desolate; those beautiful green boughs have faded, and its leaves lie beneath the November snows. I think of the stand where the saints of the Lord poured forth the truth, —but all is drear there now; not one of them to tell the lone traveler of a dying, living, coming, Savior. But where are they now? I know not, but doubtless they are blowing the gospel trump, east, west, north and south. God crown their labors with success. I see the empty platform, that was filled with anxious listeners to catch the sound of salvation through Jesus. I look for the white spread tents beneath the green boughs; but all are gone; no gathering for prayer, no songs of Zion to be heard, no voice in supplication ascending to God's throne, all is hushed and still. I look for the smiling countenances of dear brethren and sisters who so pleasantly greeted me there, and many for the first time, but they are scattered, never all to meet again till the last trump shall sound. God grant that we may then all meet, never to part again. I praise God while I write, for the privilege of attending the Westford campmeeting, and for the many happy associations formed there; and should time continue another year, I hope many of us may meet there again to worship the God we love, and sing together—

"We have passed the coast of Babylon
And the Medo Persian light,
And we've left the coast of Grecia far behind;
We've been sailing down the Roman shore for eighteen hundred years,
And the chart declares the port we soon shall find."

Yes, we believe it; and we can sing what we believe. Our Chart tells us of a glorious day in the future; it also points us to the landmarks we are to pass prior to the coming of that day, by which we may know when we near our destined haven, when we can lift up our heads, knowing our redemption draweth nigh. So then—

"We'll watch and we'll pray,
As our vessel bears away,
And we ne'er will be disheartened any more."

No! we will face the storm, and buffet the winds and waves a little longer,—Jesus is at the helm, and he will safely guide the old ship Zion, with all her precious cargo, safely into the harbor of eternal rest. Then our song shall be—

"Home at last! home at last!"

Suffer a word of exhortation. We have each our work to do in the church of Christ, and happy shall we be if we do the little he requires at our hands. We have soon to give an account of our stewardship. It it is a dark and perilous time in which we live, iniquity abounds and the love of many is waxing cold; let us, then, gird on the whole armor, and fight the good fight of faith—tell the world of a coming Savior and a coming Judgment, whether they will hear or forbear, that our skirts may be clear.

With joy I look forward to the resurrection morn, when the sleeping saints will awake to everlasting life, and the scattered Israel shall be gathered. Yours in hope of immortality when Jesus comes.

Lake Village, N. H.

HEAR AND MEDITATE.—Philip Henry notes in his diary the saying of a pious hearer of his own which deeply affected him: "I find it easier," said the good man, "to go six miles to hear a sermon, than to spend one quarter of an hour in meditating and praying over it in secret, as I should when I come home."

☞ Sincerity is the very queen of virtues; she holds the throne and will be sure to keep it. Yes, the very sight of it in the soul makes a man sit cheerful and thankful—Noah-like, in the midst of all tempests and storms.

☞ Grace is given to trade with; it is given to lay out, not lay up.

Selections.

The Bible and Spirit of the Age.

There is much in the spirit of the age that creates an imperative demand for the study, and the all-pervading influence of the Bible.

"In an age," says Lacon, "remarkable for good reasoning, and bad conduct; for sound rules and corrupt manners; when virtue fills our heads and vice our hearts; —in an age when modesty herself is more afraid of detection than delinquency; when independence of principle consists in having no principle on which to depend; and free thinking not in thinking freely, but in being free from thinking; in an age when patriots will hold any thing but their tongues, and keep any thing but their word, and love nothing particularly but their characters; to attempt to improve a people in such an age, must be difficult: to instruct them dangerous: and he stands in no chance to mend who cannot at the same time amuse them."

Our age is like so many of our children —too wise for its years. It has grown wiser than its teachers. It is heady and high-minded—has sail enough and breeze enough, but lacks ballast.—Rev. H. Reed.

The Final Conflict.

"Fight the good fight of faith."—PAUL.

John, the "beloved disciple," while on the lonely isle of Patmos, was favored by the Lord with a view of the warfare of the christian army from the time when he lived until the accomplishment of Zion's warfare. He watches the hostile forces on the battle-field, until "the adversaries of the Lord" are "broken in pieces." He traces the contending armies, with their ever varying success, until the end. He beholds the church bold as a lion, fearing nothing, then patiently enduring the severest persecution. Now corrupted by the honor of the world, then fleeing from the haunts of men, and seeking some mountainous retreat, beyond the reach of her relentless foe. Changes like these have been continually going on, and after a long lapse of years we approach the hour of final conflict. The armies are strong. See them gathering and thickening around. Their solid columns stretch across the plain. Reinforcements are coming in. The recruiting officers of the prince of darkness, the three gathering spirits, are performing their work. The black-bannered legions of the destroyer are pouring in by multitudes.

What will be the result of this gathering? Where is the army that shall withstand these assembled legions? Where is the phalanx that can stand unmoved and resist their tremendous charge?

Go with me to yon sweet tented valley. See yon blood-stained banner floating in the summer breeze. As we approach, all is fair and lovely. Hark! the soft music of the viol comes floating on the breeze. This is no martial music, but gentle as the syren's song. Enter those tents. The festal board is spread. What means this? The arms are laid aside. The sword, the shield, the helmet, the breast-plate, all are laid aside. Hilarity, mirth, gluttony, and drunkenness prevail. The arm that wielded the sword with power, trembles beneath the cup of earthly pleasure. The sentry are slumbering at their posts. The blinded watchman has thrown aside his trumpet, and come to join the thoughtless throng. What means all this? Awake! To arms! The foe is near! "O, no, they are our friends," say they; "all is peace." Tell them of their danger, tell of the exultation of their foes, they heed it not. Point them to the fearful black banner that floats o'er the assembling multitudes—they see it not. Alas! alas! Every faculty of body and mind has been deadened, blunted, and destroyed, by the fatal cup from which they have drunk.

Still a few, and only a few, have a knowledge of their true condition. They have spurned the draught of earthly bliss, even though proffered in a golden cup. They have dashed the goblet to the ground. They have watched. They have seen the danger, and for their faithful admonitions have been by their drunken fellow servants smitten again and again. They have done all that they can, in vain. They consult awhile, then take unto themselves the whole armor of God, gird themselves with the truth, and, grasping the blood-stained banner, retire from that ease-inviting encampment. They march across the plain, they climb the rugged hill-side, gain the summit of the lofty mountain, and there plant the standard, where it "cannot be hid." They form an encampment, and a few brave ones from far and near, clad in burnished armor, climb the rough ascent, and join that noble band. They intrench themselves, and plant their batteries. Day by day they annoy their foes beneath, and when night spreads its darkening shadows o'er them, they have learned not to sleep as do others. The sentry watch at their appointed posts.

Trumpet in hand, the watchman waits to give them notice of approaching danger. Yet they are not safe. Under cover of the night their crafty enemies have sought to take them by surprise; but in vain; they have been discomfited and driven back. At length the whole army is aroused. Dark masses of men in armor approach the mountain's base. O, what will be the fate of yon little band? They are brave, they are strong, they are fearless, "but what are they among so many?" Yet calm and confident they wait. The swift approaching crisis is at hand. The foe ascends, and comes like the gathering storm-cloud. Already the foremost is there. The cry of victory is raised. The black banner is floating proudly in the mountain breeze. Hark! that deafening shout! A reinforcement comes. Lo! heaven opens! The white robed cavalry of heaven appears! A mighty Conqueror, in blood-stained garments, leads the van. Many crowns proclaim his power and glory. On his crimson vesture is inscribed, KING OF KINGS AND LORD OF LORDS. His shout is the long expected sound of deliverance to the little band, and the death-knell to the invaders' hopes. Despair spreads its dark mantle o'er their guilty heads, and the invading throng falls like grass before the exterminating vengeance of the mighty Conqueror.

Reader, fill out the picture for yourself. Imagine, if you can, the joy of the ransomed—the woes of the lost—the horrors of that slumbering host that lay drunken in yonder shaded plain—and the soul-thrilling joy of those that unfurled the banner on the mountain top. Make the application for and to yourself. Where are you? [illegible] enemies of God? are intoxicated with the cup of earthly joy, and slumbering in the bowers of earthly pleasure? If so, I call on you to awake! Dash to the earth the cup of earthly pleasure. Gird on your neglected armor. Shake the slumber from thy soul. Climb the rocky heights, and join the friends of truth and righteousness, who wait for the Son of God from heaven; for to them that look for him he shall appear the second time without sin unto salvation.

H. L. H.

Be Forgiving.

Men are very apt to resent the mistreatments which they receive from their fellow-men. It is very hard for us to bear affronts and wrongs upon ourselves, without some outward expression of resentment. And if, when affronts and wrongs are heaped upon us, we are enabled, by some good habit, to restrain an outward expression of resentment, it is very hard for us to carry our inward thoughts in a christian way in respect to these things. When a man slanders you; when a man takes advantage of you; when a man treads you down, as it were, under his feet; when a man misrepresents your motives; when a man is, at every corner, your stumbling-block and your hindrance—then it is very hard for you to cherish toward him a gentle, forgiving spirit. How often do we get across each other's path in life! and when we do this, we see how hard the human heart is on the human heart. Powder does not go off so quick as the human heart; and it is not so powerful in its explosions, either.

Advice through the Keyhole.

There was once a young shoemaker, who became so much interested in idle tales that his shop was filled with loungers, talking and discussing and disputing about one thing and another from morning till night; and he found it often necessary to work till midnight to make up for the lost hours during the day.

One night after his shutters were closed, and he was busy on his bench, a boy passing along put his mouth to the keyhole and mischievously piped out, "Shoemaker, shoemaker, work by night, and run about all day." "Had a pistol been fired off at my ear," he said, "I could not have been more startled. I dropped my work, saying to myself, 'True, true, but you never shall have that to say of me again.' I never forgot it. To me it was as the voice of God, and it has been a word in season throughout my life. I learned from it not to leave till to-morrow the work of to-day, or to be idle when I ought to be working. From that time I turned over a new leaf.

Be Ye Patient.

Beside the toilsome way,
Lowly and sad, by fruits and flowers unblest,
Which my worn feet tread sadly, day by day,
Longing in vain for rest,

An angel softly walks,
With pale, sweet face, and eyes cast meekly down;
The while, from withered leaves and flowerless stalks,
She weaves my fitting crown.

A sweet and patient grace,
A look of firm endurance, true and tried,
Of suffering meekly borne, rests on her face,
So pure—so glorified.

And when my fainting heart
Desponds and murmurs at its adverse fate,
Then quietly the angel's bright lips part,
Murmuring softly—"Wait."

"Patience," she sweetly saith,
"The Father's mercies never come too late;
Gird thee with patient strength and trusting faith,
And firm endurance—wait!"

Angel! behold—I wait—
Wearing the thorny crown through all life's hours,
Wait till thy hand shall ope the eternal gate,
And change the thorns to flowers.

Our Children.

Our children are to fill our places in society—in church and state, and the manner in which they fill them depends upon the manner in which we educate them. If we train them up in the Sabbath-School, for God and his church, they will amply repay us for all our care; but if they are trained up for the world—in the streets—in the gambling and tippling saloon—in Sabbath-breaking, profanity, licentiousness, and intemperance—in idleness—in sin, they will dishonor our names, and repay us by-and-by with a vengeance!

How fearful our responsibility! When we consider that our son may make a talented, useful, and happy man, respected and beloved by all around him, or he may make a consummate villain, detested by the world as a nuisance and a curse, and that our daughter has a corresponding alternative before her—that in the history of both, in all probability, there is a crisis, or turning point, when it is uncertain which way they will preponderate—and that we necessarily play an important part in tipping the scale, we can but feel that this is a matter not to be trifled with, and that every means possible should be resorted to in order to secure the right drift, and save those so dear to us. As we would have them honorably act their part upon the stage of life, so let us sedulously aim to qualify them for it.—Morning Star.

The Loss of Early Purity of Character.

Over the beauty of the plum and the apricot, there grows a bloom and beauty more exquisite than the fruit itself;—a soft, delicate plush that overspreads its blushing cheek. Now if you strike your hand over that, and it is once gone, it is gone for ever; for it never grows but once. Take the flower that hangs in the morning, impearled with dew—arrayed as no queenly woman ever was arrayed with jewels. Once shake it, so that the beads roll off, and you may sprinkle water over it as carefully as you please, yet it can never be made again what it was when the dew fell silently upon it from heaven! On a frosty morning, you may see the panes of glass covered with landscapes—mountains, lakes, trees, blended in a beautiful, fantastic picture. Now lay your hand upon the glass, and by the scratch of your finger, or by the warmth of your palm, all the delicate tracery will be obliterated! So there is in youth a [illegible] which, when [illegible] work, and which, when torn and broken, will never be re-embroidered. A man who has spotted and soiled his garments in youth, though he may seek to make them white again, can never wholly do it, even were he to wash them with his tears. When a young man leaves his father's house, with the blessing of his mother's tears still wet upon his forehead, if he once loses that early purity of character, it is a loss that he can never make whole again. Such is the consequence of crime. Its effect cannot be eradicated; it can only be forgiven. It is a stain of blood that we can never make white, and which can be washed away only in the blood of Christ, that "cleanseth from all sin!"—Beecher.

Hygiene.

"THIS IS FOR YOUR HEALTH."—Paul.

Too Bad, too Bad!!

Read the following, and we think you will say our heading is very moderate:

"Dr Coles says that the American church consume five million dollars' worth of tobacco annually. Now the church go against tobacco, write against and preach against it; and after all the opposition to its use in the church, it is still used there as much, and more in proportion to the number of people, as it is outside the church."

This vast amount would keep ten thousand preachers in the vineyard of the Lord, allowing them five hundred dollars a year, or scatter eight billion (8,000,000,000) pages of Bro. Hastings' tracts, which would be eight pages to every inhabitant on the globe.

When we consider the amount of fretfulness, nervousness, despondency, dyspepsia, evil imaginations, mental weakness, thirst for strong drink, saying nothing about the insanity and delirium tremens that are caused by the use of the poisonous weed, tobacco, we feel justified in saying, it is "TOO BAD!!" Come, brother, leave it off.—ED.

For the Crisis.

Diet.—The Ministry.

"To the law and the testimony; if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them."—Isa. 8: 20.

In my late communication, Nov. 9th, I stated that the divinely appointed diet of Israel, the chosen people, the actual diet of patriarchs, prophets and apostles—the diet of holy men in their most devout and public approaches to God, in his ancient sanctuary—the Passover kept by our Lord and Savior, Jesus the Messiah, included flesh. It was "salted with salt; and consequently the sanctity that is usually based on abstinence from such authorized, heaven-appointed food, is altogether assumed. Nay, it is assumed against all such divine authority, given above, to the contrary. Therefore, all argument as to the efficiency of the ministry of Christ, that is supposed to be derived from the rejection of such food, should be abandoned by all who believe the gospel or reverence the blessed God.

From the note added by the editor, I need room for a brief explanation. It is agreeable to me to make the explanation, and as easy as it is agreeable. My belief is that temperance is one of the christian graces, while intemperance should be classed among the "Furies." Nay, it is the chief of a most terrible gang of Furies. On this admission some would ground their argument that total abstinence from animal food alone is temperance; or the only alternative between it and ministerial debasement into intemperance.

Note. This argument traced fairly one step further back, would take away the very appetites in question—the means of their temperate exercise. And thus this reasoning, when traced to its primary elements, reflects directly on the Creator. It arraigns the actual arrangements that God made in creating man, and the world, in which his faculties are to be developed, and made to answer the blessed ends contemplated in their creation. Thus this argument, in principle, sets itself above all that is called God, or that is worshiped, as the actual Creator of the existing world, with its adaptations to exercise man's God-given faculties. Total abstinence from, or the absence of, all means of indulgence may make the grace of temperance impossible.

Temperance consists in the reasonable, voluntary and righteous use of authorized good things. The word is defined "moderation," not absence. It is, as to food and drink, the opposite of excess, or of gluttony and drunkenness. But I forbear. "We must needs go out of the world," (as God's world) and away from ourselves (as God's creatures) to reach, in the present dispensation, the enthusiast's ideal of temperance. The laws of God, and the lives of all the most godly of men, of patriarchs and prophets, agree to exemplify the principle and practice of temperance in this present world. It is Romanism or fanaticism for christian teachers to ignore them.

But the precise point demanding further explanation relates to wine. My Scriptural quotations and notes were very brief. They were in response to unscriptural views that had preceded them. But mine quoted from holy Scripture were guarded [illegible] regard to others' weak[illegible] misapprehension, in [illegible]. The apostle gives the [illegible] principle of abstinence [illegible] When wine is allowed, [illegible] for health—often infirmities, and was to be taken by Timothy to impart strength for ministerial labor.—1 Tim. 5: 23. But as it and its use has been generally perverted, the apostolic rule for abstinence applies to me and all in such case. "It is good neither to eat flesh nor to drink wine, . . . whereby thy brother stumbleth, or is offended, or is made weak." Rom. 14. The "good minister of Jesus Christ nourished up in the words of faith," will adhere to apostolic rules, and "refuse profane and old wives' fables," (that ignore them, 1 Tim. 4: 1–7) from whomsoever they come.

J. B. C.

Useful Medical Hints.

If a person swallows any poison whatever, or has fallen into convulsions from having overloaded the stomach, an instantaneous remedy, more efficient and applicable in a large number of cases than any half-dozen medicines we can now think of, is a teaspoonful of common salt and as much ground mustard, stirred rapidly in a teacup of water, warm or cold, and swallowed up instantly. It is scarcely down before it begins to come up, bringing with it the remaining contents of the stomach; and lest there be any remnant of poison, however small, let the white of an egg, or a teacupful of strong coffee, be swallowed as soon as the stomach is quiet; because these very common articles nullify a larger number of virulent poisons than any medicines in the shops. In cases of scalding or burning the body, immersing the part in cold water gives entire relief, as instantaneously as the lightning. Meanwhile, get some common dry flour, and apply it an inch or two thick on the injured part, the moment it emerges from the water, and keep sprinkling on the flour through anything like a pepper-box cover, so as to put it on evenly. Do nothing else; drink nothing but water; eat nothing until improvement commences, except some dry bread softened in very weak tea of some kind. Cures of frightful burnings have been performed in this way, as wonderful as they are painless. We once saved the life of an infant which had been inadvertently drugged with laudanum, and which was fast sinking into the sleep which has no waking, by giving it strong coffee, cleared with the white of an egg, a teaspoonful every five minutes, until it ceased to seem drowsy.—American Medical Journal.

Suicidal Women.

Unwise above many is the man who considers every hour lost which is not spent in reading, writing, or in study; and not more rational is she who thinks every moment of her time lost which does not find her sewing.

We once heard a great man advise that a book of some kind be carried in the pockets to be used in any unoccupied moments. Such was his practice. He died early and fatuitous.

There are women who, after a hard day's work, will sit and sew by candle or gas-light until their eyes are almost blinded, or until certain pains about the shoulders come on, which are almost insupportable, and are only driven to bed by a physical incapacity to work any longer. The sleep of the overworked, like that of those who who do not work at all, is unsatisfying and unrefreshing, and languor, an inevitable result, both dying prematurely.

Let no one work in pain or weariness. When a man is tired he ought to lie down until he is fully rested, when, with renovated strength, the work will be better done, done the sooner, done with a self-sustaining alacrity.

The time taken from seven or eight hours' sleep out of each twenty-four is time not gained, but time more than lost; we can cheat ourselves, we cannot cheat nature. A certain amount of food is necessary to a healthful body, and if less than that amount be furnished, decay commences the same hour. It is the same with sleep, and any one who persists in allowing himself less than nature requires, will only hasten his arrival at the mad house or the grave.—Hall's Journal of Health.

FLOWERS IN WINDOWS.—The window-sill decorated with flowers, wherever it is seen, may be accepted as a proof that in that home some degree of happiness is known—however lowly may be the position of the inmates. There are few surer tests of a happy home within than the flower-decorated window and a neatly kept garden; and there is no occupation for the leisure hours more calculated to keep it so, or to soothe the mind. To those blessed with children, how delightful it is to bend their young minds to a pursuit so full of instruction, combined with the advantages of industry! and in children carefulness about their plants will lead to the same feelings respecting other matters.

THE CRISIS.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION,

Payable in Advance.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.00
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address, 6 months	15.00
Thirty copies to one address, 6 months	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts, which will bring the paper within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brs., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability, when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send as much in addition to their subscriptions as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all [illegible] obligations to do.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts, and 26 cents to any other part of the United States.

CANADA SUBSCRIBERS have to prepay the [illegible]

The World's Crisis.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 222. BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 14, 1859. VOL. X. NO. 15.

The World's Crisis

IS PUBLISHED

EVERY WEDNESDAY MORNING

AT

No. 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:

HENRY V. DAVIS, JOHN COUCH, | MILES GRANT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

MILES GRANT, Editor.

☞ The Crisis is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially, the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and the final destruction of the wicked.

For terms, see fourth page.

Original Contributions.

For the Crisis.

A Prayer Meeting Song.

We have gathered here a little band,
To pray and praise and sing;
And oh, may each wi h contrite heart
His offering hither bring!

Let naught disturb this sacred hour,
Which, Lord, we give to thee,
As now with true and fervent hearts,
We humbly bend the knee.

Like gentle dews from watchful skies,
Let now thy Spirit fall,
As one by one, we gather here,
Upon thy Name to call.

A band of friends and brethren dear;
May each his part fulfill,
And oh, when time shall be no more,
May we be brethren still!

When Christ shall come, and earth shall bloom
In all her glory bright,
O! may we meet in that fair land,
As we have met to-night

E. S. M.

Yarmouth, Me.

For the Crisis.

Twilight Musings.

Peace! yes, it comes. How? who can say? Sometimes like a mighty river, but oftener quietly, gently; but oh! how soothingly! let those and those only answer, whose hearts have been so filled that all else have been pressed out. I have somewhere seen the comparison "like pouring oil upon a mighty raging water"—instantly all is changed to peaceful tranquility. Even so the human heart, filled almost to bursting with those passions which either exalt or degrade, and oftentimes the opposites contending at the same time for the ascendency, producing a greater tumult than the din and crash of war. But let peace take possession, and how soon all is changed.

I oft imagine it an angel, and as my thoughts leave self and commune with her, I see everything in her which is calm, beautiful, and pure. First, I hear the gentle rustling of her approach like the spring breezes nestling among the freshly robed sentinels, whose arms had been bared to grapple with Boreas' fierce rudeness. Soon I feel her presence nearer. Yes! in my own agitated heart, so lovingly entreating to be enthroned as empress there. She gives me assurance of her presence in the most trying hour; of support when others bend or break beneath their weight; and lastly, she shows her credentials from that court where all is sinless purity.

As I hesitate, other angels appear, called Charity and Pity. They too are beautiful; and as they twine their arms in tender sympathy around their sister, they lay pearls in her eyes which sparkle with other than earthly light.

If I receive her, is my heart sufficiently purified to retain her? When discord, envy, hatred, and a host of her enemies knock for entrance, shall I prove a loyal subject? Shall I, in battling with life's storms, be ever ready to bow submissively at her feet?

Now another comes! her I recognise at once—bright-eyed and strong! who has ever been a faithful one from my infancy, never failing to make the cloud of the present but as a brightener of the future.

Away! fear and doubt. So long as thou, Hope, my dearest and best, cheer and buoy me, why need my heart be faint? And as I kneel to receive the chaplet, with which Peace crowns her children, a new life seems given me. Methinks I see my "Father" placing heaven-tuned harps in the hands of other angels, as He sends them earthward to mingle their melody with Peace, Charity, Pity, and Hope.

Heaven-favored and earth-favoring, what joy will be thine when thou art permitted to gather all thy children home; when thou and they meet before Him whose first advent was proclaimed by thee—oh Peace!

M. L.

☞ Idleness is the hot-bed of temptation, the cradle of disease, the master of time, the canker-worm of felicity. To him that has no employment, life in a little while will lose its novelty; and when novelty is laid in the grave, the funeral of comfort will soon follow.

For the Crisis.

"The Kingdom of God."

To a certain class denominated "little flock" is the kingdom of God to be given; and it shall be our object at this time to speak of this "little flock" as the church of the living God, to whom the good time coming (and is near) affords much that is of a consoling character.

They who would defer (if possible) the coming in of this glorious and good time, to them would I address myself: Ye, who are of the class who cry peace and safety; ye, who say "my Lord delayeth his coming;" ye, who for fear of the frowns of your fellow mortals hold your peace on this glorious subject; ye, who, convinced beyond doubt, know the truth of this subject; ye, who, in a word, know your Lord's will and do it not—beware! beware!! beware!!! lest ye be found among them who are denominated "the unrighteous" who "shall not inherit the kingdom of God." There is a large and growing class who hold the truth on this and other subjects in unrighteousness; and to them let not the warning voice of inspiration be treated as of no consequence; for the Judge standeth at the door. Soon, very soon probably you will hear an alarm sounded in "my holy mountain" that will shake your rotten bones so you will feel, if you never did before, that "it is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God." Let not the world with all its enticements keep you where you are, for the signal events now transpiring, are indicative of joy to the believer who is washed and sanctified, being justified in the name of the Lord Jesus and by the Spirit of our God. But these events are indicative of darkness and death to those who fear not God nor obey the gospel of our Lord; these are to be punished with a punishment ending in their destruction.

Little flock, fear not, for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom. Think of it, pray that it may come, and that right speedily; for in whatever light we may view the "distress of nations, with perplexity," we can but see that the hand of Him who controls the destinies of the "kings of the earth and their armies" is made manifest,—"the Judge of all the earth will do right," and "he maketh the wrath of man to praise him." "My word shall judge you in the last day," and to the law and to the testimony alone are we directed if we desire to know whereof we affirm in these matters.

God, that cannot lie, has promised a kingdom. The promise of a kingdom implies a king. Who is to be the king? The Spirit said through David, "Yet have I set my King upon my holy hill of Zion" and "thou art my Son." Who is the Son? "The Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David." This throne was occupied by "divine right" for forty years in Mount Zion and Hebron, by David, the lord of Jesus; this throne is to become "the throne of my holiness;" on it Jesus Messiah is to reign, this reign will be one during which justice and judgment shall obtain; and the king's dominion is to be "under the whole heavens;" its duration will be for a thousand years and beyond. You who have little or no regard for these important and momentous truths, look ye well to your chart, see to it that your mind is stayed on God, and your confidence in the "word of truth" unshaken, for by the belief of the truth and obedience thereto are we to be saved.

The kingdom of God is not some undefined and speculative matter about which we may talk of possibilities and probabilities, as to who shall succeed King Jesus; no, we are not to live when this takes place and talk of who shall administer the affairs of state when he passes away. Jesus has been raised by the power of an endless life; his kingdom shall endure throughout all ages! Now, the petty tyrants of earth are ever on the quake lest a stronger than they shall take from them their name and fame. Ah! how transitory is all that is. Should we not desire a king to reign in righteousness, and he with his saints to execute judgment through all the earth? Even so, saith the "saved of the Lord," "let thy kingdom come."

Some, and not a few, may say, "Oh, yes, all this is very true; but, are we not led to believe that the kingdom of God was established on the day of Pentecost?" Others will say, "Oh, yes, this may be very true; but I believe that the kingdom of God was established when Jesus was upon earth; for do not the Scriptures plainly say 'the kingdom of God is within you?'" Yes, truly it says so; but will the same parties admit for one moment (unless they be mystics who pervert the truth into apparent folly), that this passage is to be isolated and set in opposition to the many plain declarations, such as Paul's charge to Timothy (chap. 4:1). There Paul states in plain language that when Jesus comes "the second time unto salvation" he is to "judge the quick and dead at his appearing and kingdom."

Again, Jesus has gone into a far country to receive for himself and associates a kingdom, and to return; at which return he then fulfills the prediction of the Spirit by Isaiah and all the holy prophets since the world began. In relation to the text—"the kingdom of God is within you," much might be said. The margin of our Bible says, "among you," and I have good authority for stating that the rendering should be "the King is among you;" this the people did not know or they would not have crucified him who is both Lord and Christ. The blindness in part which happened to Israel still remains, and it remains yet to be an accomplished fact, that, while they by cruel hands put to an ignominious death God's well beloved Son, he is coming to be admired of his saints and destroy those who corrupt the earth. These are not cunningly devised fables, they are the voice of God speaking in prophecy. For this kingdom, prophets lived and died; they were sawn asunder, and were put to horrible deaths by every means the corrupters of earth could invent; and they suffered all that they might obtain "a better resurrection," even unto eternal life. Apostles suffered martyrdom for the same end, and the Son of God suffered the agonizing death of the cross that he might obtain the joy set before him in the promises of the eternal Spirit. He as our sample is a worthy one, and though we may not suffer the rack, the cross, the boiling cauldron, or banishment to far off and desolate islands; yet there are many things to prove our sincerity to the despised Nazarene and his doctrines.

Who that is at all conversant with the religious mind, as it is manifested in those whose faith takes not hold of these glorious truths, can for a moment allow that there is not persecution for those who avow them? It is too apparent to need comment. As it was in the days of Jesus and his disciples, so is it now; and though you may not suffer in like manner as they did; yet when they shall turn you out of their synagogues, and shall speak all manner of evil (falsely, let it be) for Christ's sake, rejoice, for your reward in the heavens is great; for in like manner persecuted they the prophets. Well, there is a time coming when these things will get their reward; the God of justice will not allow his elect to go unrewarded nor the wicked unpunished. Faith, abiding faith, is expected of us. We are called as saints to inherit glory, and honor, and incorruptibility. We have before us in the Scriptures of truth, incentives quite sufficient for its exercise: yet how prone is the unenlightened man of the flesh to try his best to give these things but a passing glance, and think that all sufficient. We have not so learned Christ and his gospel. The good news of inheriting a kingdom is made plain to our minds; it is not left to blind reason, but commends itself to our enlightened understanding for the obedience of the faith.

How little is ever said in these days of fables, about the kingdom to be under the whole heaven; on the other hand how very great deal there is said about a kingdom above the heavens; well, as the Scriptures do not warrant the belief of such a doctrine of the kingdom into which those who teach such things usher at death the immortal (supposed to be) ghosts of departed brethren and friends, we have no call for the exercise of faith in such things. Faith comes by hearing, and hearing by the word of God; then blame us not, ye who hope such things, for be assured, they are on your part but the creation of fancy, unfounded, and without existence. We speak that we know, and await the decision of "that day" when truth will triumph, and error, wounded, writhe in "pain, and die amid its worshipers." For this day let all unite to pray; for God desires we should; and the kingdom will come, and God's will be done on earth as it is now done in heaven.

G. W. Y.

New York.

Rev. Robert Hall.—It is said that Rev. Robert Hall, in the earlier part of his ministry, was easily irritated; but if he lost his temper he was deeply humbled, and would often acknowledge himself to blame. On one of these occasions, when a discussion had become warm, he suddenly closed the debate, quitted his seat, and retiring to a remote part of the room, was overheard, by a lady who was just entering, to ejaculate, with deep feeling, "Lamb of God, Lamb of God, calm my perturbed spirit!"—Ex.

☞ No action, no service goes current in heaven, but that which is sealed up with integrity of heart. God will not be put off with the shell when we give the devil the kernel.

☞ It is better sometimes to give up one's right, than to contend with a quarrelsome or covetous man.

"The Union Movement:"

A MEETING OF THE LAY-MEMBERS OF THE VARIOUS CHURCHES OF THE TOWN OF UNITY ON DEC. 3, 1858.

CHAPTER IX.

The following is a report of an interview between brethren, Baptist, Methodist, Presbyterian, Episcopalian, and Lutheran.—Brother Christian was not present.

Meth. Brethren, I have perfectly satisfied myself, several months ago, that we can never unite upon any of our old platforms, and that if we could, it would amount to nothing. I dislike the idea of changing. It may be pride, or some other weakness of human nature, but I cannot avoid it. I can but feel an aversion to changing. I am aware of the old adage: "Wise men sometimes change, but fools never." Still I can not induce myself to love the idea of changing. Therefore, I desire, now that I am about to make an important change, to make thorough work of it, so that I can never be called upon, in reason, to make another change.

Pres. Brother M., you have spoken my mind precisely. It is disagreeable enough to me to think of changing once; but the thought has continually forced itself upon me, that if I yield to one change, the same, or a similar reason might soon be urged for another, and it would be said of me that I was carried about by every wind of doctrine.

Bap. The matters you refer to, constitute my main reason for taking the step I now have in contemplation. In a private conversation I had with brother C., I asked him if he was not willing to make some compromise for the sake of union. In reply, he asked me how he could, seeing that he had no doctrine but the Scriptures—the doctrine of Christ itself. He said his aim was to preach precisely what the apostles preached—no more and no less. He said he could not add anything to it or take anything from it. He then asked me what compromise he could make—how he could believe anything more or anything less, or change anything that he did believe. I confess that I could not tell how he could change. This puzzled me, for I had supposed that, of course, he would have to make a great change to become orthodox, and now I could not tell him wherein he could change, without doing what was manifestly wrong.

Lu. That was the first thing that perplexed me. I had supposed that brother C. was bigoted and exclusive, in admitting no one right but himself, and that he was under at least as many obligations to change as the rest of us. But when he asked me what change he should make, I confess I did not know what to say. When I thought of the name, "Christian," or "Disciple of Christ," by which he is called, I could not conscientiously ask him to give it up for any of our party names. When I considered the baptism which he practices, I found that we and all our books admit it valid, and I could not seriously ask him to abandon it and practice our disputed and doubtful form of baptism. The Bible which he takes for his only creed, I had to confess, was better than any of our creeds, and I could not have the face to ask him to accept any other in the place of it.

Ep. I can not still see how you expect to avoid changes hereafter. Luther was a reformer, but others have found, or thought they found, it necessary to reform beyond his reformation. The same is true of Wesley. Many have thought it needful to go beyond him. Why may not some one advance again and start another reformation in advance of us?

Meth. This can not be done. We are now to go back to the original ground—the pure apostolic foundation, and take our stand upon it, and it alone, under Christ the true Head of the Church. We will recognize no authority but His, and no system but the one he has given. We will receive him in all his fullness, receive all he has enjoined upon us, and endeavor to do all he commands. If we prove true to this, there will be no getting in advance of us. If we are not true to our profession, we deserve that better men should go in advance of us. It appears to me now, just as easy to take our stand upon ground that can not be assailed successfully, as upon some objectionable position, where we shall everlastingly be annoyed. Let us then, while we are attempting to unite, walk up and take our stand upon the highest, holiest and most consecrated platform known to man. Let us ascend beyond the reach of sectarianism; beyond all the doctrines and commandments of man, and take our stand upon the rock of God, upon the loftiest summit to which mortals in the flesh can attain, and then be true to our elevated position, and if we do not find our way to heaven, none from this world will ever reach that blessed abode.

Bap. Brethren, in the place of our being required to change again, I see now that we never can change, unless we apostatize. When we advance as far as possible, we can make no change, unless we turn back to the flesh-pots of sectarianism. When we rise to the highest pinnacle, if we make any change in our position, we must descend. None can get above the highest. If we unite as now contemplated, our Leader, the King of kings and Lord of lords, is the highest and most exalted of all leaders. His authority is above all authority. His doctrine is transcendently above all doctrine. His love is superior to all love. His mighty name is above every name. To be able to claim him as ours and to be his forever, is the highest and grandest of all hope and all anticipation.

Meth. I once thought that immersion would be a barrier in my way, but I now see that it will not. We have all admitted immersion to be valid baptism all the time, and the same admission is made in all our books. We who have practiced sprinkling, have witnessed the trouble in persuading even our own members to believe in it. Indeed, many of them we never could satisfy, and they are constantly leaving and going to the Baptists for no other reason, only that they never could believe in sprinkling. Beside, I have always had some doubts in my own mind about it.

Pres. Brother M., you have spoken my experience almost as well as I can do it myself. I saw the members of all denominations who sprinkle, going to immersionists and being immersed, but none coming from immersionists to us to be sprinkled. I could not see the reason of this. Beside, I have had abundance of trouble that but few know anything about, in my pastoral visits, to pacify the consciences of private members. Not only so, but I found that if sprinkling is to be kept up, I must constantly be kept debating it both in the pulpit and the private circle. I found too, that much of my debating did no good, all of which was discouraging to me. I concluded that I would look back through the history of sprinkling, and as far back as I could find any account of it, I found that it had always been in dispute, and that I could not hope for anything better in the future, if the practice is continued. I, therefore, have concluded, that there is no reason for continuing a practice that has always been in doubt, involving all in doubts and uncertainty, when I could practice that about which there is no doubt and uncertainty, and thus satisfy the consciences of all who submit to it.

Ep. What shall we say of all our old brethren? Are we to consider them all unbaptized? This looks a little uncharitable.

Bap. They are just as safe as they were before. Your doing what you can see clearly to be your duty, makes their condition no worse. You are only placed in a situation where you can see them more clearly. But, if we who preach do our duty, it will not be long till we shall see the private members doing right. Thousands of them will feel greatly relieved to know that you no longer contend for sprinkling, for they have always been in doubts about it.

Now, brethren, I believe it is the will of God that we should be united, and it is the will of the private members of our respective congregations. I think, also, it is our own will. Shall this great work be brought about?

Meth. It is my intention most solemnly to go into it.

Pres. I think there can be no dispute but we have found what the private members of our churches demanded: "The Scriptural basis of Christian Union;" but I do not know how they will like to take the steps necessary to enter upon this basis. I am determined upon doing my own duty, and leaving the event with God.

Ep. I feel very much in the spirit of union, and am well satisfied with the whole premises, as far as I can see, but I should like to hold one more meeting with Mr. C. present, and hear how he will dispose of certain matters.

Bap. I am perfectly willing to have one more meeting with Mr. C. present. But, still that is of no importance. We are not to unite upon his views, his doctrine or his opinion, but upon the Bible—and I know that is right whether we ever meet with brother C. or not.

Meth. That is my understanding of it. We unite upon the Bible, under Christ, and pledge ourselves, that to the utmost of our ability, we will serve the Lord the remainder of our life.

Adjourned to this night one week.

☞ Experience is the most eloquent of preachers, but she never has a large congregation.

☞ Christians, the highway to comfort is to mind comfort less and duty more.

The True State of Protestantism.

(Concluded.)

We have spoken at full length, in former numbers, of the peculiar nature of modern Infidelity; we have called it by a new name—Anthropotheism. Anthropotheism is the Infidelity of the present day. It is the finished and ripened fruit of ordinary man-worship. Man-worship is the setting up of the spirit of man as a divine thing. It is, in its elements, a very ancient heresy. First came simple idolatry, which means the worshiping of great men after their death, when their souls were supposed to be numbered with the gods. This was the simplest form of Infidelity; for it selected only a few men out of millions; and it waited for their death, when their faults and weaknesses were no longer visible. But modern Christendom despised such timid Atheism, such half-measures of insanity. It was reserved for Christendom—named after Christ—to carry impiety to its utmost bounds, to work out a system of finished blasphemy. It was no longer a great man alone that was a god, nor a good man, but every man. Cicero, indeed, represents Scipio as telling his adopted grandson, that his spirit was a god, in fact that men were gods. But it was by Christian philosophers that this blasphemy was carried to its height; and Germany has taken the lead, as it has done in every other absurdity—and, worst of all, Protestant Germany. The fashionable doctrine is, now, the Divinity of Man; every man is a god,—a god, not by union with the God-man, Christ Jesus, which is the only resemblance between God and man—but a god intrinsically of himself, denying with scorn all dependent deity. "Jesus Christ," says Emerson, "has a right to be admired as a good man, but he has no right to dictate to me, or command me." Such is "man-worship." All men are equally gods; the King of Glory himself is nothing more than a "good man," who ought to be imitated, but who must not presume to command! This horrible impiety, this vulgar impudence, this setting every paltry scribbler on a level with the Son of God, would be of little consequence, were it confined to a few men like Emerson; but it is almost universal. Protestant Germany is full of it; and it is secretly undermining all Protestant England. It is spreading in our Universities, and infecting our clergy; and what is more particularly remarkable is this,—it is more to be found among Protestants than Romanists; so that Protestantism is as ready for Antichrist as Popery, and will assuredly fall under the same condemnation.

The finished and ripened fruit of this "Man-worship" is Anthropotheism. The writer has invented this name as expressing more than "Man-worship." It is not making gods of a few men, like ancient idolatry, nor making every man a god, like modern infidelity, but it is admitting that every man is a god; and then choosing out one leading man, as god paramount, and worshiping him as the representative of the human mind; turning the whole earth into an Olympus, and making one great man the Jupiter. The ancient Greeks were satisfied with their own Olympus, and with a few ideal gods, elevated above men by distance and invisibility. But modern Christendom, more daring than Heathenism, is rushing on into indiscriminate Polytheism; it is setting up the vilest of idolatries, taking every man as he is, with all his vices, sensualities, and littleness: with his feeble body, his grovelling mind, his coarseness and his rags, and elevating him into a god, when, perhaps, he has scarcely the form of a man! The lowest savages have not been guilty of such gross Idolatry, as the philosophers of Christendom. Even the savage idealizes his gods, and removes them from the eye before he canonizes them. He hides their deformities under the veil of distance. But the philosophers of Christendom have taken the raw material itself, and converted it into an idol. They take man as he is, raw and coarse from the world; they take him in the mass, without the alteration of a feature, and tell him he is a god; they tell him to worship himself, and to bow before his own intrinsic deity. After 1,800 years of Christianity, the world has reached a point of degradation lower than the lowest abyss of ancient heathenism. Every man is taught to be an idolator, and the god whom he is to worship is himself.

It is to avenge such impieties as these, that the True God will raise up, by and bye, the Last Delusion. "And for this cause God shall send them strong delusions, that they should believe a lie. That they all might be damned who believed not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness." (2 Thess. ch. 2.) We have chosen our god, and we shall have him to our hearts' content. Since man worships himself, he shall see his own image [illegible] and magnified in the [illegible] of the Man of Sin, that he may fall down before it, and perish in the act. All that is now wanting is the Man. For some years past, a phrase has been adopted, which discloses, unconsciously, the exact moral condition of Christendom. The phrase is, "The Coming Man!" What "Coming Man?" The man who is to set everything right, and to make everybody happy; in fact, the man who is to do what God has left undone! God has, long ago, promised to send his own Son, with all the glories of eternity, to renew the earth, and to restore creation. Christendom has despised this promise; and Christian ministers themselves have scorned and suppressed it. Scarce a congregation or a minister can be found to endure even the mention of the greatest of all imaginable blessings. In this state of corruption, this rejection of Christ by Christianity itself, the "Coming Man" will find the world. Bound hand and foot with the chain of its own sins; refusing the Liberator from heaven, and accepting the Liberator from hell. There is something worthy of the deepest reflection in this expectation of the "Coming Man." It shows us that with all its boasting, the world is dissatisfied with its own progress. It shows that the world is conscious of some innate weakness, some undefinable want, for which all its vain philosophy is unable to provide. It shows, above all, the world's enmity to God. It looks for a "Coming Man," but it abhors a "Coming God." It therefore shall have both. First it shall make trial of its own delusions, and endure under the "Coming Man" a time of trouble, such as never was since there was a nation, even to that same time! And then it shall be prepared at last to receive the "Coming God."

The character and the operations of the "Coming Man" are now to be more immediately considered. He is described by St. Paul, under the less flattering title of the Man of Sin. The Man whom we expect in place of the Son of God, is called in Scripture by the more appropriate name of "the Son of Perdition." "His coming (we are told) is after the working of Satan, with all power, and signs, and lying wonders, and with all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish; because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved." The "Coming Man," cries the world. The "Man of Sin," replies Scripture. The "Son of God," says the Scripture. "Give us the 'Son of Perdition,'" says the world. "Coming to make us happy," cries the world. "Coming with strong delusion, that all may be damned," replies the Word of God. And truth and falsehood echo back each other's words on the dreadful confines of the Last Catastrophe. The Coming Man will not profess to be a god, in the strict sense of the word; nor is it to be supposed for an instant, that in the present state of knowledge, the world will ever fall back into the idolatry of ancient times. The enemy adapts his machine to the temper of the age. He finds Christendom, at present, destitute of all Christianity; as far from God, as Sodom and Gomorrah—and only one degree more moral. He finds Christendom worshiping the human intellect as an independent deity; yet, at the same time, too knowing to mistake a man upon earth for a celestial being. The distinctive line is now clearly drawn between earth and heaven. Heaven has its own Deity, whose office and duty it is to send us rain and sunshine, and seed-time and harvest. But earth has also gods of its own, quite distinct from those of heaven; a thousand million gods altogether, for every man is a god. Their office and duty is to take care of themselves, and to confer what they call the "greatest happiness upon the greatest number;" to promote moral progress, to advance civilization, to spare one another at home, even the vilest murderers, and to kill unwarlike nations by the thousand, for the slightest provocation; in short, to make the world their hope, their home, their all-in-all. Satan, who must smile at these impotent godlings, is ready to take advantage of their wretched delusion. "These godlings," he says, "fancy themselves gods: they worship their own intellect and make the earth their heaven. Well, I will give them a leader; a man of the strongest intellect, the firmest will, the most iron determination, and the clearest foresight. Such a man will be the incarnation of Humanity. He will concentrate in one man, all the leading features of mankind. He will sum up in himself all the attributes of his race; and will become the central point and representative of the whole species. He shall give them all they want—conquest and glory, peace and prosperity, [illegible] [illegible] of art, [illegible] shall look to [illegible] to bring on that [illegible] which is their only [illegible] do," cries Satan, [illegible] man, my slave, I [illegible] [illegible] world." And the Devil is right; for [illegible] upon the master passions of the s[illegible] and, finding men too advanced to worship him directly, he leads them on to Devil-[illegible]—

In carrying out this process, some art is required. As Christian men worship themselves, and as every man is a god, it would not be plausible to establish Anthropotheism at once; for one man has as much right to be worshiped as another. And, again, as Christendom still pretends to some regard for the True God, merely for the sake of decency, it would be difficult to get rid of Christianity altogether. One difficulty arises from the existence of a nominal Christianity. To overcome these two difficulties, it is necessary, first, to admit the existence of a Divine Being in heaven, and even of a Redeemer; but to neutralize this idea altogether, by confining their operations solely to things above, and detaching the affairs of earth altogether from those of heaven. "The heavens for God and the earth for men," is now the universal maxim of Christendom. Having thus got rid of one difficulty, it will not be hard to eliminate the other. It is true that every man is a god, but then, there are many! They must have a head; they must have some chief god to look up to—some centre of action. The little godlings must have one full-grown god. It is impossible for every man to look up to every other man, some of whom he has never seen, and some of whom are ten thousand miles off. Give us one fixed visible centre; some bright elevated point. There we will place ONE MAN, where all can see him; and he shall be the representative of the whole race. Let him have ability to direct mankind, to advance their happiness; to increase their enjoyments; and the grovelling sensualists of the age will ask no more. That one man shall be their GOD; he shall stand as the representative of all mankind, and they shall concentrate upon him the adoration which had, until then, been divided amongst millions. This will constitute the Last Apostasy—that worship of Antichrist foretold in Scripture—the idolatry of the spirit of man, compressed into the worship of a single individual. This we have called ANTHROPOTHEISM; it is man-worship in its most concentrated form, passing from the whole species to a single person, and held in conjunction with the acknowledgment of a Deity in heaven. It will proceed upon the principle of "heaven for heavenly beings, and the earth for earthly beings." "Heaven for God" ranged when the wo[illegible] plunging in mud, and earth for man."

"To this new idolatry, Christendom is fast approaching. It is nothing more than the "mystery of iniquity," spoken of by St. Paul, brought to its climax, and adapted to the requirements of the age. St. Paul tells us that the mystery of iniquity was already at work, even in his own day. It was in fact nothing more than the inborn propensity of nature working its way to the surface through all impediments. The propensity of human nature is to fly from the True God, because he is too remote to be seen, and too holy to be endured. But as man is far too weak to stand alone, he must have some deity to depend on. He therefore began by deifying dead men. Christianity overthrew this Pagan idolatry, and once more established the worship of the True God. Then, after a while, the old propensity crept in. God being a man, was something gained by Christianity. God became a man for the very purpose of meeting idolatry on its own ground, and that since men must have a MAN to worship, they might have a Divine Man. But still, the God-man was invisible and remote; he was too holy to be endured, and too great to be familiarized. The old propensity began again to struggle to the surface; the longing to escape from the holiness of God to something not much holier than ourselves. This propensity worked up slowly, and gradually until it had penetrated Christianity itself. It brought in the saints and the Virgin Mary, as co-partners with God; it then assumed the form of Romanism. But, after a time, the world became too enlightened for Romanism; and what was Satan to do? What were men to do? Christianity was too pure, and Romanism was too gross. Here was a difficulty. Were poor, unoffending Protestants to be robbed of their comforts—to live without their idols, and to be left with nothing but Christianity? Were Papists to keep all the blessing of idolatry to themselves? "No," said the Protestant philosophers, "we will find you as proper a set of gods as ever were seen. Human nature is divine: every man is a god; worship yourselves." And now there is little else to be found throughout the world but man-worship—the idolatry of Popish saints, on the one hand, and the idolatry of the human mind, on the other. These two impure streams will meet by and bye, assume the form of Antichristianism, when united, and flow down together into the bottomless pit.

Let us say no more of Popish idolatry. We have an idolatry invented by Protestants, promoted by Protestants, disseminated by Protestants, and more degraded than [illegible] Only give Protestantism [illegible] time, and it will outstrip [illegible] Rome [illegible] iniquity [illegible] Christian [illegible] golden age [illegible]

For the Crisis.

Disappointments.

Disappointments in this world are common to all. No man, however clear his conception, however strong his apprehension, however shrewd in calculation, however upright in his course, or far-sighted he may be, or devoted to his Creator, but what meets with more or less disappointments in this life. This needs no confirmation. The saints, however, have much the advantage of the wicked man. They have divine care and aid, and in addition a precious promise, "all things work together for good to them that love God."

I did not take this heading to give a general view of the subject, but merely to refer to some things that are immediately connected with the cause of truth West.

There has been a general expectation in different parts of the country that Illinois, with its rich soil, would yield an abundant crop this year. Newspapers have done not a little to foster this hope, but old time—the truth-teller—brings along its stubborn facts, and made many sad hearts—blasting hope in all directions. In the counties I have traveled through since my return from the East—and they are not a few—there is but little wheat raised. Some counties will average from five to eight bushels per acre. This is the best, as far south as Jersey county. The rest—say, seven-eighths of the whole—will not probably exceed four bushels per acre on an average, that was harvested, and hundreds of acres were not considered worth harvesting, and were not cut. Corn is quite good in some localities, yet the drought and early frost has seriously injured a great portion.

I am not West to keep my friends posted on staple articles of the present life. Yet as these things are very intimately connected with other matters of more importance, and will cause many disappointments in another direction—frustrates many plans—I feel at liberty to pen these facts.

Brethren West were very greatly cheered to see Bro. Hastings introduce a plan to scatter tracts through our western fields, and every eye was watching, and every heart uplifted to God for success. As one after another engaged in the good work, they often expressed their gratitude that eastern friends took so much interest in this grand enterprise, and longed for the earth to bring in her bounty that they might throw in their mite and assist in pushing the battle forward. Ah! they are disap[illegible] the day of [illegible] ment." "Hear Him!" [illegible] pointed. They have not the wherewith. I notice, however, as I pass around, the first thing that is read is the "TRACT COLUMN." I pray the Lord to push this glorious work forward. Brethren, unite in this prayer. Pray more earnestly, and in faith for this object. Prayer is lacking in the church.

Another disappointment in consequence of crops being cut short. When I was chosen by conference last spring to correspond with brethren, and try and bring more laborers into the field West, we anticipated a harvest that would give a surplus. Hence, if we could find any one that was willing to come to our aid, we could send him the needful and bring him on at once. With this view, I made quite an effort when East, to persuade some brethren to come West. Although we shall suffer a great disappointment and perhaps some of my brethren East, yet we cannot ask them to go to war on their own charges—especially to come so far.

On my return West, I found a number of letters calling for help, telling frankly their condition and wants. I might transcribe them, but it will occupy too much space in your paper, hence, I will only say, while they desired help and knew not how to get along without it, they could not raise money to aid. What they had they would freely give.

Now what shall be done? We do not wish our brethren East to raise funds to bring ministers West, when they are doing so much for us in the Tract department, even if they were able. It would be taxing them too heavily. Besides there are other calls as well as West, that are to be heeded. Neither do we want our brethren that are willing to come West to bear their own expenses—especially if they have families. This is asking too much—for they are poor. There is one thing we can do. We can pray to God, who knows all things, to help—yes, raise up men among us, if we are not able to bring them from other parts. And if you have men among you that have gifts and feel called to this work, aid them not by your prayers only, (that is good) but feed their families that they may have time to stand and show themselves workmen, that need not be ashamed. Now you keep praying and laboring on, and I will look round for the men. I have found two since I came back, and one has put on the armor and taken the field.

The little girl, you recollect, took her umbrella to church a very pleasant morning, because the church was to pray for rain that day. Thus I shall expect to find men raised up in the West to heed the many calls, if we cannot raise funds to bring them from other parts. Keep praying, brethren—believe God, help will come.

WALTER PRATT.

☞ Use the best language in your common conversation at home, and you will soon acquire a habit of using it on all occasions.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, DECEMBER 14, 1859.

Seneca Falls.

We commenced our meetings at Seneca Falls, Nov. 23d, and closed Dec. 4th. Since our visit to this place last summer, several have been added to the church looking for the speedy coming of Christ in the clouds of heaven. Brn. Ingmire and Newman, who reside in the place, with an occasional visit from passing evangelists, have supplied them with preaching at "Advent Hall." After a few evenings we changed our meetings to Union Hall, that we might have room for all. We have had large and attentive audiences, which have become deeply interested in the great truths of the Bible. Brn. came in from Geneva, So. Butler, Waterloo and Auburn, to enjoy the meetings with us.

This is a hard soil to cultivate, but the word of the Lord has taken root in many minds, and fruit begins to appear. Ministers and some church members did what they could to keep the people away, but we found many noble hearts, with independence and honor sufficient to hear, before they condemned. Others, like the Pharisees of old, would not come in themselves, and those that would hear, they kept away. We are sorry to be obliged to say, that, in almost every place, where we are called to preach the gospel, we find the popular ministry the most bitter opposers of the truth and work of God. As Mr. Beecher says, they have turned from the truth to fables; and no effort is spared to sustain them. The saying is true now as ever, "Like priest, like people." All seemed afraid to do any thing unpopular. As they are seeking the praise of men, they can look for no reward in the coming kingdom.

We were comforted here in finding some noble souls, who were willing to sacrifice their reputation for the truth's sake, and confess their faith, regardless of the speech of people, and the frowns of a worldly minded church. One such is worth hundreds of those who are not willing to move till they know which way the popular vane points. Now is the time for true christians to show themselves live men, and let the Lord take care of their [illegible] reputation.

Several [illegible] members of churches have been quickened by attending the meetings, and have embraced the great truths of the Bible, that have been so long covered up by human creeds, and are now rejoicing in the light, wondering why they did not see it before. Some of the unconverted have risen for prayers, and several others are seeking the Lord. We hope to hear good tidings from this place.

Lord's day, Dec. 4th, we had an excellent love feast in the morning, which was very cheering to the Zion bound pilgrims. One who had considerable experience, said it was the best meeting he had ever enjoyed. At the close of the afternoon meeting, Bro. Thomas G. Newman was ordained for the work of the ministry, by Bro. Sweet and the writer. We are rejoiced to see intelligent young men willing to sacrifice their good names for truth's sake, willing to wait for their reward till Jesus comes. Let the churches pray the Lord of the vineyard to send out more laborers.

In the evening we had a heavenly season around the table of the Lord. A deep interest is awakened in the community to know what the Bible teaches. The church here has planted its banner upon the Rock of Ages, and the immutable word of the Lord, and are resolved to put on "the whole armor of God," and fight the good fight of faith, and gain a crown of glory at last.

Queries.

BRO. GRANT:—Will you please to reconcile 2 Pet. 2: 4 and Jas. 3: 6 with your views of hell? Were those angels cast down to the grave? Is the tongue set on fire of the grave?" O. D. GIBSON.

In answer to the first inquiry, we say, we will thus endeavor. To the second and third, we answer in the negative. Now for the harmony. In our articles on sheol and hades we remarked that these words represented the grave or state of the dead, and are not used to represent a place where wicked men suffer torment between death and the resurrection. This condition is clearly defined in Eccl. 9: 10, where it is said, "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might; for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom in (sheol or hades) the grave, whither thou goest."

The word rendered hell in Jas. 3: 6, is not hades, but gehenna, which occurs twelve times in the N. T. This word refers to the valley of Hinnom, a loathsome place, where the Jews burnt up their filth. The destruction of the wicked in the great burning day, is illustrated by the consumption of corrupt matter in this gehenna fire.

James says, "The tongue is a fire, a world of iniquity; so is the tongue among our members, that it defileth the whole body, and setteth on fire the course of nature; and it is set on fire of (gehenna) hell." As the tongue is used for filthy purposes, defiling the man, and is often employed to utter scorching or fire-like words, the apostle compares such a tongue to gehenna, noted for its fire and filth. He uses the word in this passage to illustrate the character of some men's tongues.

The word rendered hell in 2 Pet. 2: 4 is neither hades nor gehenna, but tartarosus, from tartaros, which occurs nowhere else in the New Testament; and hence is applicable to none but "the angels that sinned." The whole verse reads:—"For if God spared not the angels that sinned, but cast them down to (tartarus) hell, and delivered them into chains of darkness, to be reserved unto judgment," etc.

We understand, that "the angels that sinned," "evil angels," "unclean spirits," and "demons," are synonymous terms. It is certain that these beings frequently encountered the Savior during his ministry upon this planet; consequently, tartarus must be in connection with the surface of the earth, where they met and conversed with the Savior. The following extracts from able writers, were collected by Bro. Hastings, and published in the Crisis some time since:—

Dr. Wm. Ramsey, an able and learned writer, says, in his work on Spiritualism. "The word Tartarus means, according to Greek writers, in a physical sense, the bounds or verge of this material system." He quotes this remark from Lucian, an ancient writer of about the age in which Peter lived. Dr. R. remarks,—"that place is, probably, at present, within the atmosphere of our earth." The learned Ralph Cudworth, D. D., in his "Intellectual System" Vol. III, p. 363. while speaking of Peter's remark, says: "And by Tartarus here, in all probability, is meant this lower caliginous (i. e., dark) air, or atmosphere of the earth according to that of St. Austin concerning these angels, "That after their sin, they were thrust down into the misty darkness of this lower air." (De Gen. ad Lit. lib. 3, cap. 10.) And being thus for the present imprisoned in this lower Tartarus, or caliginous (dark) air or atmosphere, they are indeed here kept and reserved in custody, unto the judgment of the great day and general assizes." Dr. Gill remarks concerning the angels, "They were hurled out of heaven, from whence they fell as lightning into the lowest or inferior places, as the Syriac version renders it; either into the air, as in Eph. 21: 2, or into the earth, as in Rev. 12: 9." "But on other occasions the Greek writers speak of Tartarus as in the air, and at the extremity of the earth, beyond the region of Mauritania. Hence the epithet—'Tartaron eeroenta'—AIRY TARTARUS.'"

PHAVORINUS says Tartarus is "aeer hupogaios kai aneelios"—the sub[illegible]terrestrial air where the sun [illegible] comes not."

SUIDAS, another ancient writer, says it signifies "ton peri ta nephe topon"—"the place in the clouds" or "in the air."

DR. PARKHURST, the lexicographer, says, "it appears from a passage in Lucian, that by Tartarus was meant, in a physical sense, the bounds or verge of this material creation."

LUCIAN, while addressing himself to Cupid, says, "Thou formest the universe from its confused and chaotic state, and after separating and dispersing the circumfused chaos, in which, as in one common sepulchre, the whole world lay buried, thou drovest it to the confines or recesses of OUTER TARTARUS."

PARKHURST continues—"On the whole, Tartaroun in St. Peter is the same as to throw into Tartarus in Homer; only rectifying the poet's mistake of Tartarus being in the bowels of the earth, and recurring to the original sense of the word as above explained, which, when applied to spirits, must be interpreted spiritually, and thus Tartarosus will import that God cast the apostate angels out of his presence into the blackness of darkness, where they will be forever banished from the light of his countenance . . . as truly as a person plunged into the torpid boundary of this created system would be from the light of the sun, and the benign operations of the material heavens."

DR. A. CLARKE quotes the above with approval.

DR. MACKNIGHT says that on some occasions "Greek writers speak of Tartarus as in the air, and at the extremity of the earth, beyond the region of Mauritania."

"The argument is briefly as follows:
Evil angels are cast to Tartarus.
But evil angels are in our atmosphere.
Therefore Tartarus is in our atmosphere."

Stirring Times.

The anti-slavery excitement continues to increase; and already, the North and the South are nearly up to fighting pitch. Both sides are getting mad, and there are two chances for war, where there is one for peace, as the following statements will show. Last week we gave some extracts from an able work against slavery, published in North Carolina, which is being extensively circulated through the Union. We copy the following in addition to what we then selected, which is a part of the address to slave-holders:—

"And now, sirs, we have thus laid down our ultimatum. What are you going to do about it? Something dreadful, of course. Perhaps you will dissolve the Union again. Do it, if you dare. Our motto, and we would have you to understand it, is the abolition of slavery, and the perpetuation of the American Union. If by any means you do succeed in your treasonable attempts to take the South out of the Union to-day, we would bring her back to-morrow—if she goes away with you, she will return without you. Do not mistake the meaning of the last clause of the last sentence. . . . .

Thus, terror engenderers of the South, have we fully and frankly defined our position. We have no modifications to propose, no compromises to offer, nothing to retract. Frown, sirs, fret, foam, prepare your weapons, threat, strike, shoot, stab, bring on civil war, dissolve the Union—nay, annihilate the solar system if you will; do all this, more, less, better, worse, anything—do what you will, sirs, you can neither foil nor intimidate us. Our purpose is as firmly fixed as the eternal pillars of Heaven. We have determined to abolish slavery, and, so help us God, abolish it we will. Take this to bed with you to-night, sirs, and think about it, dream over it, and let us know how you feel to-morrow morning."

The citizens of Natick, Mass., held a mass meeting, Nov. 20th, "without regard to political or religious creeds." This is the residence of Senator Wilson, who was present at the meeting. The following resolution was unanimously adopted:—

"Whereas, resistance to tyrants is obedience to God, therefore,

Resolved, That it is the right and duty of the slaves to resist their masters, and the right and duty of the people of the North to incite them to resistance, and to aid them in it."

It was requested that the resolution be forwarded to John Brown. Accordingly, it was sent to Gov. Wise with instructions to give it to the prisoner, with an accompanying address, from which we make the following extracts:—

"From this day, let the friends of the slave march forth to battle with slavery, whether the conflict be on the social, political, religious or military arena, under the sign of the gallows, with the champion and martyr of liberty hanging on it. . . . .

The nation is aroused. It must now meet slavery face to face, and see in it its deformity and results. In every department of life it must meet it, and fight it in all its embodiments till it dies and liberty is proclaimed throughout the land to all the inhabitants thereof. . . . .

Your execution is but the beginning of the end of that death struggle between liberty and slavery, which must result in striking the last fetter from the last slave."

A Richmond correspondent, under date of Nov. 26th, says:—

"It is utterly needless, moreover, for any man to come South to canvass in behalf of any Northern enterprise. Any application of that character would find little favor now; it would rather tend to excite those to whom it may be addressed, and would certainly be met by a very emphatic response. There seems to be a universal purpose to cut off all business and social intercourse with the North. And this feeling is not the result of any preconcerted movement, but a spontaneous resolve reaching to every individual, no matter what position he occupies. This sentiment will be developed in a more organized and substantial form by and by."

State of Europe.

The feeling between France and England is incre[illegible]asing. The London Times calls on Bonaparte to put an end to the state of suspense. This he will do in his own way and time. He is noted for keeping his plans to himself. Great activity prevails in the extensive dockyards of England. New vessels are being built, and launched, and old ones are prepared for active service. All over the kingdom, the rifle corps are being thoroughly organized, and many leading men of the country are joining as privates in these companies. It is said that a feeling of hostility on the part of France, towards England, is more bitter now than at any time since 1815.

A London correspondent, under date of Nov. 18th says:—

"There is a great deal of talk about a war between France and England. . . .

For some time, France has been increasing her navy to formidable and threatening proportions, as well as fortifying her coast in the most skillful and substantial manner. What does all this mean, unless a war with her maritime rival, England? And, then, in this country, what an universal and exciting bustle is actually going on amongst all classes, in military preparations of the most elaborate description. Not only is the government expending millions in fortifications on the seaboard, and in manufacturing arms of all descriptions, but meetings are daily called and held all over the country to raise, drill and arm volunteer corps, just as if a French invasion was hourly expected."

A letter from Paris, dated Nov. 16th, says:—

"France and England seem drifting into a war. In fact, the French people are beginning to perceive a spirit of malevolence on the part of England that bodes no good."

We think the political aspect of the world never looked more terrible than at the present time; and we see no bright spot this side of the coming of the Son of man. We may well pray "let thy kingdom come."

Debt and Grace.

NOTICED FROM A NEW QUARTER.

The Rev. W. M. Fernald, of the "New Church," has just published an able work entitled "God in His Providence," in which he says:—

"He who would see an able dissertation on the end of evil and the final destruction of the wicked, from an old church point of view, may consult a recent work on the 'Doctrine of a Future Life,' by C. F. Hudson. For a more exposition of the literal sense of the Word, in those passages which speak of the punishment of the wicked, as to time and eternity, we know of nothing equal to it. We have here the whole literature of the question. And the reader will be well repaid by a masterly accumulation of testimony, as to the meaning and usage of terms, and the faith of eminent christians, through the whole history of the church. Also, by many worthy and truthful reflections. Of course, a true spiritual philosophy will reveal a ground of hope and faith quite superior to absolute and thorough annihilation; and though the real truth of this subject may have been hitherto, in a great measure, providentially concealed from the world, yet who may not hope, that in those depths of the Word not yet fully opened, the heart of man may rejoice to the full, in the most complete and celestial satisfactions?" Page 287, note.

☞ [illegible] to comfort the languishing and the fainting [illegible] Rev. R. Hall.

Our Tract Column.

For the Crisis.

Are Sailors worth Saving?

What a question! Why, certainly they are! is the general exclamation, and he who said otherwise would be regarded as a very unfeeling, unchristianlike person. And well he might. But how are they to be saved? Why, through faith in Christ. Yes, but this faith comes not but through prayer and fasting, and as a class they are much averse to either, and unless you can show them the necessity they will not be likely to adopt these measures. "A short life and a merry one," is their reckless motto; and as many believe "what is to be will be," they think that they may as well have a good time as not in this world, as they have very slight hopes or fears for the next. This state of feeling has been begotten by the extensive circulation of Calvinistic tracts among them, and they reason—"If I'm to go to heaven, all right; but if I am to die and be damned, I can't help it." Another mystifies him with the declaration that God is a triune being; one, indivisible, yet of three distinct persons. This he cannot understand at all, and does not care to investigate it; for in fact he does not care. He knows there is a God, and that he made the world a great many years ago; and that he, himself, will die sometime, drowned most likely, and that's all. Another comes and says that God so loved the world that He gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him shall have everlasting life; but he spoils the whole by saying that if you do not believe, He will burn and torture you to all eternity in a lake of unquenchable fire! Although the sailor rarely gives himself credit for much sagacity, he plumply affirms there is neither love nor justice in that. This is passed off for religion, and they reject it; and thus are thousands frightened away with this hideous doctrine, who would under proper instruction have loved and honored God.

With this knowledge, I have undertaken the task of writing a tract for their peculiar case. I was asked to do so, with promises of support in publishing it. Personal advantage or pecuniary benefit has not been my motive, but an earnest desire to scatter the truth among a noble race. Donations have come in but slowly as yet, and were I not upheld by the righteousness of the undertaking I would give it up. I ask for nothing as an individual favor, but everything from your sense of duty. I do not urge the claim of an obscure and diminutive body of outcasts, although there are none so low or degraded who should not receive a kind attention; but that of a class which forms the bulwark of your land, the seamen of America. And through their influence the ships of every nation may bear the flag of the Gospel of Peace to every tribe and people in the universe. Shall the call be at once responded to, or must I wait, "hoping against hope," for something to turn up to begin the glorious work? Once in a while I get an encouraging epistle, from which I make extracts to show the cause is dear to a few hearts. Here is one from a letter received from Mrs. M. C. Allen, Black Rock, N. Y.:—

"Enclosed are $2, to aid in printing your tract, or tracts, for seamen. I hope you will succeed in carrying out your good design, and that many of these too much neglected class will thereby have their eyes opened to see the truth in the light of God's word. 'Tis but my mite I contribute, but may our Father cause it to be a blessing."

The next is from Bro. T. Wilkins, Dorchester, Mass.

"DEAR BRO. COTTON:—I enclose one dollar to assist in getting out a tract for the use of sailors. I suppose a sailor loves a good smart breeze rather than a dead calm, so he will prefer a tract that has a point and a power, rather than a long-drawn and dry argument. Hoping the Lord will direct you in the work of preparing a tract for the use of that useful class of our fellow men, that go down to the sea in ships, that do business in great waters, is the prayer of Yours truly, THOS. WILKINS."

Another, the second letter from Bro. Otis Irish:—

"DEAR BRO. COTTON:—I here enclose to you two dollars more towards forwarding the sailor's tract, which I have received from some of those that begin to feel an interest in the cause, and am trying to get others interested on the same subject. I am in hopes of obtaining something more to send you before long."

Another, from Sr. "Maria."

"BRO. COTTON:—Please accept this mite for your Tract Fund. I wish I could send you much more, but God knows the heart, bless his name. This will help a little. May God bless you in this noble effort to furnish the sailor with the genuine bread of life. The cause lies near my heart. Those that are near and dear to me sail on the deep waters. God save the dear sailor. Dear brother, do not get discouraged yet, though help comes slowly. There is money enough somewhere. May the Lord touch the hearts of his children, that they may feel what they do must be done quickly. From your unworthy Sister. Boston, Dec. 5th, 1859."

I gratefully acknowledge remittances from L. Fancher, L. Burgess, and others who do not wish their names to appear. I will make no farther remarks at present, but leave it with God and you.

JNO. F. COTTON.

☞ A little fruit [illegible]

For the Crisis.

Importance of Walking in the Light of Truth.

"Buy the truth and sell it not."—Prov. 23: 23.
"Woe unto them that call evil good, and good evil, that put darkness for light."—Isa. 5: 20.
"Sanctify them through thy truth; thy word is truth."—John 17: 17.

What light is to the eye, truth is to the mind. The simile is one which is very frequently used in the Scriptures, and there is in the mind of a believer, who fully grasps and heartily receives any Bible truth, just as real a seeing with the mind as the light is seen with the natural eye; and it is just as real and satisfactory. "Whatsoever maketh manifest is light": as the light of the sun makes manifest to the natural eye, so the light of truth makes manifest to the eye of the mind. "The light of the body is the eye," says our Lord; "if thine eye be single, thy whole body shall be full of light." Just so in regard to the truth, if the eye of our mind be single we are in the position to be guided "into all truth" by the "Spirit of truth." The single eye is, having but one object and aim, and that object and aim to know the truth and obey it. If there are any side views, such as a favorite theory, a bias to pre-conceived opinions, a sticking to views long held and earnestly expressed,—the eye is not single, and we shall not be full of light. No man can be a disciple (learner) of Christ, who is not ready to abandon all views previously held and believed, when these views come into conflict with truth. Truth must be the steady, unwavering purpose at all times, —now, henceforth, and forever. "Buy the truth" at any cost, "and sell it not."

Some persons are so committed to a favorite theory, their creeds are printed in a book, perhaps; or they have long advocated and defended their favorite theory, and to back down now, and say that they are in error, is too much; they cannot bring their minds to such a humiliation; they still search for arguments to sustain their favorite, although half suspecting that something is wrong in it. And thus, not being single-eyed, they will fail to have a clear perception of the light (truth).

Others, again, on some point of duty—such as being baptized—see nothing but the cross which lies in their way; and they will try in various ways to avoid it. What difference, say they, can it make whether baptized or sprinkled? and by degrees the convictions which they once had on this subject and duty,—so plain that he that runs may read,—are obscured by degrees, until finally they settle down into a living in habitual neglect of duty; and the light which was within becomes darkness; and oh, how great that darkness! They live on thus from year to year, and instead of being lights to others in the path of duty and self denial, they are stumbling blocks in the way of converts; and it is to be feared that at the last they will be amongst the MANY who will say in that day, "Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name, and in thy name done many wonderful works?" To whom he will say, "Depart, I never knew you!" That word MANY is, to my mind, very expressive. It signifies a large part of those who profess, and they are a class who evidently did expect admittance; they did many things, even wonderful works, but they omitted one plain duty, and that blinded their eyes and finally proved their ruin. Their eyes were not single.

There is a precious promise in John 16: 13,—"When he the Spirit of truth, is come, he will guide you into all truth;" and so he will, just so far as we keep the "single eye," but if our eye be evil and we suffer our light to become darkness, the Spirit of truth will cease to guide us, and the light we have will be darkness of the grossest kind. No man is safe himself, nor a safe guide to others, who, from any cause whatever, fails to retain a single eye. And oh, what multitudes there are (and some we fear amongst Adventists) who have departed from the simplicity of the gospel and are now blind guides!

Whoever compromises the truth, sells the truth. We are instructed to "buy the truth and SELL IT NOT." Mixing truth with error, and calling the error just about as good as the truth, or thinking it not of much consequence if we do have a little error with much truth, is compromising the truth, and differs not much, if any, from selling the truth. We see this everywhere, amongst all sects; the sentiment is, if we agree on certain (as they call) fundamental truths, it is of no consequence about the rest—no harm done even if we mix error with truth, provided we agree on the fundamentals. And thus the truth is ignored, and its effect neutralized or destroyed. If they hold any truth, its effect is destroyed by the error. This mixing truth and error, and putting darkness for light, seems to be the lukewarmness which is so positively condemned in Revelations 3: 15, 16, and which is presented as the characteristic of the last church which is brought to view a prophecy, viz., the Laodicean. We are there told that to be hot or cold is better than to be lukewarm; and why? Because unmixed error is better than the lukewarm state of mixing truth and error, and less injurious, less mischievous, less dangerous; and therefore says our Lord, "I would thou wert cold or hot: so then, because thou art lukewarm, and neither cold nor hot, I will spue thee out of my mouth." A lukewarm [illegible] will vomit it forth."

With this view of lukewarmness—and it seems to be what is meant by it—how dangerous, even fatal, is it, to put darkness for light! This might be illustrated in various ways. For instance; with the truth of the second personal advent of Christ, the restitution, kingdom, inheritance; if we hold unto the Pagan fable of the immortality of the soul, and the theological hell, where the wicked are to be in misery forever, it is mixing the grossest errors with some truth, and the error will neutralize the truth and greatly impair if not entirely destroy its effect. To tolerate such errors and say it is not of much consequence what we believe, whether it be that the soul is immortal, or that the wicked are to be in misery forever, or that "all the wicked will God destroy,"—provided we hold to the truth of the second advent doctrine professed, is, to my mind, perilous. Such errors dishonor God, and present him before the minds of men as the greatest tyrant,—greatest, because infinite in power to execute to the full all the misery that the fertile imagination of a Benson or any other theologian has imagined,—if so be that it were true. But I thank God that the Bible reveals our God as a very different being; and one who will do the very best that can be done with the finally impenitent, viz., "destroy" them, "root and branch," and "make them as ashes under the feet of the righteous."

It is just so, not only in regard to these errors which have been named, but all others. Erroneous views of truth will confuse and perplex the mind, and prevent that clear view so essential to our safety or usefulness. If there is to be a future millennium, either pre or post-millennium,—to believe that the thousand years of Revelation are in the past, is to disarrange the plan. On the other hand, if it be true that the thousand years are in the past, for me to believe that it is to be in the future, will so disarrange a right view of the plan of God, that I cannot intelligently act in harmony with that plan; and consequently shall fail to be a co-worker with them in the present truth.

I cannot regard error of any sort as harmless; and any union which compromises the truth, or tolerates error for the sake of union and peace, must be abomination in the sight of God, and seems to contribute to that state of lukewarmness which is characteristic of the Laodicean or last church which is presented in prophecy.

If the foregoing positions are true, how it behooves God's people to be jealous for the truth, and walk in the light with a single eye! For in this position only can any individual or church be safe. The truth is to sanctify (separate) us and make us free. I hope to see these thoughts presented and enlarged upon by some one more able to do justice to the subject.

W. S. O.

Hartford, Ct., Nov. 17, '59.

For the Crisis.

What is Spirit?

SELECTIONS.

Our ideas of the divine providence are densely and darkly obscured to many minds, by the confused speculations of philosophers and theologians concerning the mode of the divine existence . . . We have heard so much of matter and spirit as two distinct and separate entities, having no kind of appreciable relation or connection with each other, that the whole of theology rests in a fog from that consideration alone. Once make the distinction and separation that is made,—that spirit and matter have nothing in common,—that one is the perfect and complete negative of all the other,—that spirit is something without form, parts, divisibility, extension, color, or any of the properties that are usually recognized in a veritable, substantial entity, and that still it is something,—once set up this definition, and we have very nearly, as to all definite conception, either removed God from the universe, or admitted a phantom into it which is the plague of theology during the whole of its adoption. It is the Will-o'-the-wisp of all fruitless speculation. . . . It is beyond all doubt, that this nondescript denial or ignoring of all the essential properties of spirit has produced more scepticism, both with regard to God and a future life, than any other one cause apart from the evils and corruptions of the heart. If there is a God who acts upon the universe, it is demanded by common sense and reason that he be something. That which has no form, parts, or extension, is nothing. God is a substance. . . .

Now, therefore, we have got rid, by this brief philosophy, of one of the most formidable and monstrous chimeras that ever entered into the imagination of man;—that of a God, who is Spirit, who is Essence or Substance, and yet who has no appreciable connection with any other substance;—who is without form, parts, extension, and every attribute or quality by which a distinct entity can be made of him at all. . . .

But let it now be particularly observed, in order to the repelling of any, the very last remains, of Pantheism connected with this subject, that God is not to be contemplated merely as a great Force, or Sun, in the centre of creation, but as altogether and distinctly [in the form of] Man. He [illegible] Being, the [illegible] of which [illegible] we see him in his [illegible] . . . . . form, and whose personal appearance was itself revealed to us in the Lord Jesus Christ . . . .

Is not the soul a substance, and an organism? If it is not, is it not a nothing? How much have metaphysicians done, and the theologians too, in an affected spirituality, to reduce all spiritual nature to nothing! How vainly have they talked of a human spirit! Spirit, we are told, is an essence or substance, without form, parts, color, extension, or any of the properties of material nature . . . . If the human soul is anything, if it is a substance, it must have form.

DEAR BRO. GRANT:—I offer the above extracts for your readers. When any of them shall have told or guessed the school to which the author belongs, I will offer something more.

C. F. H.

A Letter from H. Munger.

I have so far recovered from my injury, that I can labor some, and will go, if a door opens, where the church is united in holding a protracted meeting for a few days. I cannot take long journeys in a wagon, or go on foot, jump ditches and fences, as I have done; but will do what I can; for the time allotted to us is short in which to work. Direct your letters to Chicopee Falls, Mass. I am very thankful for the good, sympathizing letters I have received from my friends; they helped greatly to drive off the blues; and some letters had an excellent strengthening plaster in them, for which I am very thankful.

H. MUNGER.

For the Crisis

A Suggestion.

Bro. Burnham says, that he is in a much worse place than to be on the fence. Yet it would seem that he hardly knows whether he is under the fence, or on this side or that, or crawling through.

He says, "I cannot see evidence that the spirit of man is immortal. I cannot believe that the spirit of man goes into the grave when man dies. I cannot understand how the spirit of man can be conscious out of the body."

Perhaps the reason why our brother cannot understand the first and last of these statements is, because there is nothing in the Bible nor reason to sustain them. The reason he does not understand the second statement, may be the fact, that the Bible says the spirit returns to God who gave it. But, Bro. B. does not know what the Bible does say on this subject. We thus inform him.

Our Bro. seems to know less of his whereabouts, than did the two Irishmen, who on arriving to this country immediately left for the West, and on getting into a section where there were no inhabitants, and on becoming hungry and tired, they commenced praying, and said, "O Lord, have mercy on two poor Irishmen, who are three thousand miles from home, and seventy-five miles from everywhere else." They were in rather a bad place, still they appeared to know where they were. This may not so well apply to Bro. B., for he says, notwithstanding he is sure he is a fool, and dont know much, that he is in "Doubting Castle." In knowing this, he may be knowing more than he thought he did.

However, we would not trifle with this case, for it is too serious a matter. We will say to our brother, that the way and the only way to get out of "Doubting Castle" is, to apply the key of faith in God and in his word, and be no longer doubtful but believing. This course should be taken at once, lest the owner of the promises should get the advantage, and inflict such a beating as to make recovery doubtful.

J. S. W.

For the Crisis.

Nota Bene!

If the brother who wrote me from Chateaugay, N. Y., and sent $2, will send his name, his order shall be filled. These letters that come without signature, remind me of the Hibernian who went to the post-office for a letter.

"What is your name?" said the postmaster.

"None iv yer business what my name is; I want a litter."

"Well, but what is your name?"

"I tell yer none iv yer business what my name is; I want a litter."

"But you must tell me your name, or I cannot give you a letter."

"Well, then, Denis O'Brian."

The postmaster looked and said, "no letter for Denis O'Brian."

Whereupon Pat glided out of the office, chuckling as he went, "An faith and he didn't get my thrue name at all at all."

Please send us your "thrue name" when you write a letter, and the best way is to write your name plainly at the bottom, and your address under it, and be sure it is done before the letter is sealed up.

☞ Persons who wish for "The Christian Lyre," can have them sent from Providence, R. I. or can have them packed in the boxes or bundles of tracts for the West, East, North or South, by writing and sending their orders to me, immediately with the cash. Price 60 cts. single, $6.00 per 100; or $5.40 per dozen.

Direct till January 1st, 1860, to H. L. Hastings, care of G. W. Young, Box 3124, New York P. O., or Providence, R. I.

For the Crisis.

Joseph Priestly.

BRO. GRANT:—I herewith forward for the Crisis, a few extracts from a Memoir of Joseph Priestly, read before the National Institute of France by M. Cuvier, June 27, 1805, and which may be found in the annual report of the Board of Regents of Smithsonian Institution for 1858.

O. F. HOBBS.

"In his view, Scripture and experience agree in making the soul material."

"Sensation perishes with the body, but will revive with it at the day of resurrection, in virtue of the will and power of God."

"Till then we shall sleep in absolute insensibility; the distribution of punishments and rewards awaits us only thereafter." ("Even his adversaries give him credit for great erudition, and singular dexterity—and look upon him as one of the strongest controversialists, and enemies of orthodoxy in these latter times.")

"He thought himself authorized to predict from Scripture, events that were near at hand." "He published, in 1799 an address to the Jews in which he announced to them from the revelations of Daniel and St. John, their speedy re-establishment in Palestine, with a re-union of all creeds and the foundation of a reign of glory." ("The event was to be heralded by such tokens as the downfall of papal powers, of the Turkish empire, and the kingdoms of Europe.") (For this, his faith, and "politics too closely allied" his property, real and personal, the work of almost an age, was destroyed by the rabble, and himself finding repose in America.)

"His last moments were marked by effusions of piety: 'I am going to sleep, like you,' said he to his grand-children who were brought to his bedside, 'but we shall all awake together, and I trust to everlasting happiness.'"

He was buried at Northumberland, Pa., and the following is the inscription on his tomb:

"To
The memory of the Reverend
DR. JOSEPH PRIESTLY,
who departed this life on 6th Feb., 1804.
Anno Aetatis LXXI.

Return unto my rest, oh my soul, for the Lord hath dealt bountifully with thee. I will lay me down in peace and sleep till I awake in the morning of the resurrection."

Obituary Notices.

Our dear and much valued Bro. ORANGE WALKER, of Middlebury, Ind., aged sixty-five years, was accidentally shot on Wednesday, the 23d of Nov.

The circumstances were these. Bro. Walker and his son went into the field in the morning, with their team, to husk corn. They took their rifle with them, as they were in the habit of doing, to shoot game. Near noon Bro. Walker drove his team with nearly a load of corn to the house, upon turning around in the road nearly in front of his house, he spoke with some earnestness to his team, which caused them to spring forward. This threw his son, who held the rifle, sitting upon the side of the wagon, back between the hind wheel and the box. At this instant, by some means, his son knows not how, the gun was discharged, and the contents lodged in the body of our brother. He instantly ceased breathing.

Bro. Walker and wife, some nine or ten years since, listened to the proclamation of the gospel by Bro. E. Miller, Jr. Both loved, believed, and obeyed the word of life, and since that time have rejoiced together in the blessed hope of soon seeing the Son of God seated upon his throne, robed in the habiliments of glory. This was a precious thought with them.

As he was a prominent citizen, a very large concourse of people came out to the funeral. The Baptist and Methodist meeting-houses were freely opened to us on the occasion by the pastors of those churches, to which thanks are due. We occupied the Methodist house, being the most commodious. We addressed the large audience from Job 14: 14.—"If a man die, shall he live again?"

The world has lost a good citizen—the church, a warm-hearted christian—Sr. Walker, a kind and affectionate husband—children, a loving father, and relatives, a devoted and ever constant friend. But we together with them mourn not as those who have no hope. Praise the Lord, we believe, as well as did our brother, that Jesus died and rose again, and that he now holds the keys of hades, and of death, and soon he will take to himself his great power and reign, till he destroys all his enemies, and brings back this revolted province to its original purity, and establish his own dear children in the kingdom of God, where the curse, destruction, death, and all evil shall have come to a perpetual end. May Sr. Walker and all mourning friends, be sustained and cheered by these precious promises.

A. N. SEYMOUR.

Expositor will please copy.

Fell asleep in Jesus, in Waterbury, Ct., Nov. 27th, MARY ELLEN, daughter of John C. and Mary M. Munson, aged two years and three months.

This is the third time that the enemy death has visited our family circle, and taken our little jewels from us. Little Mary sweetly sleeps by the side of her sisters, Ella and Martha, one aged four years, the other one year and two months. May this bereavement be sanctified to our good, and when the voice is heard that bids the sleepers arise, may we again clasp our little ones in our arms, never again to be severed from them.

"Give joy or grief, give ease or pain,
Take life or friends away;
But let us find them all again
In that eventful day."

J. C. & M. M. MUNSON.

Died, in New Lebanon, N. Y., Nov. 24th, CAROLINE OPHELIA, daughter of Nathaniel and Sally M'Culloch, aged eight months and nineteen days.

Loved one, thou hast early left us,
Here on earth alone to sigh;
Often has thy presence blest us,
In the strongest earthly tie.

Dearest treasure, we resign thee,
Though so hard it be to bear;
Trusting in the Savior's promise,
That life in glory thou wilt share.

Sweet one, thou art free from suff'ring,
Pain, distress, no more shall harm,
Angels guard thy peaceful resting,
Till Jesus calls thee to his arms.

E. M.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Per steamship Edinburg from Liverpool the 23d.

Garibaldi, in a proclamation announcing his retirement from the army of Central Italy, complains of underhand machinations against him. He says he will resume his service the moment Victor Emmanuel calls to arms, and recommends the Italians to rally round the King of Sardinia.

The Spanish movement against Morocco was progressing slowly.

Nana Sahib is reported to have died at Rally, on the Nepaul frontier.

The Herald's Paris correspondent says it is denied in well informed quarters that the French papers are to be restrained in their expressions against England. The Guyenne, a Bordeaux journal, had been seized for publishing the letter falsely attributed to the King of Sardinia by the Ami de la Religion.

The Courier du Dimanche had received a warning for an article written by Count d'Haussonville.

Intelligence from Japan states that a change in the Ministry favorable to foreigners was expected.

Seventy gunboats have been ordered by France, to be finished in two months, for service in the Chinese war.

ITALY.

It is stated that King Victor Emmanuel, having refused to withdraw the nomination of Buoncompagni, the French Government has in its turn yielded, and he is to be Regent of Modena, Parma, and Bologna, and also of Tuscany, if the authorities there will receive him.

A regiment in the Bolognese Brigade had taken the oath to Victor Emmanuel, and is to wear the uniform of the Piedmontese army.

A manifestation was attempted at Bologna on the announcement of Garibaldi's resignation. The number of persons was small, and they were immediately dispersed.

A Memorandum of the Tuscan government tells the European Powers that if the Congress orders the restoration of the Grand Dukes, they will oppose it to the last. If attacked they will, though sure of defeat, do their best to repel force by force.

It is possible the discussions of the Congress will extend over five or six months. The treaty of peace will first be examined, and then the Italian question will be discussed.

SPAIN.

A Madrid dispatch of the 21st says the fortification of Ceuta continues. The embarkation of the first corps d'armee has been completed, and that of the second has commenced. The bad weather renders the shipment of war material difficult.

The organization of the battalion in the Basque provinces is proceeding actively.

Religious Intelligence.

In England, it is said that the religious feeling is everywhere deepening, and that the prayerfulness of the whole church and its anxiety for a religious revival were never before so manifest as at the present time. It is said to be the daily theme in social circles. Christian people are everywhere meeting for prayer, and intelligence from different parts of the country of the prospect of God's work is heard with the deepest interest. In Scotland, also, the religious interest is deepening and extending. Meetings are held nightly in the prominent cities and towns. A letter from Campbellton, from a father to his son in Glasgow, speaks of an evening meeting at the former place, at which there were two thousand persons present. It says "the crowd filled the porches, and far outside the doors, and were hanging on the windows and dykes of the church, and wherever any glimpse or sound could be got of the meeting."

In Glasgow, the movement has resulted in the establishment of an institution to save fallen women. It has already saved several.

In Norway and Sweden there has been a revival of much power, going on for a twelvemonth. It is said to reach almost every parish. Some of the professors and nearly a fourth part of the students (about four hundred in number) in the University of Christiana, are reported to be pious men. Even the Laplanders, both the nomadic and stationary, far up to the North, have shared in its blessed influence. This great work is attributed to the blessing of God upon the Bible and tract distribution, at which there are more than a hundred colporteurs at work in these countries at the present time.

From the Pope's dominions there are many indications that the political features of the Papacy have become so odious in many places as to give Protestantism a decided advantage. A recent letter in the Newark Advertiser, dated at Florence, Oct 20, says:

"Here in Tuscany the dissenters are organizing for the diffusion of their doctrines, which are those of the Vaudois of Piedmont. They number, I understand, about nine thousand of the native population. Since the proclamation of freedom, large and respectable churches have been organized in Leghorn and Florence, which have fitted up convenient buildings for public worship. Bibles and tracts are industriously and freely circulated. But while the government thus secures the fullest liberty of worship, it feels constrained to exercise a strict surveillance over the expression of political opinion. Many arrests have been made within a few days of persons, including several priests, charged with being concerned in some supposed plot of reaction."

A letter of a later date from Florence, in the Providence Journal, confirms this statement. The writer says:

"I am surprised at the number of Italians I meet who frankly declare that they have not a particle of respect for the authority of the church in which they were born. Some of them go such lengths in their denunciations, that one who wishes to be governed by principles of fairness, is obliged to warn them not to go so far beyond the bounds of moderation as to do violence to religion itself. There are others, who as good Catholics, maintain their fidelity to the purely religious rites of the church, but at the same time exhibit a spirit of protest which is every way noble and admirable. They love the faith of their fathers, but are able to distinguish between what that requires and the arbitrary exactions of an ecclesiastical authority which has little respect for the rights of the individual intellect. A society of Italians recently organized, has taken a large room in one of the best localities in Florence, and meetings for communion and worship are held three or four evenings every week. I am told that several hundreds sometimes assemble, and the worship is conducted after the somewhat simple style of our Methodists or Quakers. It is said that the interest and the numbers in attendance are increasing.

PROPORTION OF CLERGYMEN TO POPULATION.—According to the census of 1850, there were in the United States 23,190,876 people. At the same time there were 26,842 clergymen, or one clergyman to 863 persons. But New Hampshire takes the lead in supporting clergymen, as she has one clergyman to every 490 persons. Connecticut stands next, with one clergyman to every 520 persons.

All the New England States support one clergyman to less than 600 persons. New York has one clergyman to every 722 persons. Virginia, one to 1,317; South Carolina, one to 1,410; Louisiana, one to 3,000.

RULES FOR GOOD HABITS.—1. Have a plan laid beforehand for every day. 2. Acquire the habit of untiring industry. 3. Cultivate perseverance. 4. Cultivate the habit of punctuality. 5. Be an early riser. 6. Be in the habit of learning something from every one with whom you meet. 7. Form fixed principles on which to think and act. 8. Be simple and neat in your personal habits. 9. Acquire the habit of doing every thing well. 10. Make constant efforts to be master of your temper. 11. Cultivate soundness of judgment. 12. Observe a proper treatment of parents, friends and companions.—Todd.

HUMAN GLORY.—The Roman forum is now a cow market, the Tarpeian rock a cabbage garden, and the palace of the Cæsars a rope walk.

Married.

In Richmond, Me., Dec. 1st, 1859, by Eld. Jesse Partridge, Mr. RENEL WEBBER and Miss MARRILLA M. UMBERHIND, both of Richmond, Me.

Editorial Notices.

☞ The Editor's tract—"Rich man and Lazarus"—has failed to reach us so that we could fill orders the past week. We expect to get them from press this week. Friends will exercise a little patience.

☞ We are out of Hudson's tract on the "Parable of the Rich man and Lazarus." Cannot supply orders at present.

☞ In article on fourth page, last week's paper, bottom of sixth column, read, "It is based on charity—a benevolent regard to others' weakness," etc.

☞ We have received the January number of the Bible Examiner, published by Geo. Storrs, New York. The publisher intends to issue this paper monthly,—32 pp. 8vo.

☞ We have received a dollar to be sent to Bro. Dodge, whose destitution was mentioned in the Crisis some time since. Will some one send us his full name and address, to this office?

Notices, &c.

Notice.

As Bro. Grant has acted as general agent for Dr. Higgins' Great Antalgica, Cancer and Scrofula Syrup, Indian Cough Balsam, and many other kinds of family medicines, for two or three years past, and many of the brethren and sisters having become acquainted with the same, and finding that they cannot do without them, we would just state for their benefit as well as others who may wish for the best healing remedies of the day, that Bro. Grant having declined to act longer as our agent, on account of being absent so much from home, we have appointed in his place, as general agent, Bro. J. F. Cotton, of Boston, Mass. Eld. I. C. Wellcome, Richmond, Me., is our agent for Maine, and Robert Allen, Vernon, Vt., is our agent for Vermont. Those living in Maine or Vermont will be supplied by the agents there, all other orders must be directed either to Bro. Cotton, of Boston, or to us at Palmer, Mass. All cash orders promptly attended to.

HIGGINS AND ALLEN.

Palmer, Mass., Dec. 1st, 1859.

Conference.

Notice is hereby given that the first quarterly conference of Buchanan district will be held at Buchanan, Michigan, and will commence on Thursday at half past six o'clock P. M., and continue over the following Sabbath. We hope to see a general rally at this conference, as no possible pains will be spared in making arrangements for preaching in destitute places. Come one, come all. Bro. P. B. Morgan is expected to be present to assist in preaching the Word.

For the church. D. R. Mansfield.

Notice.

The next meeting of the R. I. Conference will be at River Point, Dec 28th, 29th, and 30th. Let the Brethren and Sisters come with warm hearts expecting or intending to have a good meeting. JOSEPH D. BROWN, Clerk.

☞ Eld. N. F. Nason will meet the brethren in Windsor, Me., Dec 23d, to continue over Sunday, and will stop in the adjoining towns a short time. Let all that have an interest in the coming King, make one effort to save those that have no hope in Christ.

Conference.

There will be a conference in Wilton, Iowa, or where the brethren in that vicinity may think best, commencing Wednesday, Dec. 21st, (eve.) and continue over the following Lord's day. Let there be a general gathering.

WALTER PRATT.

Conference

In Earlville, Ill., will commence on Wednesday, Jan. 4th, 1860, and continue over the Lord's day following. One and all, come and pray the Lord to give us a feast.

W. PRATT.

☞ I will hold a conference in Elizabeth, Joe Davis Co., Ill., Wednesday, Jan. 18th, and continue over Lord's day following. The brethren must write me if they wish the above named meeting, and name where (what depot) they will meet me. Direct Maquoketa, Iowa, care of J. Covill.

WALTER PRATT.

☞ Will any Bro. or Sr., who knows the hymn called the "Choir of Angels," send them to the Crisis office for publication, and oblige a Sister?

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

Providence permitting, I will preach in River Point, R. I. . . . . Sunday, Dec. 25th

P. S. Will attend the conference the week following.

J. HEMENWAY.

J. B. Cook will preach, Lord willing, at the Quarterly Meeting near Norwalk, Ohio, as Rev. Alling shall appoint, Jan. 1st, 1860. Will preach on about ten days, as brethren may arrange.

J. G. Smith will preach in Hooksett . . . . Dec. 18th

Providence permitting, I will commence a series of meetings in the Town-house Hall, Danbury, Ct., Tuesday evening, Dec. 13th, and probably continue every evening till the 25th inst.

MILES GRANT.

I. D. Thompson will preach in South Reading . . . . Dec. 18th
Westford . . . . Dec. 19th

The Lord willing, I will preach in Ashford, Ct., (school-house) Axe Factory) Dec. 18th

C. W. BAKER.

Eld. C. F. Sweet appoints to preach in Conesus . . . . Jan. 10th to the 15th

O. D. Gibson will preach in Roxbury Hollow . . . . Dec. 18th
(as Bro. D. Braity shall appoint.)

Business Matters.

To Correspondents.

Eld. S. S. Brewer's P. O. address is South Glastenbury, Ct.

P. Richardson.—J. S. White's P. O. address is East Boston, Mass.

Cash Receipts.

Preachers' Aid Society.—Lewis G. Ingalls, $2.00. To Dec. 18th, $59.00.

W Baker 250, $4.66; B F Wilkins 228, 79 cts.

M J Farnshaw 231, L Jones 233, Wilson & Ray 233, I Day 233, M M Day 233, C H Bradford 231—50 cts. each.

C G Scribner 246, J D Goodrich 246, W S Howden 208, J C Munson 230, A J Batchelder 246, D Kinsman 245, P Converse 246, B Greaves 265, D S Wright 234, Mrs. N Knapp 252, J M Aldrich 246, S H Cotting 234, M A Clements 244, J W Buckland 242, W Richardson p. p. 240, F D Field p. p. 240, W H Simmons 246, Ira Sparks 238, J M Quimby 246, E A Walker 241,—$1.00 each.

W F Horden 254, P Bonnell 254, L I Demerest 237, S Tibbetts 239, J F Busch 239, E O Allen 247, E Tredwell 272, J Parry 272,—$2.00 each.

E Dole 238, L A Follansbee 263,—$3.00 each.

Books and Tracts.—S. P. Babcock $4.50, Wm. Baker 34 cts, T P Hodgdon $1.00, D Kinsman 12 cts, Mrs. E H Lyons 36 cts, B F Wilkins 21 cts, J M Aldrich 60 cts, N B Bennet $1.21, Mrs. C Warner 39 cts, J R Savage $1.00, P S A Deyo 64 cts.

Books and Tracts.

LAW requires all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on TRACTS is only one half cent per ounce, if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for ANY of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the CRISIS, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

The Rich Man and Lazarus; Thief on the Cross, and the Souls under the Altar; an exposition of Matt. 10: 28, Gen 2: 17, with other interesting matter. By Miles Grant. Price, single, 6 cents, $3.00 per hundred; 1-4 off per dozen. Postage 1 cent.

THE SOUL—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words nephesh and psuche as employed in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant. Boston. 32 pp.; 6 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $4.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. They weigh about one ounce each. A valuable tract for the times. Get one.

THE SPIRIT—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words ruakh and pneuma as found in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant. 32 pp.; price 6 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $4.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. A valuable aid in the study of the Scriptures.

The Parable of the Rich Man and Lazarus; does it imply eternal future suffering? By C. F. Hudson. 24 pp. Price, 3 cts. single. $2.00 per hundred.

The Doctrine of Everlasting Punishment: a discussion of the question, "Do the Scriptures teach the doctrine of the eternal conscious suffering of the wicked?" Between Dr. J. Litch and Eld. Miles Grant. Price, single, 25 cts. Postage 3 cts. 1-4 off per dozen.

What is Man? A Bible view of his creation. The meaning of soul, spirit, death and hell, by Miles Grant. Price, single copy 5 cts, $2.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

"The Speechless Guest at the Marriage Feast," by John F. Cotton, being a short review of the parable, with statistical remarks of its illustration in the destruction of Jerusalem; and its positive negation of the doctrine of election and reprobation. Price 5 cts. single, postage 1 ct. $2.00 per hundred.

ANTI-ETERNAL TORMENT. By Edwin Burnham. Price 1 cent, single, 75 cts. per hundred. Postage 1 ct.

Death not Life: or the Destruction of the Wicked scripturally Established. By J. Blain, Baptist minister. Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cents single; postage 3 cents. Bound, 40 cents; postage 8 cents.

Church Debts. By W. Ramsey, D. D. A rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cts—postage 9 cts.

The Rights of Wrong, or, Is Evil Eternal? By C. F. Hudson. Price 5 cts. single. 6 copies for 20 cts. Mailed post paid. $2.00 per hundred. Sold by G. W. Young, 138 William St., New York; Truman and Spofford, Cincinnati; and S. C. Griggs & Co., Chicago.

Cruden's Condensed Concordance. Every Bible student should have a copy. Price, postpaid $1.50.

Son of God, by H. Grew, 10 cts. single; postage 1 cent.

Bible meaning of the word Hell. Price [illegible]

The Harp, a selection of [illegible] by J. V. [illegible] per dozen. [illegible]

Words of Warning. [illegible] single; postage 1 ct.; $1.40 per hundred.

English Bibles.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish [illegible] than they can be bought [illegible] city.

Life and Religious Experience of [illegible] Munger, including many [illegible] connected with [illegible] written by himself. This is a very [illegible] and will be read with interest by all. Price [illegible]—postage 10 cents.

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed; or Christ the promised Messiah. By [illegible] A. SEYMOUR. An excellent tract to [illegible] the Scriptures, and upon the theological [illegible] of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price [illegible] per hundred,—6 cts. single. Postage [illegible]

200 Stories for Children, [illegible] by T. M. Preble. An excellent collection of interesting incidents, well calculated to [illegible] Price 40 cents; postage 7 cents.

Foster's Letter and Tract on Hell, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, [illegible] N. Y. Price $1., postage paid.

An Appeal to Pious Trinitarians. By H. Grew. Price 2 cts., postage 1 ct.

The Saint's Inheritance, by Wm. Shepherd.—A good tract to give your neighbor. Price $6.00.

The Wicked not Immortal. Two hundred texts quoted to prove the destruction of the wicked. By Eld. Jacob Blain. Price 1 cent single; $1.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

The Great Error Exposed; or, Endless Misery not a Bible Doctrine. In this tract all texts relied on to prove endless misery are explained, and two hundred for destruction quoted. By Eld. Jacob Blain. Price 2 cents single; $2.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

We also have the following works, published and for sale by H. L. HASTINGS, Providence, R. I.

1.—The Voice of the Church on the Coming and kingdom of the Redeemer, or a history of the Reign of Christ on Earth, by D. T. Taylor, edited with a preface by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. 12mo. pp. 420, price $1, postage 18 cents.

2.—The Great Controversy between God and Man. Its origin, progress and termination, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. pp. 167, neatly bound in cloth, price 60 cents—postage 10c.

3.—Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion, and a Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. Edited with a preface, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. 12mo. pp. 122. Price, in paper covers, 30 cts.—postage 8 cts., cloth gilt, 40 cts.—post. 8 cts.

4.—The Fate of Infidelity: or the Dealings of Providence with Modern Infidels: together with an appendix, containing a brief account of the special judgments visited upon the early opposers of Christianity; by a converted infidel. 1 vol. 18 mo. pp. 175, cloth gilt, 25 cents—post-paid.

5.—Future Punishment: an Argument in two parts, from Reason and Scripture, by H. H. Dobney, Baptist minister of England; with an appendix on the State of the Dead, by John Milton. This work is one of patient thought and calm and christian argument. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 312, price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

6.—Debt and Grace: or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C. F. Hudson. A most learned and valuable work, exhibiting great candor, ability and research, containing quotations from some four hundred writers of all ages and languages, and showing conclusively that eternal life is the peculiar privilege of the believer in Jesus Christ. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 480, price $1.25—post paid.

7.—Pauline Theology: or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. A convincing argument, deduced from a careful examination of every passage on the subject of Future Punishment in Paul's fourteen epistles. 12mo. pp. 84, 15 cts. single, $10 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

8.—The Old Paths: or the Primitive Doctrine of a Future Life, embracing copious extracts from the apostolic fathers, with arguments and remarks, by H. L. Hastings. pp. 87 12mo. 15 cts. single, $12 per hundred—post. 1c.

Important Questions—8 Nos., 4 pp. each. Price, per sett, 3 cts. single; $1.50 per hundred.

Fables of Infidelity, and Facts of Faith. By R. Patterson. 12mo. Price, postpaid, 75 cts., $4 per dozen.

Tracts on Prophecy, (bound,) 224 pp. Price, postpaid, 40 cts.

Tracts on Immortality, (bound,) 220 pp. Price, postpaid, 40 cts. Both volumes mailed for $1.

Tracts of 24 pages. Price. 5 cts. single copy; $3 per hundred: postage 1 ct. each, or half a cent per ounce if ordered to the amount of eight ounces or upwards.

1—Church not in Darkness; 2—The Three Worlds; 3—The Last Days; 4—Plain Truths; by Hastings. 5—Noah, his Age and Ours; 6—Desire of all Nations; 7—It is Done; by John Cumming. 8—A Voice of Warning; 9—New Heavens and Earth, by D. T. Taylor. 10—*Ancient Landmarks; 11—State of the Dead; by Milton. 12—Intermediate State; by Grew.

Tracts at 3 cents single copy; $1.50 per hundred: postage 1 ct. each, or half cent an ounce for packages of eight or more ounces.

1—Future Punishment; by Grew. 2—Scripture tract number one, Destiny of the Wicked. 3—Outline of the coast of Man; by Lenfest. 4—Key of Truth, 5—Man's Future State; by Sheldon. —6†Olive Leaves, by the sett.

Tracts at 2 cents single copy; $1 per hundred.

1—The Night Cometh; by J. Adey. 2—The Day of Judgment, by St. Cyril.

Tracts at 1 cent single copy; 50 cents per hundred.

1—Olive Leaves, separate. 2—Ancient Landmarks, separate. 3—Forty Questions on Immortality. 4—Scripture Searchers, one, two, three, four, five and six.

The above Tracts are on hand, and orders can be filled at once. Let us scatter them: Orders with the CASH are solicited. Persons ordering tracts should order as much or more than fifty cents worth, as packages of tracts containing eight ounces or more go cheaper than smaller quantities. Those who buy books to sell will receive them at a liberal discount. The poor can have them free by sending stamps to pay the postage,—and those that FEEL poor also.

Address H. L. HASTINGS, Providence, R. I.

For sale also by N. Branch, Moline, Ill.; G. W. Young, 138 William St., New York.

* The Landmarks are issued in setts of six Nos. which can be separated for distribution. The sett contains, The Coming and Kingdom of Christ, by 20,000 Baptists; the Duration of the Earth, by A. Clarke; Hope and Duty of the Church, by [illegible]; Restitution, by [illegible]; Warning Voice, by Cotton Mather; Loving Christ's Appearing, by Baxter.

† The Olive Leaves are three neat four page tracts that can be separated for distribution. [illegible] Little Children, Love one Another; two, The One Resting Place; three, My Friends; four, Wondrous Love, five, Abundant Grace; six, [illegible] Peace; by Hastings. Just the thing to distribute among all classes of saints and sinners.

Glad Tidings: or Bible proof that [illegible] and sin are to end in the universe by a literal destruction of [illegible] the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment collected and arranged. By J. Blain. Price [illegible]—postage 1 cent.

The Three Kingdoms; or, the kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan, the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; [illegible] as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By I. M. Preble. Price [illegible] per hundred, [illegible] 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

☞ The above books and tracts can be obtained of our agent in [illegible] Rooms, No. 5 Summer [illegible]

☞ The following books [illegible] can be had of J. R. Wright, [illegible]

The Harp [illegible] Bible [illegible]

[illegible] Contributions.

For the Crisis.

Dignity of the Ministry.

The gospel ministry—exalted work,
Ennobling, heavenly! near akin
To [illegible] of angel-hosts than aught on earth.
Servant of Christ! who dost proclaim to man
The [illegible] news—what saith the Word
In honor of thy calling? what the names
To designate thy high and sacred work?
Ambassadors of God—to represent
The character and purpose of that King
Who is supreme over all nations, thrones,
And [illegible] throughout the universe entire!
To give His message to our fallen world,
And urge allegiance to His perfect will.
Co-workers with the Deity! O! mark
The import of that term—in partnership
With the great Mover of a thousand worlds!
Is it esteemed an honor to be joined
In plan and effort with a millionaire?
What then with Him to whom all things belong,
Whether in earth or heaven, whose work is vast,
Beyond the ken of any mortal man?
Workers with God, to renovate a world,
How holy and sublime! entreating man
To seek a nature incorruptible—
For "glory, honor, immortality"—
A crown of life that fadeth not away!
Let politicians strive, and spend their zeal
In what they claim to be a righteous cause—
Let money-seekers toil incessantly
To gain the prize they covet—what their work
Compared with this—the gospel ministry?

Ye toiling ones, who preach the word of life
To dying men, weary and worn, and poor
In worldly goods, despised indeed by those
Who "walk by sight," and fail thus to discern
This noble "calling"—O rejoice, rejoice
For being so exalted of the Lord!
Toil on, and faint not, soon a day will dawn
When all things will appear in their true light;
Then 't will be known to the 'great multitude'
What dignity and grandeur crown this work;
How God approves, and bids his partners share
The riches, honors, glories of that throne
Awarded to his love. A. C. J.

For the Crisis.

Religion.

IS IT PROGRESSIVE IN PRINCIPLE?

It has been already suggested that the nations might have been found in a worse condition, by far, had the absence of all religion obtained instead of such conceptions of God or the gods as have prevailed; and whether the worship, bad as it was, did not indicate some improvement of the condition of men while destitute of the divine light of christianity. We may now with equal propriety ask whether the state of the nations was not better, by far, with all the aggressions upon human society, all the demolition of the better interests that followed the reign of darkness for ages; whether the condition was not better than it would have been under the power of Paganism, which must have continued without christianity? Was not the corrupt christianity of the middle centuries better than the Paganism which it displaced?

It should be remembered that Judaism could not prevail in the nations of Europe! Christianity was fallen to a level almost with former heathenism, in its ignorance, its debasing services, all its abominations, and its oppressions; it was not barbarism; it was the ascendancy of reality over the mythology of former times. Heathenism could not have lasted even if it had been better. It was displaced. The human mind having tasted of the divine light, could never be found entirely destitute of it, or the desire for more of it; and hence, even in the ages of darkness, there was an advance upon past positions. In respect to worship, it will readily be admitted that the improvement was very marked when the shackles of papal ignorance were broken from the human mind, and superstition, which had the sanction of ages, began to surrender her domain. When a hierarchy, whose authority was acknowledged by the imperial throne, as well as by the meanest subject, trembled mightily in its anciently blood-centered seat, then progress was admitted in principle by the reformers; it was contended for as essential; and it was seen; for the principle on which worship was previously founded, is recovered—and worship is the exhibition of religion. Hence, to improve worship, the sentiments should be improved. In the rising anew of the truth they were improved. Then the conceptions of the divine plan were improved, which is improvement in theology. And here is true progression.

Suppose the reformers did not get so far even into the fields of pure theological research as the first christians; they found the great body of divinity prostrate, corrupted, and most sadly gone to decay; and [illegible], to approach those explorations which had been made by the more favored children of truth, who seemed to wander over the ground rather than search it, was progress, in the very principle of true religion,—if religion is a condition of the sentiments, affections and life,—because the [illegible] of truth and morals was found in the convictions of the mind concerning God [illegible] requirement. Hence, as a better [illegible] obtained, a better state of [illegible] religion obtained. That was improvement in the principle of religion. [illegible] the establishment of a new principle? Was it not, rather, the arrangement, [illegible] harmonious principles, which, by their connection, secured a new [illegible] [illegible] religion in the [illegible] power of religion [illegible] the gospel [illegible] of the [illegible] the more exalted [illegible] have been the apprehensions of the Divine being, the better have been the human approaches to him; (which is but to say the human soul has offered better worship,) because the mind has had a better religious sentiment. This position, giving honor and power to theological truth, as it does, and proving the necessary advance of the principle which secures worship in man, (which, adapting itself first to him, as the age and times change; adapts him to the high demands of duty indicated by those changes, as well as the blessings of his higher life,) is sustained not only by this plainly logical deduction, but incontestably by facts. Indeed, on this ground, in the divine wisdom and providence, are the Christian nations in advance of the Jewish, and the Jewish and Christian in advance of the heathen.

When the call of God removed Abraham from the surrounding heathen, the voice was a theological truth, following which he obtained a theological position; hence his faith became a divine principle. The revelation of God to Moses was the communication of a theological system,—giving the land to a people, with its peculiar institutions,—separating a nation from the multitude of nations, as Abraham had been separated from his heathen neighbors. Religion made rapid strides at once, when altars rose in every part of the wide-spread camp of Israel, and from each part of a vast-spread nation; and every altar burned with a pure offering, while every man was compelled to own his allegiance to the God of the Sinai of thunder and lightning, and earthquake and terror,—at the same time that each heart felt glad to secure justification, at whatever cost. But it was the theological light which came forward by the great accession of truth to the knowledge of the mind, which was the real power of action; consequently, the basis of the structure of worship. The development was in the revelation—that was theological—it was followed by human enlargement of capacity and agreement of sentiment, with conformity of the affections and will in worship. That was religion—progressive exhibition on the part of the Divine; progressive conformity on the part of the human.

The principle thus shows its amplified and expansive character; its generous and comprehensive power of increase; the religion, its adhesion to, and dependence upon, the principle, by its rapid and healthful growth. It never outgrows the principle; it cannot outrun its own force.

Certain prescribed limits being necessary to the Sinaic system, it will look like a stationary engine; much as it may have been in advance of the former manifestation. Another and a more perfect and beautiful machine appears, which, not ignoring all the principles of the former, but with perfectness and beauty of structure and action, is like a locomotive: it acts within itself and upon itself; but by this action within and upon itself, it acts upon the track it traverses, and upon the objects it passes; but with still more direct force, it acts upon the train which it moves on after its own improved and irresistible momentum.

The gospel and worship under the Christian dispensation, with the establishment of the principle and exhibition of the Church, is an eminent example illustrating our ground; for it is an overwhelming view of God and divinity progressing, almost infinitely beyond the limits set to Judaism in its notions of the divine, its reception of the sentiments, which should make the basis of worship, and the offering of the affections, securing justification. To the mind of a worshiper of the gods, it should have been the progress, at once, beyond the dark barriers of his mythology; the breaking up of the prison-house of his ignorance; and so sudden is the corresponding advancement of his religious sentiment, that it is like new life. The world, in its moral aspects, prostrated and degraded, without God, lay like a vast lagoon: the gospel has channelled it, dug it over, drained it, dry land has appeared, lands have been recovered, rivers of living water flow in its new and beautiful canals; and now, instead of an illimitable moral morass, we have the garden of the Lord! But still its attacks upon the waste condition of our nature are ever renewed, ever must be, no doubt, till the redemption of our nature. Man will ever find within himself the necessities of improvement, and the elements of wrong which he can well spare; which, indeed, he cannot well afford to keep. The intelligence of a portion (and it should be large) would lead them to a strong desire to be free from all ignorance, error and sin; while the very learning of some—as it does not give them real intelligence—uniting with and strengthening a previous proclivity, will but secure to them the continuous depths of unbelief.

If we are correct here, the progress of religion in principle, in theological conception, (which, truly appreciated, is a knowledge of the divine being and his infinite plan, which is continually, from age to age and year to year, increasing its intelligence) is essential to the standing, the honor and the conquests of true religion.

Religion, the sweet-visaged angel, attendant on man in all his complex [illegible] of life, where his very good may be an [illegible] [illegible] appareled [illegible] with the garment of love. Theology, the stern-browed god, leads the way, crushing the rock of darkness in his tread, arraying the field of search in the majestic garniture of truth. W. S. C.

For the Crisis.

To the Brethren in Ohio.

At the conference held in Marysville, a number of brethren in different parts of Ohio were appointed a committee to raise funds for the support of Eld. L. H. Chase as Evangelist in the State. I, as one of the committee, was appointed treasurer. I want to remind the brethren of the necessity of remitting funds as fast as they can, and also report where Bro. Chase is wanted, and what can be done for him if he comes. We are fully able to sustain Bro. Chase this year. The only question is, will we do our duty? A number have promised to do nobly, while others have not had an opportunity of saying what they will do. To such I would say, be a committee to work in harmony with the committee appointed, and raise all you can and report.

A number of promising places are open for Bro. Chase; but he must have means to go out on. Some has been paid in—$35.00 in all; more should be paid in before this. Bro. Chase labored faithfully last year for a considerable time, and accomplished much. The promise is far better for abundant success this year. I have not heard of any that has been so successful as Bro. Chase in bringing aliens into the commonwealth of Israel. Nearly one hundred have been baptized by him in less than a year into the one hope of the gospel. But few can meet every kind of opposition as well as he. He is fearless, yet calm in the midst of controversy. His call to be an Evangelist this year was very unanimous; and now, brethren, I hope to have encouraging reports and remittances from you. Your humble servant,

H. Fish

Dayton, Ohio, Dec. 4th, '59.

Correspondence.

Letter from Eld. S. S. Brower.

Dear Brn. and Srs. in Christ:—Grace and peace be multiplied unto you through the knowledge of God and of Jesus our Lord. Having been permitted to attend the late meeting in Worcester, I truly was blessed in greeting so many of the humble disciples, waiting, looking, praying, longing, hoping for, yea, desiring and hastening unto, the coming of the day of God.

One principle was prominent, at least so it seemed to me,—the coming of Jesus; and notwithstanding we differed in the application of the symbols,—praise the Lord, so far as my knowledge extended, seemed to be impressed with this (to me a fact)—the Lord will come in a very short time; others, in a few days, some in 1860; and I am solemnly convicted on the latter point. There was no dogmatic positiveness mingled with invective against others that differed; and God forbid there ever should be on so solemn a subject. O what a theme! the judgment! the coming of Jesus! Who, who, I ask, can seriously believe it and feel sour at heart, and hurl unchristian epithets against any one! I would, for one, by the assisting grace of God, strive to manifest becoming meekness, love and gravity, on so awfully sublime and glorious a subject as the coming of the Just One, to glorify the saints and destroy the wicked. Who, I inquire, can seriously believe it and indulge in other than a christian spirit? Some may profess or imagine such an idea; but to believe it, in my humble opinion, they conscientiously never can. Let every one examine themselves on this point, and never let an unkind expression or hasty condemnation fall like the jargon of a sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal on the ears of those who differ from us. God forbid it. Pray for grace to be kept from it. Amen.

Dearly beloved "Let us be without dissimulation, abhor that which is evil, cleave to that which is good, be kindly affectioned one to another, with brotherly love." "In meekness instructing those that oppose themselves." With increased gratitude I thank my God at all times for the light that shone out of darkness, hath shined in my heart, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ. But we have this treasure in earthen vessels, that the excellency of the power may be of God, and not of us. O the mercy and goodness of God to me, in my conversion from darkness to light, from human discipline, creeds, tradition, heathen dogmas, to the Bible—precious Bible! O Lord, help me to love it more, and shed increasing light upon its sacred pages, day by day, is my most fervent prayer.

Dear reader, I was among those who heard, believed, and preached, the advent of our Lord in 1843. And the more I investigate that great, that unparalleled movement in the church and world, the more deeply I am convicted of the hand of God in that matter. It does seem to me that the preaching of time was God's great providential agent in bringing out and keeping out a people, that should be separate from an almost universally worldly-minded, mammon-loving church. The preaching of time only manifested the hatred and opposition. Often have I wept in secret places, after reading in religious periodicals, hearing ministers, seeing the scoffs, jeers, ridicule and contempt from professed christians against "time." Well, like every stone hurled at Stephen, the martyr of Jesus, which drove him nearer and nearer to Jesus, so it has weaned me from man, whose breath is in his nostrils, and driven me to Jesus in secret places, and drawn from my full heart a response to the apocalyptic importunity—"Come, Lord Jesus." To those who did not pass through the disappointment of 1843, and drink the mingled cup of disappointment, adversity, and opposition from old friends, and hatred on all sides, deal gently with those who did, and to those who did not, in turn do thou likewise.

Again, in 1854, I was led to believe the days would end, and preached it, because I believed it. Alas! the message which was in my mouth sweet as honey, did produce a bitter disappointment; and here for myself I must declare that all previous opposition in 1843 and 4, bore no comparative weight to the treatment of those who had suffered and dared with us in the great distinguishing movement that separated us from the church and the world in 1843. It will not do for me to palliate all the improprieties on our part, nor my brethren to justify themselves in their conduct wherein they have erred. O how much more befitting the disciple of Christ, to be pitiful, to be courteous, and as we pray for mercy, in turn show mercy to others. O righteous Father, help me so to do! and then hear our prayer—

That mercy I to others show,
That mercy show to me.

In conclusion, I now declare, that my faith embraces the very speedy advent of my souls warmest affections. O the idea of being with and like Jesus, saved, eternally, in a land where every sight pleases, and every sound cheers the sacramental host of God's elect.

"My soul is striving to be there,
I long to rise and wing the air,
And trace the sacred road!
Fly, lingering moments, fly! oh, fly!
I thirst, I pant, I long to try
Angelic joys to prove!"

Pomfret, Ct.

From R. V. Lyon.

Dear Bro. Grant:—By the kindness of my Heavenly Father I have been permitted to return in safety to my field of labor, after an absence of some four weeks in the United States. I record it to the praise of Almighty God that I never spent the same period of time more pleasantly. Glory be to God, for friends and friendship! I enjoyed the Wilbraham campmeeting much. Subsequent to its close, I attended a Methodist campmeeting in the region where I was reared,—and in the town where I was settled as a Baptist preacher three years; and have preached frequently for some twenty years past. Here I met with a multitude of warm hearted friends; and by request I gave them a discourse predicated upon John 3: 16. Good was done at this meeting. At the closing up of the services at the stand on Sunday in the afternoon, the congregation retired to the banks of the Bigelow river, where I spoke to them upon baptism and its design, then beneath its swelling flood, I buried an intelligent believer in the one Lord, the one faith, the one baptism. The Lord bless this people for their liberality and christian sympathy. Amen.

My health is good. My spirits bright. My confidence in the near coming of Jesus to bring about the promised restitution, was never stronger. My prospects were never brighter for the kingdom of God. And had I an angel's tongue, I could not describe my love for the truth, as revealed unto us in the Living Oracles. And I am willing to become a fool in the eye of the world for the sake of the truth.

Dear brother, I feel that if I had ten thousand tongues, I could not praise the Lord enough for what the truth has done for me. Not that I have done anything for the truth, no, no! But that it has done everything for me. Brethren and sisters, a few more gales from the throne of the Eternal to fill our sails, and gently will we be borne over life's rugged waves, into the harbor of eternal repose.—Amen and amen.

N. Augusta, C. W., Oct. 7, 1859.

"Short and to the Point."

Let thy words be few, said one very wise man. I think the advice too good to be forgotten.

When I hear a man tell a long story about nothing, I wish he would be "short and to the point."

When I hear a person make a very long prayer, when he hasn't faith enough to get an answer to a short one, I think he had better be "short and to the point."

When I see a man in a social meeting who has but little to say, and yet who stands talking and "hemming" for a long while when others are waiting for an opportunity to say a word, I think he had better have found out what he wanted to say before he commenced, and then he might have been "short and to the point."

When I see a congregation half asleep, and a preacher patiently persevering in an endeavor to tell nearly all that he knows at that one time, as if he never would have another opportunity to preach, I think that though he might display less knowledge, he would evince more wisdom if he would be "short and to the point."

When I see a writer endeavoring to flood a small newspaper with long, dry, prosy, unreadable articles, that place the reader in a position somewhat like that of the cow which drank a whole barrel of water for the sake of one little potato that lay in the bottom, I think his writings would be more likely to be read and remembered, if he would be "short and to the point."

And now I'll stop, lest some of your readers should know me to be a fool by the multitude of my words, and wish I had been "short and to the point." H. L. H.

Selections.

The Bible.

The following calculation of the number of books, chapters, verses, words, letters, etc., contained in the Old and New Testament, may be worth reading and preserving by many of the numerous readers of your paper:

The Old Testament contains 39 books, 929 chapters, 23,145 verses, 592,439 words, 2,728,100 letters. The middle book is Proverbs. The middle chapter is the 29th chapter of Job. The middle verse is 2d Chronicles, 18th chapter and 30th verse. The least verse is 1st Chronicles, 1st chapter and 1st verse.

The chapters in the Old Testament will average about 23 7-9 to a book; the verses 25 to a chapter, the words 25 3-5 to a verse; and the letters 4 3-5 to a word.

The New Testament contains 27 books, 260 chapters, 7,957 verses, 181,253 words, 838,380 letters. The middle book is 2d Thessalonians. The middle chapters are the 13th and 14th chapters of Romans. The middle verse is Acts, 7th chapter and 7th verse. The least verse is John 11th chapter and 35th verse.

The chapters in the New Testament will average about 9 2-3 to a book; the verses 30 3-5 to a chapter; the words 22 3-4 to a verse; and the letters 4 2-3 to a word.

The entire Bible contains 66 books, 1,189 chapters, 31,102 verses, 773,692 words, 3,566,480 letters. The middle books are Micah and Nahum. The middle chapter and least chapter in the Bible is the 117th Psalm. The middle verses are the 103d Psalm and 2d and 3d verses.

The word and occurs in the Bible 46,227 times, viz.: in the Old Testament 35,543, and in the New Testament 10,634.

The word Jehovah occurs 6,855 times.

The word Jesus occurs in the Epistle of Paul 224 times.

The word Christ occurs in the same Epistles 420 times.

The word Christ occurs in the 1st chapter of 1st Corinthians 17 times; the chapter contains 31 verses; and in the 1st chapter of Philippians 18 times, the chapter contains 30 verses.

In the 21st verse of the 7th chapter of Ezra are all the letters of the alphabet, I and J being considered as one.

The 19th chapter of the 2d of Kings and the 37th chapter of Isaiah are alike.

The book of Esther has 10 chapters, but neither of the words Lord or God are in it.

David uses the pronoun I 142 times in the 119th Psalm, and Paul uses it 34 times in the 9th chapter of 1st Corinthians, 42 times in the 11th chapter of 2d Corinthians, and 43 times in the 12th chapter, which contains only 21 verses, and 33 times in the 7th chapter of Romans, 6 times in the 15th verse of but 23 words.

The Apocrypha (not inspired, but sometimes bound between the Old and New Testament,) contains 173 chapters, 6,081 verses, and 152,185 words.

Cardinal Hugo, about 1240, divided the Bible into chapters as they now stand in our translation.

Mordecai Nathan, a Jewish Rabbi, about 1445 divided the chapters of the Old Testament into verses, but Athias, a Jew of Amsterdam, in 1651 divided the chapters of the Old Testament into verses as they now are, and about the same time Robert Stevens, a French printer, divided the chapters of the New Testament into verses as they now are.

The art of printing was invented by J. Faust, a goldsmith of Mentz, in 1441, and the first book ever printed was the Vulgate edition of the Bible, and soon after the German Bible of Newremburg was printed. Our present English version of the Bible was first published in 1613.

The first printing press in North America was set up at Cambridge, Mass., in 1639, and among the first books printed was an Indian version of the Bible translated by Elliot.

There is a Bible in the Library of the University of Gottcogen, written on 5,746 palm leaves.

The Scriptures have been translated into more than one hundred and fifty languages and dialects, and some fifty millions of these copies of God's word have been circulated, and yet about one-half of the human family are entirely ignorant of the true God and have never heard of the Savior.—Jour. and Mess.

Duty.

How often hast thou found thyself at the entrance into a duty becalmed, as a ship which at first setting sail hath hardly wind to swell its sails, while under the shore and shadow of the trees, but meets a fresh gale of wind when got into the open sea? Yea, didst thou never launch out to duty as the apostles to sea—with the wind in thy face, as if the Spirit of God, instead of helping thee on, meant to drive thee back, and yet hast found Christ walking to thee before the duty was done, and a prosperous voyage made of it at last? Abraham saw not the ram which God had provided for his sacrifice till he was in the mount. In the mount of prayer God is seen, even when the christian does often go up the hill toward duty with a heavy heart, because he can as yet have no sight of him. Turn not, therefore, back, but go on with courage—he may be nearer than thou thinkest. "In that same hour," saith Christ, "it shall be given unto you." (Matt. 10: 19.)—Gurnal.

[illegible] True Doctrine.

Our praying, singing, and Bible reading will not help us heavenward, unless we are just between man and man. The christian profession is nothing without the christian life. Our religion, in order to change us radically, must descend into all commonest duties. It belongs as much to the shop as to the family, and as much to the family as to the sanctuary. No man can be a christian who is not faithful in his common daily-life pursuits. The judge must administer justice from equity, and not from favor or the lure of bribes. The physician must regard the life and health of his patient above all other considerations. The merchant must deal justly, and the mechanic execute his work in all things faithfully. It will not answer to disregard these things. My brother, do not hope to reach heaven by the old way. You must walk in another and narrower road. Let us suppose you are a workman. Now, what is christianity in the workshop? You cannot leave it behind you, go where you will; for it is no loosely fitting garment, but an element of life. Yes, you must take it with you into the workshop. Not as the Bible in your hand, nor as hymns to make the air melodious, nor as pious talk with fellow workmen. No, no; workshop christianity consists in a religious fidelity to your employer and his customers. If you neglect or slight the work you are paid to perform, you commit sin—you are irreligious, and your pious acts will go for nothing.—Channing.

Matins.

BY MRS. H. B. STOWE.

Still, still with Thee, when purple morning breaketh,
When the bird waketh and the shadows flee;
Fairer than the morning, lovelier than the daylight,
Dawns the sweet consciousness, I am with Thee!

Alone with Thee, amid the mystic shadows,
The solemn hush of nature newly born,
Alone with Thee, in breathless adoration,
In the calm dew and freshness of the morn.

As in the dawning, o'er the waveless ocean,
The image of the morning star doth rest,
So in this stillness Thou beholdest only
Thine image in the waters of my breast.

When sinks the soul, subdued by toil to slumber,
Its closing eye looks up to Thee in prayer;
Sweet the repose beneath thy wings o'ershading,
But sweeter still to wake and find Thee there.

So shall it be at last in that bright morning
When the soul waketh and life's shadows flee;
O in that hour, fairer than daylight dawning,
Shall rise the glorious thought, I am with Thee!

Tears.

There is a sacredness in tears. They are not the mark of weakness, but of power. They are messages of overwhelming grief, of deep contrition, of unspeakable love. Oh, speak not harshly of the stricken one weeping in silence! Break not the solemnity by rude laughter or intrusive footsteps. Despise not woman's tears; they are what make her an angel. Scoff not if the stern heart of manhood is sometimes melted into sympathetic tears; they are what help to elevate him above the brute. I love to see tears of affection. They are painful tokens, but still most holy. There is pleasure in tears, and an awful pleasure. If there were none on earth to shed tears for me, I should be loath to live: and if no one might weep over my grave, I could never die in peace.—Dr. Johnson.

Reading for Youth.

The Secret.

A STORY FOR THE BOYS.

"Here, boys, are twenty shillings for each of you," said Mr. Mitchell to his twin sons, Clarence and Edward, on a bright winter morning, as they sat at breakfast. He handed them each a gold piece. "I heard that you were at the head of your classes in French and Latin, and this is to express my satisfaction at your progress. You are at liberty of course, to expend it as you please; but there is an art in spending money. It may be done selfishly or disinterestedly—it may be productive of happiness or of bitter memories; and though the sum be small how to spend it is worth learning."

"Tell us something about it, father," said Clarence, after they had both thanked him cordially, "which way do you think best."

"I would rather, my son, that you should reflect on the subject, and draw your own conclusions. Watch for an opportunity to do with it what your heart approves. The love of money, you know, is the root of all evil, but money may be the source of good. Use it as you think best."

The boys looked very thoughtful. They wished he would only say what he thought best. Then they appealed to their mother, but she approved of their father's decision, to throw the responsibility on themselves, and bring their own judgment into exercise.

Some days afterward, as the two boys were in their father's library, he said to them, "You have not told me how you spent your gold pieces."

Edward drew his from his pocket—"There it is, father. I have not spent it yet."

"And yours, Clarence?"

"It is all gone, father."

"Indeed! And what have you to show for it?"

"Nothing, sir."

Clarence bent his head modestly, but without shame; and there was a manliness in his tone which convinced his father that all was right.

"Nothing! Well, that may be, but I will venture to say my boy has not made an unprofitable investment."

"I hope not, sir."

"If he had done wrong with it, he would not be my Clarence," said the mother tenderly.

Clarence looked at her with an expression of deep feeling; then went to her silently, and put his arms around her neck, and laid his head upon her shoulder. When he raised it again, a tear lay upon her robe.

"My darling boy"—she embraced him [illegible]—"this secret is yours. You have a right to it, and I am sure it is an honorable one."

"Thank you, mother," he whispered in her ear, "Does father think so? Is he satisfied?"

His mother repeated the question.

"To be sure, my son, I am satisfied. Come here," and he threw his arms around him, and laid his head upon his bosom—"father will trust where he has never had cause to distrust."

Clarence could only once more whisper his thanks. It was tenderness, not grief, that caused his tears. He was a type of all that is noble and generous in boyhood. Had he been otherwise—had he expended his gift in folly, or in vice—no reproaches that could have been uttered would have affected him, or called him to bitter repentance, like the confidence that was reposed in him, and the tenderness that had just been manifested. To prove himself worthy of that love and confidence would henceforth be his highest earthly ambition. Oh that all parents would but understand this! and appealing to the higher nature, the nobler attributes of their children, call them into exercise.

Edward wished from his heart that his brother would reveal to him what he had done; but there was a code of honor in that household, as there should be in every home, and it was understood by all its members. Clarence had shown by his silence that he did not wish to be questioned. Yet no one doubted for a moment that he had made a right use of his money.

And now, although Clarence supposes his secret to be safe from all but the eye of his Father in Heaven, we who have followed him unseen, and watched him through all, will relate it in confidence to our readers.

The day on which he received this gift was bright, clear and frosty. It was December, and though the sun shone cloudlessly in the blue heavens, it had no power on the icicles which fringed the iron railings, or fell from the trees in showers of brilliants, splintered and shivered by the wind. The air was beautiful and exhilarating to the well clad; but to the poor unprotected child of want, it came too keenly. Clarence hurried on with his skates flung over his shoulder, to join a skating party. Eddie was to join them later. His hands were thrust into his coat pockets, and he pressed on against the wind, when he felt his arm seized from behind.

"Quick! quick! come quickly!" said a little barefooted and bareheaded boy, seeming half frantic with grief and terror. "I believe mother is dying! Do come quick!"

Clarence obeyed impulsively, while the child, clinging to his coat dragged him on.

The home, if such it could be called, was not far off, and the scene which presented itself on his entrance was awful indeed. A woman surrounded by three or four children, screaming in terror, was lying upon her miserable bed, in frightful convulsions. The foam was on her white lips; her clenched hands seemed fixed in an immovable clasp, and her aspect was altogether terrible.

"I will go for a doctor," said Clarence, and remembering that he had seen a physician's house on the way, he ran with all his speed to summon him.

The doctor followed him immediately. While he was administering to the poor sufferer, Clarence had time to view the scene around him. What misery was there! never had he seen or conceived anything of the kind before. The woman had toiled until over exertion and starvation had brought her to her present state. The children were thin and meagre, only half clad, and no fire upon the hearth. When they saw his friendly, earnest face—for children well understand a look of sympathy—they gathered around him.

"Are you hungry?" he asked in a low tone.

"Yes, dreadful hungry."

"And cold too," he said.

And with a heart bleeding at the sight of such destitution and misery, he hurried to a restaurant near by. His gold piece was now in requisition. Thank God for his possession.

Hot rolls and hot coffee in abundance soon brought the little famished creatures to a corner of the hovel, where they satisfied their hunger, and hushed their cries.

(To be concluded.)

Facts for the Young.

Count Rumford, by boring a cannon within water, so heated it by the friction, that he made it boil, and actually boiled a piece of beef in it.

The water in the Red Sea appears to be twenty-two feet higher than the Mediterranean; and the Gulf of Mexico is thirty-eight feet higher than the Pacific.

Most mountains present their precipitous faces to the sea, and their slopes to the land.

Insects are found in slate, and flies and ants in amber.

The mountain of Segar, in Arabia, produces frankincense; those of Lefra, the balm of Mecca, from the Amyris opobalsamum, which in early ages sold for its weight in gold.

THE CRISIS.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION,

Payable in Advance.

For a single copy one year............$2.00
For a single copy 6 months..............1.00
For a single copy 3 months..............[illegible]
Five copies to one address for 6 months...4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months....8.00
Twenty copies to one address, 6 months..15.00
Thirty copies to one address, 6 months.2[illegible]

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the paper within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability, when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send as much in addition to their subscriptions as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. Miles Grant, Boston, Mass.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts, and 26 cents to any other part of the United States.

[illegible] age on their papers, 26 cents a year, in addition to the above [illegible] [illegible] The same in all the Provinces

The World's Crisis.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 223. | BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 21, 1859. | VOL. X. NO. 1[illegible]

The World's Crisis
IS PUBLISHED
EVERY WEDNESDAY MORNING
AT
No. 107 Hanover Street, Boston.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
HENRY V. DAVIS, JOHN COUCH, | MILES GRANT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

MILES GRANT, Editor.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially, the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and the final destruction of the wicked.

For terms, see fourth page.

Original Contributions.

For the Crisis.

DEAR CHRISTIAN BROTHER:—In accordance with the desire I have before expressed of becoming a contributor to the columns of our beloved paper, I present for your acceptance the following lines, suggested by the conversion of an old man from infidelity and sin to receive Christ as his Savior, whose gift is everlasting life. Said he, I have loved the world and the things in it; but was always unsatisfied, and with its pleasures I have tasted its deep bitterness, and my heart bears the scars of its rough usage. I look back over all my life with regret, and with the poet I say—

Oh, how I regret that I gave not to Heaven
The years which to folly and sin have been given!

Retrospection.

I.

How much of change my spirit has passed through
In life's brief hour, too short to bear such sadness;
I've had my hopes and disappointments too,
With here and there a little gleam of gladness.
My life's bright morn was vainly past
In chase of things too fair to last.

II.

Too well I've loved the world and things therein;
That which I most have trusted proves unsound;
My loves and hopes are as they 'd never been,
Were't not that on my heart I bear their wound.
My dreams of life were false and fair,
I woke—they vanished into air

III.

Trusting the world, its friendship I have rued,
And many things I've loved, alas! in vain,
And tears of bitterness my cheek bedewed,
Wrung from mine eyes by the heart's deep sense of pain.
More than one friend has made me feel
A wound, which time could scarcely heal.

IV.

Sometimes, at eve, how weary do we feel
With all the strife, thoughts, labors of the day;
There's always something which would make us kneel
In deep repentance, God's forgiveness pray.
The evening of my life begets
O'er all the past such sad regrets.

V.

Say, is there one who in his early life
Has shunned sin's fairer face and flattering way,
Who's kept his heart, through sunshine, storm and strife,
Unspotted to the evening of his day?
Alas! we all through folly run,
And do what we would wish undone.

MARY E. WEST.

For the Crisis.

How Christian got into Doubting Castle.

Although almost every white Christian has heard of the Pilgrim's Progress, there are doubtless many who have never read the sublime imagery of that matchless dream. In view of this, I will here give an off-hand sketch of the condition of the Pilgrim and his companion Hopeful, prior to their being caught upon the ground of giant Despair.

First stage. Graceless, afterwards Christian, alarmed at what the "Book" says, prepares to leave the "City of Destruction," heedless of the persuasions of wife or acquaintance; and being instructed by "Evangelist," he makes his way for the "wicket-gate," which he reaches, after floundering in the "Slough of Despond." This "wicket-gate" is the entrance to the narrow path which leads to Mount Zion.

Second stage. The gate-keeper, "Good-will," after questioning him as to who he was, whence he came and whither bound, and being satisfied with the reply, admits Christian. To Christian's demand how he would get rid of his heavy burden, "Good-will" bids him be content, that at a proper time and place it would be removed. He then pointed out the house of the "Interpreter," whom he advised the Pilgrim to consult, as he would show him most excellent things. The Interpreter kindly received him and showed him marvelous things, which he explained to the admiration and instruction of the Pilgrim. Then pointing out the way he wished Christian good speed.

Third stage. The highway which now lay before the Pilgrim was bounded on either side with a wall, called "Salvation," up which burdened Christian ran, but not without great difficulty, because of the load on his back. However, deliverance was near— [illegible] and rolled into a sepulchre which yawned to receive it. Being released from his load, Pilgrim with glad and thankful heart pursued his journey, passing on his way, asleep and in fetters, "Simple," "Sloth" and "Presumption," whom he was compelled to leave to their fate, after vainly urging them to bestir themselves, and offering his assistance to unbind them. He also met with "Formalist and Hypocrisy," who journeyed with him till they came to the hill "Difficulty," when they took a roundabout way and left Christian to mount the steep alone. Before he reached the top, Pilgrim had to go on hands and knees,—prayer and humility being necessary in time of trial; but the difficulty was overcome, and he sat down to rest in an "Arbor made by the Lord of the hill for the refreshment of weary travelers." Here, fatigued, he fell asleep, and his "Roll of evidence" fell from his hand. He was awakened suddenly by a warning voice, and starting up he hastened on without a consciousness of his loss. He soon met with "Mistrust" and "Timorous," who told him that there were lions in the way which would tear him to pieces if he proceeded,—that they, being discouraged by the danger which beset them at every step, were going back again. Christian was troubled. If he returned he would certainly be destroyed; but if he could get to the Celestial City he would be safe, and there was a chance. He now sought instruction and comfort from his Roll, which he usually carried in his bosom, but found it was gone. He hastily retraced his steps to the "Arbor," where he found it, and again resumed his journey with renewed energy; and at length caught sight of castle "Beautiful," whose stately magnificence was heightened by the golden glories of the setting sun. Desirous of reaching a place of shelter before night, he pressed on, but was abruptly stopped by the appearance of the two lions, which had frightened Mistrust and Timorous, standing growling in the way. He was close to the Porter's lodge, and the Porter seeing the fear and indecision of Christian, hollooed to him and bade him keep the middle of the path, and come on boldly, as the lions were chained. Thus assured, Christian proceeded; and that night slept in peace and security in the palace which is called Beautiful.

Stage Fourth. This was a terrible stage with Pilgrim. Upon entering the valley of Humiliation, he was met and stopped by the fiend Apollyon, who, after having tried in vain to corrupt Christian, made a deadly attack upon him, and had well nigh made an end of the poor fellow, had not Pilgrim, as he lay disarmed on the ground, luckily regained his sword, and thrusting upward, pierced the body of his foe, and compelled him to spread his dragon wings and fly away. Rising almost breathless from the combat, Christian returned thanks for his deliverance; and a hand came to him with the leaves of the tree of life, which, on being applied to his wounds, immediately healed them. He then partook of the provisions given him when leaving the beautiful castle, and, fully recovered, pursued, with watchful eye and drawn sword, his perilous way, which led from the Vale of Humiliation into the dark and dreary "Valley of the Shadow of Death." Here the dangers thickened, and the mouth of the pit belched forth flame, with sparks and hideous noises, and other fearful things, against which his sword was of no avail. He therefore sheathed it and drew another weapon, called "All-prayer," which held in check the evils which came against him. Thus he passed through the valley and by the bloody den of Pope and Pagan.

Stage Fifth. This part of the journey was through a wilderness, which, however, was cheered by the society and conversation of Faithful, whom he overtook on the way.

Stage Sixth. Here the pilgrims were joined by Evangelist, who came up with them. They were delighted to have his company, and journeyed on happily together, till they reached the town "Vanity," which stood adjacent to the wilderness, through which, per force, they were obliged to pass. It happened to be the Fair-day, and much people were gathered there. The strange apparel of the pilgrims soon attracted notice, and they were questioned by the people about their country and business, who offered their wares for sale and urged the travelers to buy. Their strange dress and language, and above all, their contempt of the trinkets and gewgaws, exasperated the people, and raised a tumult. The authorities, upon demanding the occasion of the disturbance, were informed that the strangers were the cause, being spies, conspirators and enemies to their King. Some, however, took their part and said they were quiet, inoffensive men; but these were few, and soon the pilgrims found themselves in cages, amid their indignities and insults, [illegible] of Christian and [illegible] of many. The prisoners were arraigned before an implacable bar, which doomed Faithful to death and Christian to imprisonment. The cruel sentence was carried out upon the dauntless Faithful, and after a while Christian made his escape.

Stage Seventh. We have now come to that part of the history which relates how the pilgrims were seized upon by the gouty giant and lodged in "Doubting Castle." When Christian escaped from prison he was joined by one Hopeful, who became enamored of the pilgrim and resolved to attach himself to Christian. "Thus one died to bear testimony to the truth, and another rises out of his ashes to be a companion with Christian in his pilgrimage." The first one they met was one "By-Ends" of "Fair-Speech," who was allied to most of the aristocracy of the town and neighborhood among the most distinguished of whom were lords Turnabout, Timeserver, and Smooth-speech, the lord of the manor; Mr. Smooth-man, Mr. Face-both-ways, Mr. Anything-so-as-it-pays, and others too numerous to mention. This Mr. By-Ends was very importunate to accompany the pilgrims; this Christian objected to, unless he gave up his old principle and friends, which he refused, and they parted company. Passing on this way the pilgrims crossed a very narrow plain called Ease, and thence by a hill called Lucre, in which was a silver mine, to which their attention was called by a gentleman, Demas by name, who lived hard by, and assured them that great treasure might be dug at little labor, by which they might provide themselves with many comforts. Hopeful would have gone to see about it, had not Christian held him back, and pointed to an old monument which they shortly came to, on which was written—"Remember Lot's wife." This warned them of the danger of turning back with a covetous eye, when they were flying away from Sodom for safety. The way of the pilgrims now lay by the side of a beautiful river, called the "River of the water of Life." Here Christian and his companion walked with delight, and drank of the limpid waters which cheered and revived them greatly. Fruit trees grew on the banks thereof, of which they eat, and then lay down to sleep in safety in a verdant meadow by the river side. Thus did they journey and repose for a few days and nights, when their road diverged from the stream, and became rough and stony, which hurt their feet, tender by reason of their travels. They had enjoyed a little rest and comfort, and now that they had to face the trials again they became discouraged, and wished for a less painful road. A temptation soon offered itself. A little further on, they discovered on the left side a pleasant looking meadow, and a very convenient stile to get over. On looking over the fence they discovered a smooth, beaten path running, seemingly, parallel to the road, and Christian proposed that they should take it. "But," said Hopeful, "how if this path should lead us out of the way?" "That is not very likely," said Christian. "Look, does it not go along by the way-side?" So Hopeful, being persuaded, followed Christian over the stile, and now trod forbidden ground. Understand the moral: When a christian deviates from the path of duty to suit his ease and comfort, he takes the first step to clouds and thick darkness. They were not alone on this by-path; for before them was a smart, self-assured looking fellow, called "Vain Confidence." Him they called after, and inquired whither the way led. "To the Celestial City," said he, confidently; when Christian said exultingly, "Did I not tell you so? By this you may see that I am right." On goes Vain Confidence, and on went they, but the night came apace, and it became so dark that at last they lost sight of their impudent leader. Presently they heard a crash and a groan. He had fallen into a deep pit, and the affrighted pilgrims drew back bewildered and appalled. Then came the storm, the lightning, thunder and rain, and they stood wet and shivering, and finally turned to go back. This by reason of the waters was difficult and dangerous; and they were well nigh drowned several times; yet with all their endeavors they could not reach the stile that night. At last they found and crept under a little shelter, there to await the dawn of day; but being very weary, they became drowsy and at last fell asleep. From their slumbers they were aroused by a terrible voice which demanded what they did on his grounds. They offered little excuse, and with fear and trembling were driven before this monster, giant Despair, and soon found themselves in the deep, dark dungeons of Doubting Castle!

We now see what brought the pilgrims into the giant's power.

1st. Love of ease and luxury, which the christian may not seek at the expense of his stern duty.

2d. Taking counsel from Vain Confidence [illegible] in himself or others, but oftener in himself, when he became too great to stoop to humility.

3d. When finding himself in the dark, instead of prayer and watchfulness, he gives way to sleep, and is taken captive.

Had Christian kept looking at his Roll, which was so plainly written that any might understand, he would there have seen that no circumstance could warrant a deviation from the narrow way, be it never so steep or thorny. When the first doubt prompted an inquiry, he should never have appealed to Vain Confidence, but gone to the Word. He dare not make the foolish excuse that he did not know what it did say. He knew too well his error, not begotten by the ambiguous teaching of a cabalistic book; but by love of luxury, and presumption.

My dear readers, if ever your mind should be distracted with doubts, examine yourselves if you have not slightly deviated from the narrow path, and instead of seeking assistance from your own or others' wisdom, betake yourselves to prayer, rely on the promises of God, and soon every doubt shall be removed, and light and happiness will shine upon your path.

I have often had my doubts, but they arose from my own unworthiness. And since my eyes have been opened to the doctrines of the sleep of the dead, the entire man being dead, the total destruction of the wicked, and the reign of Christ upon the earth, the Bible has never been so clear, so consistent, so beautiful and sublime in its teachings, and it speaks of little progress in the Bible student, to say, after years of research and teaching, that he does not know what it says. Its promises are yea and amen, and with the key of promise I am persuaded I could unlock every dungeon in Doubting Castle.

JNO. F. COTTON.

Selected for the Crisis.

Never Say Fail.

Keep pushing—'tis wiser
Than sitting aside,
And dreaming and sighing,
And waiting the tide
In life's earnest battle,
They only prevail
Who daily march onward,
And never say fail.

With an eye ever open,
A tongue that 's not dumb,
And a heart that will never
To sorrow succumb,
You'll battle and conquer,
Though thousands assail,
How strong and how mighty
Who never say fail!

The spirit of angels
Is active I know,
As higher and higher
In glory they go,
Methinks on bright pinions
From heaven they sail,
To cheer and encourage,
Who never say fail!

* * * * * *

In life's rosy morning,
In manhood's fair pride,
Let this be the motto
Your footsteps to guide;
In storm and in sunshine,
Whatever assail,
We'll onward and conquer,
And never say fail!

E. P. ROBINSON.

"The Union Movement:"

A MEETING OF THE LAY-MEMBERS OF THE VARIOUS CHURCHES OF THE TOWN OF UNITY ON DEC. 3, 1858.

CHAPTER X.

The following is a report of the meeting of Preachers in the town of Unity, to deliberate on the subject of Christian Union. There were present a Baptist, a Methodist, a Presbyterian, an Episcopalian, a Lutheran, and a Christian—all preachers. Their ministerial support was suspended on the first day of January, 1858, by their respective congregations, until they shall agree upon the Scriptural basis of Christian Union. Brother Episcopalian being called to the chair, and Mr. Chronicle requested to report the proceedings, they advanced as follows:

Meth. This has been a sad year to me in a pecuniary sense. You know that Methodist preachers get but a scanty support, at best; but this year I have received nothing. Yet I trust it has been the most profitable year of my life. I confess that when my brethren suspended my support, I was a little warm, and felt some of the spirit of the old Adam remaining in me. But being thrown out of employment, and that by a most singular and unprecedented procedure, I determined to review the whole premises; not to uphold a party, especially one that had refused to support me, but to find the truth and the true basis of Christian Union. This, I am well satisfied, I have found. I can say now, with all my heart, in the language of Mr. Wesley, that I would to God that all party names, and unscriptural phrases and forms, which have divided the Christian world, were forgotten; and that we might all agree to sit down together as humble, loving disciples, at the feet of our common master, to hear his Word, to imbibe his spirit, and to transcribe his life in our own." Wesley's Notes, p. 5.

Bap. The remark made by the brother I adopt, with all my heart. I have never spent so profitable a year in my life. I have heretofore been content to study and defend Baptist views; but being cut loose by the action of my brethren, from their employment, and, feeling under no obligations to support them or their views, since they have refused to support me, I have tried to place the Lord before me, and solemnly to consider his will—his mind. And I have become well satisfied that we can never have his approbation, and keep up our former partisan peculiarities. Beside, I confess that I have found something so far above all these peculiarities, that I no longer feel any interest in them.

Pres. I presume, brethren, that no one among us felt more hostility to the movement of the private members of our churches, in withdrawing our support, than myself. I thought, too, that I would yield to no such dictation; but having the whole year for meditation, I have given the religious world a rigid examination, and have come solemnly to the determination never again to maintain sectarian partyism. Hence I accord with the remarks of the brethren just made. I am aware of the pride there is in our ministry, of a little learning, and the conceit that our preachers never change, but stick inflexibly to the traditions of the elders. But I have fully satisfied myself that all this feeling is of the flesh, and am determined no longer to adhere to it.

Lu. My views and feelings have been so fully expressed by those who have spoken, that I need say nothing more than that I fully accord with every sentence, especially the quotation from Mr. Wesley.

Ep. I am free to admit that I am in the same mind, and my exercises have been much the same as other brethren have mentioned in reference to themselves. But still I am not clear as to what is to be done. Can we all agree? Is it possible for us to unite? I can not sacrifice my conscience.

Chris. If we unite, it must be without any compromise of conscience or principle. No man should be required to violate his conscience, nor to yield any principle. But I hold that we can unite without this. The reason that we are not now united is, that we have elevated opinions, and party peculiarities, to a prominence to which they are not entitled, thus making them bars of fellowship, and things that should be made prominent, or rather that are prominent in the kingdom of God, are overlooked. Now, this state of things must cease, and that which can not intercept between a man and his God, must not be made a bar of fellowship.

Bap. There are certain cardinal or catholic principles that are vital, but happily for us, we are agreed upon these; being agreed upon these, we should not disagree and disfellowship each other about things that are not vital. In one single sentence, we must not spend our time about unimportant matters, and thus neglect the great vital matters of the kingdom of God.

Lu. I like that as a general remark, but it is not personal enough, or rather it is not practical enough for our situation. We have certain difficulties to surmount, and I am anxious to have them named out, and see if we can apply our philosophy to them. For instance, we are here under different religious names—Methodist, Baptist, Presbyterian, Episcopalian, Lutheran, and Christian. Now, what is to be done about these names? We can not be called by them all.

Chris. Brethren, I think this can be settled without any difficulty. Are you all willing to be called Baptists?

Pres. I, for one, am not, for the word Baptist means baptizer—the administrator of baptism—and I see no propriety in calling us all, men and women, baptizers. Beside, I am informed, the Bible Union is about to give us a version of the Bible, in which the word Baptist will be translated immerser. I see no use in calling all the members of the church immersers.

Chris. Shall we all, then, be called Presbyterians?

Bap. I am unwilling to be called Presbyterian. A presbytery is an assemblage of elders. I see no sense in calling all the members of the church, both male and female, seigniors. Beside, I understand the eldership to be an office in the church. Now, it borders on the ridiculous, to name the Church of God after an office in the church.

Pres. It would amount to what is [illegible] to call them Baptists; because Baptist, or baptizer, or, what is more ridiculous, immerser, is an office, as much a presbyter, and frequently found in the same person. Therefore, in calling yourself Baptist, you take for your religious designation the name of an office in the church.

Chris. Are you, then, willing to all be called Methodists?

Ep. I am not willing to be called by any such inappropriate religious designation. This name came from a very rigid and methodical class of physicians, who, from their strict method of living, were styled Methodists. This name was applied to the followers of Mr. Wesley, out of derision first, and I can not but look upon it as exceedingly ridiculous to use it as a religious name. It can be applied to evil, as well as good, and is in the New Testament. The Greek methodus, translated "wiles," in one of Paul's epistles, means "the methods of the devil." A name that can be applied to evil as well as good, is certainly not fit for a religious designation.

Meth. I think the name Episcopalian equally inappropriate. I think it ridiculous to use a name derived from a peculiar form of church government, as the name of a church itself. Episcopalian is really no church name, but simply significant of a certain form of church government. I am not willing to name the children of God after a peculiar form of church government.

Chris. Are you all willing to be called Lutherans?

Bap. I am not, for I think Paul has virtually forbidden that we should be called after any man. He would not allow the Corinthians to say, they were of Paul, but asked them the questions "Was Paul crucified for you? or were you baptized in the name of Paul?" thus implying that in order to be of Paul, or a Paulite, they should have been baptized in his name.

Lu. Then, brother B., in order to be a Baptist, you should have been baptized in the name of John the Baptist.

Chris. Brethren, I think you must see that it is utterly useless to dispute about these names. You never can unite or agree upon any one of them. No one of them is held with any regard by any except the party adopting it. No one out of the Methodist church takes it any offense to tell him that he is not a Methodist. No one out of the Baptist church takes it as an offense to tell him that he is not a Baptist, nor is it any very serious offense to one in the Baptist Church, to tell him that he is no Baptist. But you tell any one, in any church, that he is not a Christian! here is a direct insult, not to be endured. Why? Because if a man is not a Christian, he will be lost; he is not in the favor of God. But it has no such an effect to tell him that he is not a Baptist, for the understanding is, that a man may be a Christian and not be a Baptist. It has no such effect to tell a man that he is not a Methodist, a Presbyterian, a Lutheran, or an Episcopalian, for it is admitted on all hands, that a man can be a Christian and not be any of them. Neither of these is identical with the name Christian. It contains all the good in all of them, and vastly more. When we come to the gates of death, the question will be, are we Christians? If we are, these other names will dwindle into nothingness—into perfect nonentity.

Seeing, then, that you are all willing to be called Christians, and that you can not agree upon any of your former names, and seeing that the great matter in death and in the last judgment will be to be a Christian, why contend about these other names any longer? Why not solemnly covenant together, to be Christians, Disciples of Christ, children of God, followers of Christ, and be called such, as the first Christians were? No man on this earth makes any sacrifice of anything good or divine, in doing this; nor does he give up anything that can be of any service to him in this world or the world to come. In this way we shall honor the Lord's name, exalt it above every name, even above all the hierarchies in the eternal state, and under his great and glorious name we shall be bound together in an eternal and an immutable covenant, as his people. It shall be our highest aim and greatest ambition to follow him. Shall we all commit ourselves to him and to his name?

Bap. I am satisfied, I confess, about the names. If other matters can be adjusted, I see no reason why we may not unite.

Pres., Meth., Ep., and Lu. We agree to the same.

Adjourned by prayer, to this night one week, when we shall continue the subject.

"The Wages of Sin is Death."

The administration which [illegible] contains objects of which God in his economy has given us no imperative [illegible] haps man may not be disposed to yield implicit obedience to all their inherent considerations; yet they are nothing less imperative, no less destined to inflict upon the violator of these laws, the full and complete penalty which is necessary for their punishment. An over ruling power [illegible] order and process of all created things, constructed a being, who must of necessity depend upon the power and omnipotence of his Creator, for natural existence. He has also, as an infinite being, adapted these laws to his subject's powers and capacity; and if in direct contradistinction to the injunction attached thereunto, (obedience and subjection to this infinite will,) he breaks, or violates, these commands, according to the nature of his creation he must be held amenable to God for his disobedience.

If man is a finite being, it is contrary to all true logic to suppose that he is governed by aught else than finite laws; and if finite laws actually govern his state of being, it is impossible for him to commit an infinite evil. If immortality is the natural and inherent principle of man's nature, perhaps that nature may be coexistent with eternal evil. If, on the contrary, he is of a corruptible nature, death may terminate his career as a penalty for disobedience. It does not matter whether these considerations are worth a straw or not in the estimation of those votaries of universal salvation; but if there is a penalty for sin, I would ask, if death, as a penalty, destroys a physical body for disobeying nature's laws, may not spiritual death destroy a spiritual body for disobeying spiritual laws? If a finite being, yielding up his breath, departs from life cursing his Maker, what proof have we, that he may not enter the next world cursing still?

But as this is a Bible question, perhaps it would be as well to let God's word, with its imperishable and eternal truths, settle this matter. Since we admit the divinity of the Scriptures, their absolute authority and inestimable worth, we will weave them with the whole scheme of secular education.

Paul declares that the wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life, through Jesus Christ our Lord. It is unnecessary to quote more of this class of texts, as the requisition of life and death involves them all. Whether this death is moral, or spiritual, it is nevertheless death. Death as an article is the antithesis of life, I grant; therefore if life is conscious existence, death, in order to be its antithesis, must be extinction of consciousness. Paul wished to convey to his Roman brethren the fact that the penalty for disobeying God's law was death, or extinction of consciousness; and as if to engrave upon their hearts this truth, he exclaims, "But the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." If the wages of sin is conscious misery, it is not death. Dying is the act of entering into death; not dying, but death is the penalty of the law. Now demonstrate that when a man is dead, (not his body), that one of those elements that constitutes the man is alive anywhere, in heaven, hades, gehenna, tartarus, anywhere if you please, and I am prepared to state, that which God formed out of the dust of the ground was not the combination of man.

Immortality is God's great prerogative; therefore if man possesses this, as an inherent quality, he cannot be dispossessed of it; for if immortality is claimed the great prerogative of a being without beginning of days, or end of life; if man possesses this nature, he must necessarily be coexistent with his Creator; which would prove Platonic theology sound doctrine. Such a serpentine theory is brought to a direct issue with God's eternal word, when Paul exclaims, "The wages of sin is death."

This is not so much a question of dependence, as of actual truth. That the doctrine of the state of the dead is not necessarily involved in that of the destiny of the wicked, is plain to every comprehensive mind; for if that element, called the soul, exists independent of man's physical organization, [illegible] and the resurrection, is no proof whatever [illegible]. Again, if the soul is [illegible]

☞ Good nature is the very air of a good mind, the sign of a large and generous soul, and the peculiar soil in which virtue prospers.

☞ Surely they do not truly love Christ [illegible]

then whence do we obtain this divine nature? Do we inherit it from our first parents? Was it propagated by ordinary generation? If so, how many immortal souls did they have? Did they have but one each? If not, from whence did their numerous offspring derive theirs? If it is immaterial, indivisible, not transmissible, where do we get this priceless boon?—Through patient continuance in well-doing, we seek for glory, honor, immortality. The wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Through Jesus Christ! What do we infer from this? Simply, that if Christ had never suffered and died to make an atonement, we never could have procured this priceless boon. The highest aspiration of finite beings is, for something which they have not; which is a sufficient proof that they do not directly possess that for which they aspire.

Immortality implies eternal existence, perpetual consciousness, whether in God's presence, or among the damned; the position does not alter the meaning of the word. If this be true, when millions of ages have wheeled their flight around the throne of Jehovah, when the redeemed shall have weaved those lofty strains of immortality upon the golden wires of celestial harps, for countless ages; when oblivion's waves shall have swept over the dark abyss of centuries; those that have died in their sins have just begun to experience the pangs of eternal suffering. If this be true, had a lost soul in hell but the faintest hope of deliverance, though at the end of as many millions of ages as there are drops in the sea, hell would lose half its terrors. But now, alas! eternity, which might have been the measure of their joys, will be the only measure of their torments. There, there the fire never can be quenched. Could a lost soul shed but one tear once in ten thousand years, and do this till a sea as vast as all the seas on earth together, were filled with tears, all its sufferings, in that long period, would be but the beginning of eternity. But why dwell upon the sickening details which harrow my very soul, when Paul exclaims the wages of sin is death? Inconsistent as this theoretical and horrid doctrine may appear, it is not at all mysterious that a great proportion of mankind are firmly wedded to it. Force of education, rather than studious application to God's word, and strict adherence to the consistency of his character, has engraven it upon their hearts' tablets as with a hot iron, until it is part and parcel of their nature; while "thus saith the Lord," and the law, and the testimony, are ruthlessly set aside, as if they were sounding brass and tinkling cymbals; making no more impression upon them, than Archimedes' lever did on the world. The consistency of God's character might produce an argument that would overwhelm all other considerations, showing the blessed effects of his decrees, and the conclusive evidence, that all the wicked will be destroy. But let us thank God, that heathen philosophy is growing daily more and more attenuated, and that a part of the world, at least, is having more respect to his divine oracles.

The wages of sin is death. Where are those batteries of philosophy that can make a breach in this bulwark of defence erected by that man of God? This declaration as uttered by him upon whose heart was reflected the radiant light of Omnipotence, is worth more than all the research and scholastic lore of six thousand years. O! may we have respect to laws that emanate form that high and holy One, that when the sea shall give up its dead; when every island shall be removed out of their places, when those relics of lost ones that now are bleaching upon the red coral strand of old ocean's depths, and laved by wild sea-flowers, which bloom, and droop and die above them, at the mandate—Sea, give up thy dead! shall form anew to life, when his dead saints shall spring from the dust, and his living ones changed in a moment, that we together may be caught up far above the clouds, to meet him.

May we thank God, the Bible is emphatically the book of light, and knowledge, of freedom, and happiness. Thank him, that it contains those holy promises, that will guide us o'er the sands of the desert of life, and above all, thank him, that when the mountains shall fade away, and all of earth in one throe of dissolution, when planets whirl crashing through space, the Bible! that glorious Classic! will stand amid the wreck of matter, and the crush of worlds.

C. G. CARRE.

Blackstone, Mass.

For the Crisis.

Love.

There is no better code of morals to be found, than we have brought to view in the New Testament. Jesus says, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength," and "thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." On this element of love hang all the law and the prophets. Now if we do love the Lord with all our might, mind, and strength, we shall love our neighbor as ourself; because if we love God as devotedly and sincerely, we shall love all his creatures. Our propensity of [illegible] will be brought under that of love, [illegible] will be no devouring one another; but we shall all be brethren, one Father, one Lord and Master. The poet or the painter—though he be selfish and have no love in his heart—may see beauties in the landscape and mountains; but when he gets his heart imbued with love to God, he beholds new beauties in all God's works. And the more he meditates, and the more he loves, the more he can love; his heart expands; his moral powers increase, and he grows up into Christ. When people get this religion deep down in the heart, then they will begin to be men. And it will not make them gloomy and morose, but pleasant and joyful. Let us all try and get more of the element of love in our hearts—love to God and to our neighbor.

MARION A COTTON.

Cheshire, Mass.

For the Crisis.

"The Mother of Harlots."—Rev. 17.

The word "mother" involves the idea of descendants. But "the mother" in this case is an harlot. Therefore the daughters are legitimately "harlots," like the mother. They maintain the character and take the name of the mother. As it is written, "Babylon the Great; the mother of harlots and abominations of the earth."

Again. "The mother" here is the primal and principal church in the great apostasy, centering in Rome.—2 Thess. 2: 4–8; Rev. 17: 11. But other state churches, Greek, English, and others Protestant, are all the offshoots, developments or descendants from the Roman. Therefore they are "the harlots" who with "the mother" make up the foretold family in apostasy.

This is the inspired representation. This is (in the light of the gospel and history) the precise character and order of development, as to all the great ecclesiastical establishments of Christendom. They are together, "mystery, Babylon the Great." Why is the Romish church so represented? Because the true bride of the Lamb—his wife—is yet to be composed of the resurrected and transformed saints, and taken to Christ at his coming, in his kingdom. Also, because the Popes, who have usurped the titles and the prerogatives of "the wife," rule in Rome, the centre of Gentilism, in association with "the dragon" or "beast," who is at the head of the children of the wicked one—"the tares." The present church is therefore out of time, out of place, (being in the centre of Gentilism, rather than in Jerusalem,) out of position, (living in harlotry with the beast, and not at all waiting for the Christ, the King of Zion,) and altogether out of character with the New Testament "bride:" therefore all analogous church establishments are false and faithless, and must fall when Babylon falls under "the wrath of God."—Rom. 11: 22. "Thou also (the Gentile church, like the Jewish) shall be cut off."—2 Thess. 2: 1–8; Rev. 18 and 19.

Again, we ask, why are the churches of Christendom associated in this representation with the Roman? The reason lies in the moral, philosophical, and theological likeness. Does Rome make "Mary the mother of God?" So do her daughters, though with some diverse appendages and degrees of development. Does Roman philosophy make the soul immortal, and death a mystery, after the Pagan philosophers? So do other churches.

Does Papal theology make the kingdom "spiritual," in the false and Papal sense of "spiritual?" So do all popular and prevailing sects. Does Rome rest in "this present world," instead of expecting power, position and possession of the "things promised" only at the Lord's coming? So do all other churches that have attained a standing in the world.

Thus, in all the features, fairly traced, we find one family likeness, and that is the ROMAN! Amid all the diversities of language, organization, and administrative tendencies, the centre is Roman. The prevailing element everywhere through Christendom, in politics and religion, is the Roman. This none can deny, except they deny the primal facts of our age.

Remarks. 1. With the text, "mother of harlots," and all these corresponding facts before us, we see the monstrous error of those who make Rome the mother and daughters too—exempting Protestantism.

2. It is a palpable folly,—nay, it is "practical" impiety,—to take our type and tone of worship from "the solemn words on thoughtless tongues," prevailing in Babylon around us.

3. The christian's calling, hope, and entire service at the Lord's table, baptismal font, and assemblings for exhortation "so much the more," portain to the Lord's coming and "the marriage of the Lamb," and kingdom of God.—Rev. 10: 7–9; 20: 4–6.

4. "The Christ," his apostles and saints, are truly the chosen "kings and priests," the rulers elect, of Palestine and of all the earth. Matt. 19: 28; Ps. 45: 16; Dan. 7: 14, 18, 27; Rev. 1: 5–7; 3: 21; 5: 10; 20: 4–6.

J. B. C.

☞ Though Mary Magdalen was very near to Christ, yet she stands sighing, and complaining that they had stolen away her Lord, because she did not see him. Christians, though you may be very near and dear to Christ, yet till you come to see your assurance, you will spend your days in doubting, mourning and complaining.

☞ Christmas was first celebrated December 25th, A. D. 98.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, DECEMBER 21, 1859.

Poultney.

We presume our readers will be glad to hear again from the interesting church in Poultney. Well, they are pressing forward to the coming and kingdom of Jesus. The candle of the Lord shines in their midst. They have become one of the institutions in P——. They have purchased the Stone meeting-house, and Bro. John Howell from Harvard, McHenry Co., Ill., is expected to be with them the last of the month, to become their pastor. We rejoice with them in knowing they have secured the labors of a man so able, faithful and devoted. With this church, christianity is something more than mere profession, or an outward form without the power. They are as a city set on a hill. When they have not had preaching, they had prayer meetings every Tuesday and Friday evening, and three times on the Lord's day. Every one of those christians is strong in the belief of life only through Christ, at his coming. They have fully abandoned the theological fables of these last days, and are rejoicing in the truth of the Bible. They have concluded to "buy the truth and sell it not." While others barter it away for friends, pleasures, honors and treasures, they seem decided to hold it fast, and make no exchange for any thing afforded by this wicked world.

Lord's day morning, Dec. 11th, we assembled to pay our last respects to our dear brother Harris, deceased. He was a christian beloved, who was an ornament in the cause of Christ. It was an affecting and profitable scene. We truly found it "better to go to the house of mourning than to go to the house of feasting." Bro. Harris, though young, felt a strong impression, at times, to prepare himself to labor more earnestly in the vineyard of the Lord, trying to persuade his fellow men to embrace the religion of Christ. This world seemed to have lost all charms for him; and all its vain show with its flattering baubles of honor, were eclipsed by the prospective glory of the coming kingdom. A widowed mother and two christian children are left to mourn the loss of the one on whom they depended principally for support; and yet they are very calm, reposing in Jesus, enjoying heavenly consolation, which was most emphatically expressed by them in our social meeting Lord's day evening. It was a fine exhibition of the triumph of the christian's hope in the hour of deep affliction. We have rarely seen a brighter example of the power of godliness to sustain its possessors than in this bereaved family. We think every one present in the large assembly, who was not a christian, secretly wished to enjoy as much as this christian widow and her children. She has learned to say with David, "It is good for me that I have been afflicted."

At the close of the sermon Lord's day evening, we sat down, perhaps for the last time, with these dear saints to commemorate the suffering of our Savior. It was a heavenly place, to the friends of Jesus. Following the communion, we had another of our heart-cheering social meetings, when some forty or fifty, with warm hearts expressed their love for Jesus and his word. Tears flowed as we parted, but we felt resolved to meet again in the everlasting kingdom, where no fear of parting ever saddens the hearts of loved ones. May the continued peace of the Lord abide on them for ever more.

The Discussion.

The discussion at Seneca Falls with Eld. W. W. Clayton was one of deep interest, and of happy results. It was phonographically reported by Mr. F. L. Manning of Waterloo, and will be published in a few weeks; for this reason we forbear saying much concerning about it now. Eld. C. is a skillful disputant and did well in defending the popular theology of the day. Few could have done better. He is considered a champion in the defence of the conscious state of the dead, and the eternal misery of the wicked. He had a discussion in this place some five years since, with one who preaches the unconscious state of the dead, and it was thought that Eld. C. gained the victory. On this account, they felt a deeper interest this time, and the opposite side were more confident of success. Although the traveling was very bad, the most spacious room in the place was crowded every night with very attentive and orderly audiences. Sometimes, we should think there were from fifty to a hundred who could find no seats.

The first three evenings were spent in discussing the following resolution:—

Resolved, "When man dies, his spirit remains in a conscious state, separate from the body, until the resurrection."

As proof of the affirmative, considerable stress was laid on Eccl. 12: 7.—"Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was, and the spirit shall return unto God who gave it." It was argued that this spirit is the real man—the accountable being—who lives in the body, as a man lives in a house. At death, this spirit-man returns to God. Another proof given by our opponent was Paul's desire to depart and be with Christ. It was not claimed that Paul's body, but spirit, went to Christ. It was afterwards affirmed that the thief's spirit went to paradise which is in hades, and that all good spirits go to this place at death, instead of going to their reward in heaven. Hades was said to be divided into two parts, one called paradise, for the righteous; the other tartarus for the wicked, where they remain till the judgment day. We then reminded our opponent, that his position unfortunately proved too much; for it made out that God and Christ are in hades, instead of heaven. No attempt was made to get out of this dilemma, and we left our Bro. to his own reflections, hoping that he may see the absurdity of his position, and embrace the blessed hope of the gospel—life only through Christ.

The last two evenings were spent in discussing the doctrine of eternal misery, which is a necessary result, if the spirit is immortal, unless all men are saved. Eld. C. thought the righteous would enjoy the punishment of the wicked while they were suffering their eternal misery. Many of us thought otherwise. Several members of the different churches saw and embraced the truth, and are rejoicing in its reception. It now looks so plain, they are surprised that they have not seen it before. May the Lord give them strength to confess it before the world, and thereby honor its author. For the more we examine the word of the Lord, the worse the theology of the day appears. It surprises us that any one who believes God's holy word, should think that a dead man knows any thing.

Bro. Hewitt's daughter was brought from darkness into the light and liberty of the gospel during the meetings, and was baptized the day before we left. Several others are seeking the Lord. The cause of truth is onward at Seneca Falls.

Albany.

We had a delightful visit with the brethren and sisters at Albany, Dec. 12th. They have a very pleasant hall on the corner of State and Pearl streets. Here we met a happy company of pilgrim christians, who are truly homeward bound, rejoicing on the way. Some came down from Troy, and assisted in the worship of the God of our fathers. It was really refreshing to a weary one to meet such cheerful and devoted saints as here assemble to sing the sweet songs of Zion, and cheer each other on in the christian warfare. We found it a real resting-place. We were kindly entertained by Bro. Rufus Wendell, who intends to enter the vineyard of the Lord in the spring. We are glad to see earnest and devoted men, who are able to wield the sword of the Spirit successfully, leaving all to sound the last alarm to a guilty world. May the Lord go with him.

"Charlie is not Dead."

In looking over the records of death in one of the papers of the day, we noticed the obituary of a lad named Charlie, of whom it was said:—

"Sweet morning flower, and thou hast passed
From earth so soon away!
Earth had no charms to lure thee here,
From the bright realms of day.

Cease, fond parents!—dry your tears,
Remember, Jesus said,
Of such my kingdom is composed—
Your Charlie is not dead."

In the same notice we read:—"The relatives and friends of the family are requested to attend the funeral . . . . this afternoon." We thought it strange they should invite their friends to the funeral at a specified time, before Charlie was dead; and then bury him too, when he was still alive. What absurd theology!! When will people dare to think for themselves, and read the Bible without twisting it to suit an opposing creed? When will men dare believe the Bible in opposition to heathen mythology; which asserts that man never dies? while the word of the Lord declares that man dies, lies down and "rises not till the heavens be no more." When dead the word of truth declares that they have no love, nor hatred, neither thoughts nor desires. They "know not any thing."

Strange Progress.

Nine churches in Cincinnati are advertised to be sold for taxes. This fact shows the true progress of these times. It is a retrograde advance to perdition instead of direct progress towards the kingdom of God. The worldly spirit seems to be taking possession of nearly all professors at the present time. Once flourishing churches are now extinct, and their places of worship are turned to secular purposes. The tide of worldly mindedness is rapidly rising, and we see no chance for abatement till the Lord of glory appears, when they will be overtaken as a thief, and destroyed. Brethren, look out for the snare of the devil, as laid in the varied scenes of amusement of these last days. In these, Satan is exerting all his skill to entrap the unsuspecting, and drown them at last in perdition.

O What Waste!

The Scientific American states that there are in the city of New York about 200,000 smokers, each using two cigars daily, making 400,000 cigars every day. These, at an average of four cents each, make the enormous sum of $16,000 daily consumed in smoke, in New York alone. There are some 900,000,000 cigars manufactured in New York annually, which, at the same price, amount to $36,000,000.

Over five million and eight hundred thousand dollars are expended in New York city alone, for cigars, saying nothing about the vast amount of tobacco that is chewed and taken in the form of snuff!! Could we have a true catalogue of the nervousness, fretfulness, loss of appetite, dyspepsia, heart disease, consumption, evil imaginations, disconsolate feelings, thirsting for strong drink, etc., etc., which are caused by the use of this poisonous weed, we should be satisfied that the money paid out is but a small item, when compared with the evil results that follow.

Impending Crisis.

We clip the following from the New York Herald, for the purpose of showing how observing politicians are looking upon the state of things in this country. The prospect is truly a gloomy one, yet there is but little room to hope for any thing better than what is portrayed in the following. When speaking of the separation of the South from the North, now a very probable result, he says:—

"The first step towards such a result would produce a commercial and financial crisis in this country, and in the manufacturing and commercial countries of Europe, that would surpass everything in the shape of a revulsion of values that the world has ever known. Money crises have hitherto been produced by a temporary panic resulting from excessive speculation and over trading. In the contemplated event it would be a complete destruction of the edifice of credit and values. The perspective that would stand at the point of every view that could be taken of our probable future would be a civil war, in which one million of Americans, fighting in self defence, would be ranged against a million and a half of other Americans. . . . .

The first effect which would follow the step contemplated by the Southern men in Congress would be the immediate countermanding of all orders for Northern goods. This would soon be followed by a cessation of all payments from the South, and the practical if not the open repudiation of all Southern debts to Northern creditors. The active preparation which would at once be put on foot in the slave states to meet a hostile invasion would seriously interrupt all industrial enterprises there, and if the cotton, sugar and tobacco crops should not be entirely lost, they would be diminished to such an extent as seriously to shake the commercial fabric of the world. The loss of a million of bales of cotton, which is only about one-fourth of the coming crop, would immediately close one half of the manufactories in England and America. Not only would the cotton mills be shut, but thousands of other industrial establishments whose existence is vitally linked in with the great existing scheme of manufacture and exchange. This would bring bankruptcy upon every merchant and trader, North and South, in America and in Europe."

The following from the Richmond Whig shows the state of feeling at the South. The editor says:—

"We cordially approve the idea of the formation of voluntary associations throughout Virginia and the South, bound together by a common pledge among themselves, neither to eat, drink, wear, buy, nor use any article whatsoever manufactured at or imported from the North. Our fathers in the Revolution made and carried out a similar pledge in regard to importations from the mother country, and thus evinced a patriotic self denial which has no parallel in history. We of the South must imitate their glorious example, if we would not be longer tributary to those who are fast getting to be our worst enemies."

The "distress of nations" is becoming more and more apparent, as we approach the end. Let all the children of the Lord, who expect to be saved, keep upon their watch towers at this time, remembering they are blessed who are found watching when the Master comes.

Our Tract Column.

For the Crisis.

Tract Fund.

A FEW EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

DEAR BROTHER:—I have often wished while reading your articles in the Crisis on the Tract Fund, I had something to give, but thought my situation was such it was not my duty. I have been an invalid for twenty years, much of the time confined to my bed; and my husband, a poor man, has to work out by days' work to support his family. When I read your last article, and saw how few there were who said by their works they loved their neighbor as themselves, I felt to ask myself, cannot I do without something I have, and give fifty cents? I began to think over what I had. I had neither gold or costly array. I had a few old, worn-out dresses, and a few broken up dishes, which I had been thinking would need replacing soon. I finally concluded I could get along very well with my old clothes, if I could have the happiness of casting my mite into the Lord's treasury.

I have always found it more blessed to give than to receive. If we love the Lord with all the heart, I do not think we shall need dunning at every turn, for something to feed our perishing neighbor.

When my husband came in to dinner, I mentioned my feelings to him. He told me to send you a dollar. Here it is, with my prayers that it may be the means of saving a soul from death.

Your Sister, B——."

Here is another:—

"BRO. H[illegible]:—I have read our Tract Column in the Crisis with much interest.

I have saved the small sum of one dollar expressly to send you for the 'Tract Fund for the West,' which you will find enclosed. I live in the West. I am surrounded by neighbors; yet I am alone, not even one to agree with me in these glorious truths. I am sad because they will not lay hold of eternal life. I trust the Lord will choose a few among them yet, and feel encouraged to continue to cast my bread upon the waters, hoping it may be found after many days. My precious paper, the Crisis, I have scattered among my neighbors and relatives, and a few tracts. I have been cheered to see a disposition manifested by some to learn more. I have been pained to see so good a paper used by others to cover shelves and torn up for wrapping paper.

O may the Lord revive his work among this people, is my prayer.

Some tracts would be joyfully received for distribution in this dark place."

[Bro. Hastings spent the Sabbath (18th) with us. He is far from being well, but continues indefatigable in his labors. He is now en route for New York city, where he purposes to stop for a number of weeks. During that time he will issue some more tracts, also two books,—viz: "REASONS FOR THE HOPE THAT IS IN ME;" and "THE PERFECT STATE; or, FOREVER WITH THE LORD." Brethren and sisters, you may expect something good and valuable. May the Lord prosper the effort.—ED.]

For the Crisis.

Reasons for Believing the Advent Near.—No. 3.

BY ELD. A. ROSS.

"Now we beseech you, brethren, by the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, and by our gathering together unto him, that ye be not soon shaken in mind, or be troubled, neither by spirit, nor by word, nor by letter as from us, as that the day of Christ is at hand.

Let no man deceive you by any means, for that day shall not come, except there come a falling away first, and that man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition; who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God, or that is worshiped; so that he as God, sitteth in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God.

Remember ye not, that, when I was yet with you, I told you these things?

And now ye know what withholdeth that he might be revealed in his time.

For the mystery of iniquity doth already work; only he who now letteth will let, until he be taken out of the way.

And then shall that Wicked be revealed, whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming."—2 Thess. 2: 1–8.

It appears from the above, that the occasion of Paul's second letter to the Thessalonians was, to correct an erroneous idea entertained by them in respect to the nearness of Christ's coming. This sentiment was, no doubt, induced either by forged letters with St. Paul's signature attached, or by some false teacher, claiming some skeptical endowment of the Holy Spirit. This is quite evident from Paul's manner of meeting the subject. I would invite particular attention to this matter, from the practical bearing it has upon the church living at this stage of time.

It was not the personal advent of Christ as a future event, against which Paul brings his argument to bear; but it was to correct the false notion they had imbibed that it was to be expected in their time. This he did by showing them at the time of his writing, there were events in the womb of time, to be developed before Christ could come; such as, (1) a certain power which was to be taken out of the way; (2) the revelation of the man of sin; (3) the consumption of the man of sin by the spirit of Christ's mouth. Now if it can be shown that the events of which the apostle spoke, have all become history, then this furnishes us with a strong reason for looking for the revelation of the Son of man in our day.

We shall endeavor first, then, to identify the power that hindered the revelation of the man of sin in the apostolic age.

Paul says, in addressing the Thessalonians, "Ye know what now restraineth him in order to his being revealed in his own season. For the mystery of iniquity already inwardly worketh only till he who now restraineth be taken out of the way." Thus Macknight renders the passage. The Christian Fathers universally understood the restraining power to be the Roman empire. Tertullian, in his "Apology," p. 31, says: "We Christians are under the particular necessity of praying for the emperor, and for the continued state of the empire; because we know that dreadful power which hangs over the whole world; and the conclusion of the age which threatens the most horrible evils is retarded by the continuance of the time appointed for the Roman empire. This is what we would not experience. And while we pray that it may be deferred, we hereby show our good will to the perpetuity of the Roman state." At the time Jesus of Nazareth was received up into glory, and until A. D. 313, the state religion of the Roman empire was Pagan. During the same period, by the fires of ten general persecutions, the church was kept comparatively free from dross, but after the accession of Constantine to the imperial dignity, a change came over the whole state of things in church and state. The emperor assumed to unite in himself the civil and ecclesiastical dominion, and claimed the power of convening councils and presiding in them, and of regulating the external affairs of the church. He undertook, also, to remodel the government of the church, so as to make it conform as much as possible to the government of the state. Hence the origin of patriarchs, exarchs, archbishops, canons, prebendaries, etc. These were intended to correspond with the secular offices connected with the civil administration of the state. Taking these newly constituted dignitaries of the church into his special favor, he loaded them with riches and worldly honors, conferring immunities upon the churches over which they presided. This was throwing wide open the door for the falling away (apostasy), apprehended by Paul as something to intervene between his time and the day of Christ.

What a wide departure from the meek attitude of that church concerning which Jesus of Nazareth said, "Ye are not of this world"—"I have chosen you out of the world"—"How can ye believe, who receive honor one of another, and seek not alone that honor which cometh from God."

No sooner had the hand of persecution been lifted from the church, than that spirit of human ambition, which led the immediate disciples of our Lord to dispute among themselves who should be greatest in the kingdom of God, broke out in earnest claims among the Bishops of Constantinople, Alexandria and Rome, to superiority, and at length infallibility. Says a historian of our own time, "The Bishop of Rome surpassed all his brethren in the magnificence and splendor of the church over which he presided, in the riches of his revenues and possessions; in the number and variety of his ministers; in his credit with the people, and in his sumptuous manner of living." Ammianus Marcellinus, a Roman historian, who lived during those times, adverting to this subject says:—"It was no wonder to see those who were ambitious of human greatness, contending with so much heat and animosity for that dignity, because when they obtained it they were sure to be enriched by the offerings of the patrons, of appearing abroad in great splendor, of being admired for their costly coaches and sumptuous feasts, outdoing sovereign princes in the expenses of their tables." This led Pretextatus, a heathen, who was Prefect of the city, to say, "Make me Bishop of Rome, and I will be a Christian too."

These dazzling marks of human power in the See of Rome, had such a mighty influence upon the minds of the multitude, that it became a most seducing object of sarcedotal ambition. During the fourth century, not only was there apostasy manifested in the government of the church, and the lives of her functionaries, but the purest and most simple principles of faith were exchanged for the gross dogmas of paganism. It was here the falling away of which Paul spake was realized. No longer did the New Testament in Christ's own blood remain the constitution of the Christian church; for it was superceded by human creeds and popish canons. The pretended shepherds of the sheep, in the room of serving the flock, monopolized their faith.

Without entering into a minute detail of the progress of apostasy during the fourth century and the commencement of the fifth, we remark that, next in order, was revealed the man of sin and son of perdition. What contributed very materially to the establishment of the Roman Catholic hierarchy, as an idolatrous abomination, was the western empire of Rome falling into the hands of the barbarians of the north. Says Dowling, "These barbarous nations, the fierce and warlike Germans, who, after the defeat of the Romans, divided among them the western empire, bore with the utmost patience and moderation, both the vices of the bishops and priests, because upon their conversion to christianity they became naturally subject to their jurisdiction, and still more, because they looked upon the ministers of Christ as invested with the same rights and privileges which distinguished the priests of their fictitious deities."

Thus we see the restraining power was Pagan Rome. That was taken out of the way when Constantine professed the Christian religion, and made it the religion of the empire about A. D. 313; subsequent to which time came the falling away, out of which grew popery with its intolerance, its blazing faggots, its wrecks, its inquisitions, and its armed crusades against those who taught the pure doctrine of the cross. If the iniquitous crime of Judas selling his Lord for thirty pieces of silver constituted him the son of perdition, what name more appropriate can we find to designate a person who stands at the head of a system which has been the instrument of putting to death more than fifty millions of the saints of God, than man of sin and son of perdition? The pope is such, for thus the Holy Ghost has named him.

But this application may be seen in still clearer light by considering the work of the man of sin, as spoken of by Paul: he "opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God." Such language cannot well apply to the God of heaven. But it would seem that the apostle had in his mind inferior magistrates and emperors, which are sometimes in holy writ called lords and gods. Now who is there that does not know that the pope claims a power superior to the greatest kings and emperors? The pope has not only exalted himself above magistrates, kings and emperors, by excom-maintaining and deposing them, claiming to be King of kings and Lord of lords, in a civil respect; but he has gone farther; he has arrogated to himself divine honors, so that he "sitteth in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God." It has been supposed by some that the temple here referred to was the temple of Jerusalem. But against this it may be argued that nowhere in the New Testament is the temple of Jerusalem called the temple of God; but the church, in a number of places in the apostolic writings, is thus denominated. See 1 Tim. 3: 15; 1 Cor. 7: 19; 2 Cor. 6: 16; Eph. 2: 19—24. Besides, in the Revelation of St. John, which was written some years after the destruction of Jerusalem, there is mention made of men becoming pillars in the temple of God. Hence it is evident that the sitting of the man of sin in the temple of God by no means implies that he was to show himself in Judea; but that he will make void the government of God and of Christ in the christian church, and the government of the civil magistrates in the state, by arrogating to himself the whole spiritual authority belonging to Christ, and all the temporal authority belonging to princes and magistrates. If the papacy has not filled this inspired history, I despair of finding anything that will.

We will next consider the evidences of the approximation of this antichristian hierarchy to its end. Its ultimate overthrow is to be occasioned by the brightness of Christ's coming. But, prior to the end, it is to manifest symptoms of age and decay. This is intimated by Paul in the following language: "Whom the Lord shall consume by the spirit of his mouth," or breath of his mouth, as it is rendered by some. Evidently, "breath of his mouth" is a figure of true doctrine. The preaching of the gospel is termed (Rev. 19: 15,) a sharp sword proceeding out of the mouth of God. Again, (Hos. 6: 5,) "I have hewed them by the prophets; I have slain them by the word of my mouth." See also Isa. 11: 4. The question is, then, has the gospel been so purely preached as to cripple the power of Antichrist, or to cause him to be seized with consumption? If so, every intermediate event between Paul's time and the day of Christ, is past, and the next event to be looked for is the second advent of the Redeemer to destroy antichrist by the brightness of his coming. That the gospel has been more freely and purely preached since the great reformation than for centuries before, under the influence of which the man of sin has been on the decline, there needs no argument to prove. A glance at the past, with a little observance of the present, is enough to settle the point. During the eleventh and twelveth centuries the pope was the most powerful sovereign in Europe. In all the diplomatic deliberations of the old world, his counsel and pleasure was regarded above all others. But now, in the cabinet of kings and emperors, even such as are the sons of the Catholic church, he is unknown as a diplomatist, while at home he is hated by his own subjects. As to his power as an ecclesiastic, he is yet mighty, and must remain so until the coming of the Just One. But his temporal power is a mere shadow, and that fast declining.

As intimated in the commencement of this article, this subject has a practical bearing upon the church now living, for in the agitated condition of the Italian States, and the fearful forebodings of the man of sin, may be identified the sure precursors of the coming and triumph of our Lord Jesus Christ. If St. Paul were living in our time he would no longer say, that day cannot come; for the falling away of which he spake has been realized; the man of sin has been revealed, and now is in a consuming state.

Dear brethren, scattered abroad, I feel that I have come far short of doing justice to my feelings or the subject under consideration; but I have done the best I know. My object is pure. I am anxious to stir your minds afresh upon the evidences of the speedy coming of our dear Savior. We have never felt the subject too deeply, neither have we been too faithful in warning the world. Our highest state of religious enjoyment, our days of marked usefulness, have been when we were so absorbed in this glorious theme, as to preach it, pray it, and sing it, and get people to believe it and prepare for it. O, let us awake once more, and gird up the loins of our mind, and occupy that waiting attitude which will enable us to say when Jesus comes, this is our God, we have waited for him! Amen.

For the Crisis

"Jesus Wept."

He wept not for any act of his, for we read "he was without sin." Was it in view of his homeless state? The foxes have holes, and the birds have nests, but he had not where to lay his head; yet we have no reason to think he suffered on this account. Was it the ingratitude of some professed friends? And how like very many professed friends of the present day, partaking of the "loaves and fishes" and the loudest in declaring their strong love and never failing loyalty!—"Though I should die with thee yet will I not deny thee;" but with the first breath of adversity, the soonest to forswear even the knowledge of such an one! [illegible]

Was it the sin and wickedness of man, and the strong rejection of salvation so lovingly and freely offered? This, it is true, brought forth many a heart-groan and earnest expostulation, combined with a sympathizing tenderness of manner never yet equaled.

Was it in view of that "cup" of which he was to drink, which caused the sweat like great drops of blood to fall to the ground,—in view of which he prayed to his Father, if it were possible it might be removed? Yet still the same childlike submission to his Father's will in this as in all other things; although, as he said, rebuking a zealous, indignant follower, who used his sword in behalf of his Master on an occasion the most trying to a friend's heart—"put up thy sword, for thinkest thou that I cannot now pray to my Father and he shall give me more than twelve legions of angels?"

No, not for these did Jesus shed the tear of sympathy! How touchingly has "that disciple whom Jesus loved" narrated the cause of those tears. When Jesus saw Mary weeping for the death of her brother, and also the Jews, "Jesus wept." Jesus, the Son of God, was not ashamed to weep at the grave of him he loved! He stole not away in solitude and darkness to mourn, but openly in sight of many! Methinks I hear a doubting one saying "he chose the multitude to show forth his power." Yes, but not as vain man to display his superiority over his fellow-man, but to dispel infidelity, although knowing, as he did, every act of this kind aroused the jealousy and hatred of the Jews, which was already strong against him.

But were these tears for the dead or living? Jesus was sent for while Lazarus was sick, but "abode two days still in the same place," and when he proposed to his disciples to go to Judea, they remonstrated with him, showing the danger of doing so. He replied, "Our friend Lazarus sleepeth; but I go that I may awake him out of sleep." They thinking he spoke of taking rest in sleep, said unto them, he is dead." We have no account of any unusual emotion on the part of Jesus when meeting with Martha, Mary, and their friends, but strove to comfort them by assurances of the restoration of their brother.

Not until Jesus saw Mary and the Jews also weeping which came with her did He weep. Surely, were they not tears of sorrow for the grief of others? M. L.

Correspondence.

From George ——.

Bro. Grant:—Although a stranger to you, yet, by the grace of God, I can call all those who are "looking for that blessed hope" of the soon coming Messiah, brothers and sisters. Truly we are living in a perilous period of time—a period that is big with events, that to the pilgrim are as so many waymarks on the journey to the celestial city; but to those whose treasures are in earth and earthly possessions, the "signs of the times" must be any thing but auspicious. We, who have been "looking for a city whose maker and builder is God," know that it is almost in view. In the distance we hear the strains of music as they are wafted by the celestial zephyrs, and oh! how it encourages us to manfully brave the adverse winds for a short time longer, and then the glad and welcome cry of "land, ho!" will greet our ear. The angels on the shore are waving signals of encouragement for us to patiently endure a little longer, and we shall reach the port of endless bliss. O what a happy meeting! In my mind's eye I see a dear mother—whose prayers for a sinful son at last, I hope, have been answered, who will mingle with that company to greet her reclaimed son. Dear mother, your devotion to God—your earnest prayers, at last have been heard, and you will soon, with all the sleeping ones, rise, clothed with immortality, and join in the anthems of redeeming love. God helping me, I will be among the company.

The prophetic chart points to 1860 as the last reckoning. All our observations cluster around that point. To me the distance has been faithfully marked out, with way-marks or mile-stones, and we have found by our reckoning that the last one to pass is in view. How it cheers the heart of the wayworn mariner to think the voyage is almost over, that the harbor is within speaking distance; that the preparations to receive us are on a more extensive scale of grandeur than earth can boast of.

Let us be faithful for a few days longer, and our reward will be sure. Pray for me that my courage may not fail, now that the port is in sight. God bless you all, is my earnest prayer.

Worcester, Mass., Dec. 4th, '59.

From Eld J. Parry.

Bro. Grant:—Yesterday we had a good day at the Hall, and in the afternoon and evening a good congregation. After the evening service we enjoyed an excellent social meeting. When I say enjoyed I mean something more than the old lady did, when she remarked that she enjoyed a miserable state of health.

I have attended prayer meetings so cold and lifeless, that to speak of enjoyment, [illegible] over, would have been quite as inappropriate as the above observation of the old lady. I have been for years in the habit of going to church, and passing through a round of services, long prayers, long sermons, long faces and long psalms, dragging like a wounded snake its weary length along. And oh! how glad the audience seemed to be when the benediction was pronounced, and they hurried out of the church as fast as any degree of decency would allow; and not a word of notice or recognition passed between even members of the same church.

What a marked difference in our little church, when the heart has been warmed up and glows with christian love and unity! When you grasp a brother's or sister's hand it does not feel like a dead fish, and send a chill to the heart; but, on the contrary, it makes us feel the reality of christian fellowship, and to say with the Psalmist "Behold, how good and how pleasant a thing it is for brethren to dwell together in unity!" There is a lingering after the service, a manifest unwillingness to part from the society of those of like precious faith, and a longing for the time when, in the coming kingdom, the saints shall enjoy a Sabbath of rest that will know no end; and when we shall see that Jesus of whose love we have heard, and read, and felt so much. I cannot but contrast these green spots in the wilderness, with the state of loneliness and desertion we experienced a few months since, when, in the midst of an unfriendly world and a bigoted church, we were cast out alone, and destitute of human sympathy, to find our way as best we could to the home of the weary pilgrim. It is the Lord's doing and it is marvelous in our eyes.

Sandy Hill, Dec. 12th.

From R. R. Knight.

Bro. Grant:—Twelve years ago last spring I heard the blessed news of Jesus coming to raise the dead and change the living, and restore the earth to its Eden beauty, and give it to his people forever. I am glad to-day that I ever was led to believe this glorious doctrine. I once thought that God's people went to heaven when they died, but I do not think so now; if Jesus never comes they will sleep to all eternity. But he is coming again, thank his name. I look forward to the time when the ransomed of the Lord shall return and come to Zion, with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away; and there the inhabitants shall not say I am sick; the people that dwell therein know no iniquity.

I want to be there, and I hope, brethren, we shall all hear Jesus say unto us—"Thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many, enter into the joy of thy Lord!"

North Scituate, R. I.

Obituary Notice.

Died, in Poultney, Vt., Dec 9th, 1859, Bro Chas. Harris, son of Sr. Hannah Harris, aged twenty-three years.

When we went to Poultney in Sept '58, Bro. Harris, then a faithful member of the M. E. Church, was the first one who expressed his belief in the doctrine of life only through Christ, and on his dying bed, he said to his mother,—"Tell Bro Grant I am not sorry I have embraced this truth, for it comforts me now."

Soon after our meetings began, he saw that sprinkling was not baptism, as he had been taught, and being one of those who have only to see duty, to do it, as soon as convinced, he obeyed the word of the Lord, and was buried with Christ in baptism, as was also his surviving brother and sister, and from that time was more than ever faithful and joyful. His death was very calm and peaceful—a complete triumph of faith in Jesus and the approaching resurrection. A large congregation of sympathizing friends were present at the funeral, in the Stone Church, Lord's day morning, Dec 11th. We endeavored to comfort the afflicted with the hope that the loved one should rise again at the coming of Jesus.—[Ed.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Per steamship Nova Scotia, from Liverpool the 30th ult.

THE PEACE TREATIES AND THE CONGRESS.

The treaties of Zurich have been formally published in the French and Piedmontese journals. They contain nothing additional to previous information.

Letters of invitation to the Congress were dispatched to various powers, from Paris, on the 29th.

The Congress will assemble early in January.

All points at issue between France and Austria were cleared up by M. Walewski and Prince Metternich on the 28th.

Paris is understood to be the place fixed for the Congress.

GREAT BRITAIN.

Nothing is heard regarding the rumors of the proposed disarmament, beyond a general scouting of the idea, so far as England is concerned. The Times says: Disarmament in France is a mere name. In England it is a serious reality. Let an official announcement be made that the Emperor of France had made a point of our disarming by sea and land, and let orders to that effect be sent to our dockyards, recruiting stations, and Lord Lieutenants, and the only result would be that every man in England fit to be entrusted with firearms would be enrolled in a Rifle Club before Easter next.

Active movements were progressing in Ireland, in support of the temporal power of the Pope.

FRANCE.

The Paris Moniteur publishes an order of the day by Gen. Montauban, French Commander of the expedition to China. He tells the troops under his orders that they are called on to undertake a glorious expedition for the second time. He says: Your flag will unite with that of England, and that union will be a pledge of victory, as that of the two nations is a pledge of peace to the whole world.

The French press has entirely discontinued offensive articles against England.

In consequence of the successful passage of gunboats from Cette to Bordeaux by canals, a commission has been appointed to inquire into the cost of making them sufficiently wide and deep to allow vessels of great tonnage going through, so that a portion of the French fleet may pass to and from the Atlantic and Mediterranean without passing Gibraltar.

The establishment of a line of steamers between France and Ireland was contemplated.

The London Post's correspondent says: A fearful statement of maladministration of the Pontifical government will be laid before the Congress.

ITALY.

Garibaldi has issued a proclamation, dated Genoa, Nov 23, addressed to his comrades in Central Italy. He desires them not to allow his temporary absence to weaken their ardor in the holy cause they are engaged in, bids them remain at their posts, persevering in duties which can alone make the soldier. The truce, he says, will not last long. Old diplomacy seems little disposed to see things as they are. They ignore the fact that they have in you the making of a great nation, if you are free and independent, and seeds of revolution that will shake the world if our rights are not recognised—if we are not allowed to be masters in our own house. Italians! do not lay down your arms. Citizens! let there not be one who does not prepare a weapon to wrest, by force, to-morrow, what we are still striving to obtain by the hands of justice.

The Tuscan Moniteur publishes a decree accepting the resignation by Garibaldi of his command of the Tuscan army, but maintaining him in his honorary rank.

The States of Central Italy have 50,000 men under arms.

British residents at Nice delivered a highly complimentary address to Garibaldi before he left that place.

Buoncompagni will take the title of Pro Regent, and all Central Italy will be under one administration.

Letters from Rome confirm the rumor that Cardinal Antonelli will represent the Pope at the European Congress. The official paper of Rome says that certain journals exaggerate the reforms which are to come into operation.

Propaganda have received reports from Cochin China, that persecution and ill-treatment of missionaries have again taken place.

SPAIN AND MOROCCO.

A Madrid dispatch of the 26th says that yesterday more than four thousand Moors attacked, for the third time, the redoubt before Serallo, and were repulsed. Their defeat was complete. The Spanish troops showed great bravery during the engagement. The expeditionary corps d' armee is crossing the Straits. Fresh regiments have disembarked at Ceuta. The whole Spanish force destined for the operation is 4800 men.

AUSTRIA.

It is asserted that a recruiting office for Rome and Naples has been established at a village near Vienna. A whole battalion had been raised at Vienna for the Pope, and had gone to the Papal dominions.

The Presse, a Vienna journal, referring to the rumor of a disarmament proposed by France, says that no British Cabinet either could or would pay attention to such a suggestion. Before the Italian war, France proposed to disarm because it was then necessary that she should appear to be pacific and Austria quarrelsome, and the same game is now being played with England.

GERMANY.

The Danish government had made a proposal to the Federal Diet for the appointment of a mixed committee, to propose modifications in the constitution of Holstein. Prussia was dissatisfied with the proposal, as it was considered unlikely that Denmark would accede to the views of Prussia. It was said that the whole question of the German Duchies will be submitted to the approaching Congress.

JAPAN.

The Japanese Government continued to throw all sorts of obstacles in the way of a friendly settlement according to the treaty.

Paris, Nov 30. The Opinione Nationale has received a first warning from the Minister of the Interior on account of having published an article on the temporal power of the Pope, which the warning states is an outrage on a Foreign Power and to the church, of which the Pope is the head.

In Madrid, 29th ult., it was reported that the government of Tangiers had fired upon the French squadron, and that the latter had replied by bombarding the place as an act of retaliation.

On the 5th of October one hundred and seventeen shocks of earthquake were felt in the city of Copiapo. The loss of life was inconsiderable, but much damage was done to property.

The Paris correspondent of the Times says there is still some uncertainty as to whether the English government has as yet made up its mind to take part in the Congress.

In the recent interview with Prince Metternich, it is said that Count Walewski assured the Prince that the influence of French diplomacy will continue to be exercised in Central Italy in favor of the spontaneous recall, by the population, of the Grand Dukes.

[Per Steamer North America.]

The Congress assembles nominally on the 5th of January, but practically for real business not earlier, probably, than the 15th.

The Paris Patrie states that most of the European Powers had given in their adhesion to the Congress.

It is stated that the French expedition to China will be the most complete and carefully calculated that ever left France. The cost is estimated at £6,000,000. The combined forces will amount to 30,000 men.

It is asserted that since the resignation of Garibaldi, the Pontifical government had become much less tractable and less disposed to reforms.

The Tuscan Moniteur announces that Buoncompagni will take the title of Governor General of the League of the Provinces of Central Italy.

AUSTRIA.

Le Nord says 30,000 additional troops are to be sent to maintain order in Hungary.

The London Post's Paris correspondent has heard that a Cabinet Council at Vienna had been held, to take into consideration the necessity of placing the whole of Hungary in a state of siege.

The Vienna Journals complain bitterly of the new and arbitrary press law.

Accounts from Hungary say that the national demonstrations against Austria were increasing, all ranks taking part in them.

MOROCCO.

A Madrid telegram of the 6th says: The loss of the Moors in the attack of the 30th November, was 500 killed, 1500 wounded, but no prisoners. Since commencing operations against the Moors, the Spaniards have had 86 killed, 646 wounded, and 73 captured.

Gen. Scabala has made a reconnoisance against the Moorish camp at Tetuan.

The Gibraltar Chronicle of the 29th says: Private letters from the Spanish camp in Africa represent the action of the 25th as more serious, and the loss of the Spanish army much more considerable than the published accounts. Three battalions were fearfully cut up in a hand-to-hand fight with the Moors.

In consequence of the destruction of the [illegible] by fire, the submarine cable, which was to have been placed across the strait of Gibraltar, had been destroyed.

Christmas Hymn,

Composed for the Whitby Congregational Sabbath School, and its friends,

BY H. L. HASTINGS.

"When the fulness of the time was come, God sent forth his Son—who gave himself for our sins, that he might deliver us from this present evil world—in whom we have redemption through his blood—who hath abolished death and brought life and immortality to light through the gospel—and shall appear the second time without sin unto salvation."

Come join the Angels in the song
They sang o'er Bethlehem's plains;
To distant climes the strain prolong,
Swelling the savage tribes among,
In joyful, thankful strains.

Glory to God, who loves our race,
Though sinful and defiled;
Who looked on man with matchless grace,
And to this dark and dreary place,
To bless us, sent his child.

High let the lofty strain resound,
Loud as the thunder's roar,
With gladness let this day be crowned;
Let every heart with joy abound,
Till mortal scenes are o'er.

Peace on the earth! Good will to men!
Be spread till wars shall cease;
Till Christ shall come in might again,
And over all forever reign
The glorious Prince of Peace.

Providence, R. I., Nov., 1859.

Notices, &c.

☞ We will fill all orders for the "Lyre" as soon as possible, after receiving them from the publisher.

"Let him that is merry sing Psalms."

Every christian should have a copy of the

New Music Book,

THE CHRISTIAN LYRE.

This work is of rare value, containing, as it does,

I. A large collection of the excellent old tunes that "never wear out."

II. Many new popular airs of merit.

III. Between five and six hundred hymns and spiritual songs.

It may be safely said that there is no book of its kind extant that approaches this in excellence. It will take its place as a standard work, and will be considered indispensable by those who wish to possess the best selection of old-fashioned and "pennyroyal" psalmody.

Its form is such as to be very convenient in singing, and yet it is so small in size as to be carried in the pocket. The importance of such a work can hardly be over-estimated.

The attention of Clergymen, Choristers, and Singing School Teachers, is called to this work.

Single copy,	$0 60
Single copy, gilt,	1 00
Six copies to one address,	3 00

For a dozen or more copies, a deduction of 25 per cent will be made. Postage, 9 cents per copy.

As over $1000 has been invested in this work, the subscriber earnestly requests all who may be interested in it, to aid him in giving it as extensive a sale as possible. In doing the best we can, it is feared it will fail to meet expenses.

Though the book is small, it contains more hymns and music than most of the larger works, and is as costly. Its typography, printing, and binding have been done in the best manner, and will not fail to give satisfaction. Orders solicited.

Address, J. V. Himes, Boston, Mass.

The book can be had at this office also.

☞ There will be a quarterly conference at "The Standish" in Fairfield, Huron Co., Ohio, commencing Saturday, one o'clock, P. M., Dec 31st, and continue over Lord's day. A general attendance of the brethren and sisters in the Lord is prayed for. We are notified that Bro J. B. Cook, of Rochester, N. Y., will be present, (the Lord willing) and speak to us of "the like precious faith" and "the good things to come," from 2 Pet. 1: 1 and Heb 9: 11, at 6 1-2 o'clock, P. M., and 10 1-2 A. M. Lord's day. He will also preach at the "Burgh" 6 1-2 P. M. Lord's day, provided the brethren there make arrangements for the same, otherwise at the "Standish." By request

Geo W. Stetson.

Olena, Dec. 12th, 1859.

Conference.

Notice is hereby given that the first quarterly conference of Buchanan district will be held at Buchanan, Mich., and will commence on Thursday, Jan. 5th, at half past 6 o'clock, P. M., and continue over the following Sabbath. We hope to see a general rally at this conference, as no possible pains will be spared in making arrangements for preaching in destitute places. Come one, come all. Bro P. B. Morgan is expected to be present to assist in preaching the Word.

For the church D. R. Mansfield.

Notice.

The next meeting of the R. I. Conference will be at River Point, Dec. 28th, 29th, and 30th. Let the Brethren and Sisters come with warm hearts expecting or intending to have a good meeting. Joseph D. Brown, Clerk.

Conference.

In Earlville, Ill., will commence on Wednesday, Jan. 4th, 1860, and continue over the Lord's day following. One and all, come and pray the Lord to give us a feast.

W. Pratt.

☞ I will hold a conference in Elizabeth, Joe Davis Co., Ill., Wednesday, Jan. 18th, and continue over Lord's day following. The brethren must write me if they wish the above named meeting, and name where (what depot) they will meet me. Direct Muscatine, Iowa, care of J. Covell.

Walter Pratt.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

I will preach as follows:—

Prospect, Ct.	Dec. 31st and Jan. 1st
Pine Swamp	Jan. 8th
Pawlings, N. Y.	Jan. 15th
Hazel Plains, Ct.	Jan. 22d

The intermediate time subject to the order of brethren in the same or adjacent places.

T. S. CAMFIELD.

Bro. Wm. Sutherland will preach Dec. 25th at Bro. [illegible]'s, and over the Sabbath, where the brethren may appoint.

J. W. Crabtree appoints to preach in Unionville Thursday and Friday evenings, Jan. [illegible]

Bro. J. E. [illegible] will meet with the brethren at

Plymouth Hollow, Ct.	Dec. 25th
Northfield, Ct.	Dec. 26th
South Farms, Ct.	Dec. 27th and 28th
Roxbury, Ct.	Dec. 29th and 30th
Hattertown, Ct.	Jan. 1st

Eld. Wm. Shepherd appoints to preach in

Albany, N. Y.	Dec. 25th
Springfield, Mass.	Jan. 1st
Chester Factories, Mass.	Jan. 2d
Palmer, Mass.	Jan. 3d
Springfield, Mass.	Jan. 4th, 5th, 6th and 8th
Hartford, Conn.	Feb. 8th and 16th
New Britain	Feb. 17th

Providence permitting, there will be a conference at Vernon, Vt., commencing Thursday evening, Dec. 22d, and continue over the Sabbath.

Brattleboro, Vt.	Dec. 26th
Jamaica, Vt.	Dec. 27th

R. PRATT.
D. L. PRATT.

J. B. Cook will preach, Lord willing, at the Quarterly Meeting near Norwalk, Ohio, as Bro. Alling shall appoint, Jan. 1st, 1860. Will preach on about ten days, as brethren may arrange.

Eld. C. F. Sweet appoints to preach in Concens Jan. 10th to the 15th.

Business Matters.

To Correspondents.

L. Macomber—All right.

Enos Dole.—All right.

Mercy A. Couillard.—Thank you.

Jno. C. Young.—Send us your order again, and we will send on once more.

Cash Receipts.

O Haynes 244, $1 50, F Chaloner 225, $1 12, R A Morrill 260, $1 00; G W Sprague 234, $1 64, J W Austin 260, $1 50; A S Dole 234, $1.25, B Herrick 234, $1 50, O F Cain 242, $1 32, C A Warner 234, $3 08, M J Raymond, p. p., 234, $1 75, A Barber 231, $1 50, J Hall 244, 33 cts.

L G Dole 246, N R Gould 234, J T Sargent 240, S A Chaplin 234, C Bilch 156, H Phelps 231, N Haskins 208, C W Potter 234, Morris Smith 246, C Kinney 246, H W Farmer 246, A K Hyde 246, J Smith 227, G Dillabaugh 249, A Herrick 234, T D Metcalf 222, L Du Pey 231, E Oakes 227, B Beals 234, J H Sisler 246, M J Collins 241, D Rollins 245, H A Lord 234, R Addison 272, B Moody 246, I Green 246, N Lewis 246, A Gates 246, A Stewart 239, H C Hutman 241, W S Howden 234.—$1 00 each.

M Herrington 272, G B Keach 279, L G Ingalls 272, M Mirabam 249, Wm. Briggs 260, J Mavall 266, J L Allen 260, J Pike 272, P Gorton 273, E M Haggett 246, F Dannet 253.—$2 00 each.

R Flower 234, A B Cook 212, D Gates 253, H H Chidsey 233, A B Andrews 233, D Spencer 236, L T Marsh 233.—50 cents each.

For Books and Tracts.—J Pinkham 75 cts, S K Peirce $1 00, H O Page $2 00, P Bradford 10 cts, N B Gould $3 39, S P Babcock 90 cts, L G Ingalls $1 00, S A Chaplin 21 cts, M Markham 12 cts, O D Woodruff $4 50, C E Scribner $1 00, H Bailey $6 00, A W Sibley 24 cts, J Hall 68 cts, C W Dudley 84 cts, E Oakes 50 cts, E Dole $3 25, C Wilson 6 cts, J A Libbey $1 60, O F Cain 68 cts, C A Warner $1 92, E M Haggett $1 00, I F Farnsworth 74 cts, J Wilbur $1 00, W H Wiley $5 36, H B Sevey $1 32, W J Ingraham 37 cts.

Books and Tracts.

Law requires all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on TRACTS is only one half cent per ounce, if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for ANY of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the Crisis, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

The Rich Man and Lazarus; Thief on the Cross, and the Souls under the Altar, an exposition of Matt. 10: 28, Gen 2: 17, with other interesting matter. By Miles Grant. Price, single, 5 cents, $3 00 per hundred, 1-4 off per dozen. Postage 1 cent.

The Soul—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words nephesh and psuche as employed in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant, Boston. 32 pp., 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3 00 per hundred, postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. They weigh about one ounce each. A valuable tract for the times. Get one.

The Spirit—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words ruakh and pneuma as found in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant. 32 pp., price 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3 00 per hundred, postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. A valuable aid in the study of the Scriptures.

The Parable of the Rich Man and Lazarus, does it imply eternal future suffering? By C. F. Hudson. 24 pp. Price, 3 cts. single. $2.00 per hundred.

The Doctrine of Everlasting Punishment: a discussion of the question, "Do the Scriptures teach the doctrine of the eternal conscious suffering of the wicked?" Between Dr J. Litch and Eld. Miles Grant. Price, single, 25 cts. Postage 3 cts. 1-4 off per dozen.

What is Man? A Bible view of his creation. The meaning of soul, spirit, death and hell, by Miles Grant. Price, single copy 5 cts; $2.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

"The Speechless Guest at the Marriage Feast," by John F. Cotton, being a short review of the parable, with statistical remarks of its illustration in the destruction of Jerusalem, and its positive negation of the doctrine of election and reprobation. Price 5 cts. single, postage 1 ct. $3.00 per hundred.

Anti-eternal Torment. By Edwin Burnham. Price 1 cent, single; 75 cts. per hundred. Postage 1 ct.

Death not Life: or the Destruction of the Wicked scripturally Established. By J. Blain, Baptist minister. Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cents single, postage 3 cents. Bound, 40 cents; postage 8 cents.

Church Debts. By W. Ramsey, D. D. A rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cts—postage 9 cts.

The Rights of Wrong, or, Is Evil Eternal? By C. F. Hudson. Price 5 cts. single. 6 copies for 20 cts. Mailed post paid. $2.00 per hundred. Sold by G. W. Young, 138 William St., New York; Truman and Spofford, Cincinnati; and S. C. Griggs & Co., Chicago.

Cruden's Condensed Concordance. Every Bible student should have a copy. Price, postpaid $1.50.

Son of God, by H. Grew, 10 cts. single; postage 1 cent.

Bible meaning of the word Hell. Price 2 cts. single; postage 1 ct., $1 per hundred.

The Saint's Inheritance, by Wm. Sheppard.—A good tract to give your neighbors. Price [illegible]

The Harp: a selection of [illegible] by J. V. Himes. [illegible]

Words of Warning. 3 cts. single; postage 1 ct. [illegible]

English Bibles.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them [illegible] than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

Life and Religious Experience of [illegible] Munger, including many interesting circumstances connected with campmeetings and revivals. Written by himself. This is a very interesting work, and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cts. —postage 10 cents.

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed; or Christ the promised Messiah. By Henry [illegible] Seymour. An excellent tract to throw light upon the Scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price [illegible] per hundred,—4 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

200 Stories for Children, compiled by T. M. Preble. An excellent collection of interesting incidents, well calculated to benefit the reader. Price 40 cents; postage 7 cents.

Foster's Letter and Tract on Hell, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Genesee, N. Y. Price $1., postage paid.

An Appeal to Pious Trinitarians. By H. Grew. Price 2 cts., postage 1 ct.

The Wicked not Immortal. Two hundred texts quoted to prove the destruction of the wicked. By Eld. Jacob Blain. Price 1 cent single; $1.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

The Great Error Exposed; or, Endless Misery not a Bible Doctrine. In this tract all texts relied on to prove endless misery are explained, and two hundred for destruction quoted. By Eld. Jacob Blain. Price 2 cents single; $2.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

We also have the following works, published and for sale by H. L. Hastings, Providence R. I.

1.—The Voice of the Church on the Coming and kingdom of the Redeemer, or a history of the Reign of Christ on Earth, by D. T. Taylor, edited with a preface by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. 12mo. pp. 420, price $1, postage 18 cents.

2.—The Great Controversy between God and Man. Its origin, progress and termination, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. pp. 167, neatly bound in cloth, price 60 cents—postage 10c.

3.—Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion, and a Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. Edited with a preface, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. 12mo. pp. 122. Price, in paper covers, 30 cts.—postage 3 cts., cloth gilt, 40 cts.—post. 5 cts.

4.—The Fate of Infidelity: or the Dealings of Providence with Modern Infidels, together with an appendix, containing a brief account of the special judgments visited upon the early opposers of Christianity by a converted Infidel. 1 vol. 18 mo. pp. 175, cloth gilt, 25 cents—post-paid.

5.—Future Punishment: an Argument in two parts, from Reason and Scripture, by H. H. Dobney, Baptist minister of England; with an appendix on the State of the Dead, by John Milton. This work is one of patient thought and calm and christian argument. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 312, price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

6.—Debt and Grace: or the Doctrine of a Future Life by C. F. Hudson. A most learned and valuable work, exhibiting great candor, ability and research, containing quotations from some four hundred writers of all ages and languages, and showing conclusively that eternal life is the peculiar privilege of the believer in Jesus Christ. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 480, price $1.25—post paid.

7.—Pauline Theology; or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. A convincing argument, deduced from a careful examination of every passage on the subject of Future Punishment in Paul's fourteen epistles. 12mo pp. 84, 15 cts. single, $10 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

8.—The Old Paths: or the Primitive Doctrine of a Future Life, embracing copious extracts from the apostolic fathers, with arguments and remarks, by H. L. Hastings. pp. 87 12mo. 18 cts. single, $12 per hundred—post. 1c.

Important Questions—8 Nos., 4 pp. each. Price, per sett, 3 cts. single; $1.40 per hundred.

Fables of Infidelity, and Facts of Faith. By R. Patterson. 12mo. Price, postpaid, 75 cts; $6 per dozen.

Tracts on Prophecy, (bound,) 224 pp. Price, postpaid, 60 cts.

Tracts on Immortality, (bound,) 220 pp. Price, postpaid, 60 cts. Both volumes mailed for $1.

Tracts of 24 pages. Price, 5 cts. single copy; $3 per hundred: postage 1 ct. each, or half a cent per ounce if ordered to the amount of eight ounces or upwards.

1—Church not in Darkness; 2—The Three Worlds; 3—The Last Days; 4—Plain Truths; by Hastings. 5—Noah, his Age and Ours; 6—Desire of all Nations, 7—It is Done; by John Cumming. 8—A Voice of Warning; 9—New Heavens and Earth, by D. T. Taylor. 10—*Ancient Landmarks; 11—State of the Dead, by Milton. 12—Intermediate State, by Grew.

Tracts at 3 cents single copy; $1.50 per hundred. postage 1 ct. each, or half cent an ounce for packages of eight or more ounces.

1—Future Punishment; by Grew. 2—Scripture tract number one, Destiny of the Wicked. 3—Outline of the coast of Man; by Lenfest. 4—Key of Truth, 5—Man's Future State; by Sheldon. —6†Olive Leaves, by the sett.

Tracts at 2 cents single copy; $1 per hundred.

1—The Night Cometh; by J. Adey. 2—The Day of Judgment; by St. Cyril.

Tracts at 1 cent single copy; 50 cents per hundred.

1—Olive Leaves, separate; 2—Ancient Landmarks, separate; 3—Forty Questions on Immortality. 4—Scripture Searchers, one, two, three, four, five and six.

The above Tracts are on hand, and orders can be filled at once. Let us scatter them. Orders with the cash are solicited. Persons ordering tracts should order as much or more than fifty cents worth, as packages of tracts containing eight ounces or more go cheaper than smaller quantities. Those who buy books to sell will receive them at a liberal discount. The poor can have them free by sending stamps to pay the postage,—and those that FEEL poor also.

Address H. L. Hastings, Providence, R. I.

For sale also by N. Branch, Moline, Ill.; G. W. Young, 138 William St., New York.

* The Landmarks are issued in setts of six Nos. which can be separated for distribution. The sett contains, The Coming and Kingdom of Christ, by 20,000 Baptists; the Duration of the Earth, by A. Clarke; Hope and Duty of the Church, by M. Henry; Restitution, by Cyril; Warning Voice, by Cotton Mather; Loving Christ's Appearing, by Baxter.

† The Olive Leaves are three neat four-page tracts that can be separated for distribution, No. One, Little Children, Love one Another; two, The One Resting Place; three, My Friend; four, Wondrous Love; five, Abundant Grace; six, Go in Peace, by Hastings. Just the thing to distribute among all classes of saints and sinners.

Glad Tidings: or [illegible] and do are to [illegible] destruction of wicked men and devils, at the judgment. All texts [illegible] and arranged. By J. Blain. Price 3 cts.—postage 1 cent.

The Three Kingdoms: or, the Kingdom of God the Father, the Kingdom of Satan, the Kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $4.00 per hundred, 50 cts. per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

☞ The above tracts and books can be obtained of our agent in Portland, [illegible] Emmons, No. 5 Summer street. [illegible]

☞ The following books [illegible] be had of J. R. Waite, Warwick, [illegible]

The Harp, by Eld. [illegible] [illegible]

Original Contributions.

For the Crisis.

To the Watchmen.

Watchman on yon mountain height, Isa. 21: 11.
Divine Scriptures give thee light! Ps 119: 105.
Are there signs of coming day, Matt. 24: 3.
When the Lord shall reign for whom we pray; Rev. 11: 17.
Where night comes not, all darkness fled, Rev. 21: 25.
No pain afflicts, none mourn the dead; Rev. 21: 4.
Where sighs, and tears, and woes are past, Rev. 21: 4.
And endless joy has come at last? Isa. 35: 10.
Say, ye who watch on Zion's hill, Isa. 62: 6.
Does all this news of coming ill, Jer. 25: 29.
Perplexing worldly men with fear, Luke 21: 25.
Bespeak to us God's kingdom near? Luke 21: 31.
Are not those warriors—men of might— Joel 3: 9.
(Whose cry and watchword is for right,)
The men of Joel—ancient Seer— Joel 3: 11
Calling their armies to draw near? Joel 3: 12.
Is not the trumpet sounding war, Ezek. 33: 3.
To gather nations from afar, Zeph. 3: 8.
On Armageddon's noted plain, Rev. 16. 16.
And fill its borders with the slain? Jer 25. 33.
Is Gog and Magog in the fray; Ezek. 38. 2.
And these the groans of latter day, Rom. 8 23.
For Christ to come, our sovereign Lord, Luke 19 7, 8.
Fulfill and vindicate his word? Ezek 37: 28.
Are these the "perils" of "last days," 2 Tim 3: 1.
When men and children love their ways, 2 Tim 3 2.
(Though godliness and love profess,) 2 Tim 3 5.
To boast in pride and wickedness? 2 Tim 3 2
Have we not come to latter times, 1 Tim. 4: 1
When world and church abound in crimes, Matt. 24. 12.
And men of faith "the faith depart," 1 Tim. 4 1.
Seduced by spirits—devil's art? Rev 20. 10.
If here we've come, then tell the flock, Acts 20 28.
Who trust in Christ—in God their Rock, Matt 16: 18.
Rehearse to them the gladsome story, Isa. 40 9, 10.
Of coming rest—eternal glory; 2 Tim. 2 10.
Go, say to them, their living Head Col. 3 4.
Is soon to wake his sleeping dead, 1 Thess 4 16.
And change his waiting saints of worth, 1 Cor 15 51
To reign triumphant on the earth. Rev 5 10.
And also to the nations go, Rev 14 6.
Tell all their state, of coming woe 2 Thess. 1 7-8.
On all the world, as came the flood, Matt. 24 38, 39.
And clear your skirts of sinners' blood, Ezek. 3 18, 19.
Point them to Christ, the Son of God, Acts 17 30, 31.
Who once this vale of sorrow trod Matt. 26 38.
For the sinner's absolution, 1 John 1 9.
Preach salvation,—restitution Acts 3 19, 21

I. C. WELLCOME.

Richmond, Me., Oct. 12th, 1859.

For the Crisis.

Friends of Jesus.

BY J. HEMENWAY.

"Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you."—John 15: 14.

There is a kind of friendship in the world that is not desirable, from the fact that it springs from a principle of selfishness, and continues so long as we are able to bestow favors to gratify the selfish desires of those who profess to be our friends. Such are our friends, for the sake of personal favors that they expect to receive at our hands. When adversity frowns upon us and we need friends, they forsake us, showing that they professed friendship only to gain the favor we were able to bestow. Such friends are but enemies in disguise, seeking our wealth, and when the end for which they profess friendship can better be obtained by being opposed to our welfare, they become our worst enemies. Such is the friendship of the world,—"earthly, sensual and devilish."

There is a friendship a grade higher than the above, that springs from a consciousness of indebtedness for favors bestowed. It is but payment of debt, and will continue towards us until the individual becomes forgetful of the favor bestowed, or until they feel that they have bestowed an equivalent; and then the friendship ceases. If we would have them for friends, we must keep them indebted to us for favor. We must buy them up in advance. Such would be friends in adversity; not from a principle of benevolence, but from a sense of indebtedness.

True friendship is founded in a disinterested benevolence. It is not governed by selfishness, or bought with favors; but gushes forth from a fountain of pure compassion and love. It weeps with those that weep, and mourns with those that mourn. It lives in acts of kindness and benevolence towards the human race, of all grades and characters.

With these remarks by way of introduction—we pass to inquire,

I. Why should we be friends of Jesus?
II. What are the tests of friendship?
III. The benefit derived from that friendship.

I. Why we should be friends of Jesus?

1st. We should be his friends in consideration of his compassion and love for us in our lost and ruined condition. We were lost—destined to perish without hope. Jesus, when we had no friend to help us, came to our relief, bound up our wounds, and made ample provision for all our wants. "He was rich, but for our sakes became poor, that we through his poverty might be made rich." Behold the immaculate Son of God! With our nature, suffering with and for suffering humanity; numbered with the poverty-stricken sons of [illegible] doing [illegible] and acquainted with grief;" "He bore our griefs and carried our sorrows;" "He was wounded for our transgressions; he was bruised for our iniquities;" "He was oppressed, and he was afflicted, yet he opened not his mouth;" "He was taken from prison, and from judgment; he was cut off out of the land of the living; and he made his grave with the wicked, and with the rich in his death;" "He did no violence, neither was any deceit in his mouth;" "He was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was upon him, and with his stripes we are healed."

Oh, wondrous love! Who would not be a friend to such an one? None, but those in whose heart there is no love for that which is lovely, no compassion for suffering, no gratitude for blessings bestowed. None, but those in whose hearts the fountain of love is dried up, and from whence the springs of benevolence cease to flow.

2d. We should be his friends in consideration of what he is to us now.

He is our "High Priest," through whom we can become reconciled to God; the fountain in which we can wash and be cleansed from all our guilt. He invites us to come just as we are, guilty, unthankful and unholy; sick, wounded and dying, and assures us that he is our friend, who will wash away our guilt, heal our wounds, and give us eternal life. He is our friend in prosperity and in adversity, and one that will be a friend when all others forsake us. He is the same unchanging friend, bestowing blessings as we need.

3d. We should be his friend in consideration of our need of him for a friend in the future.

We may be able to endure the trials of life, bear its burdens, suffer its disappointments, drink at its fountains of pleasure, wear its honors, and feel that we can get through life without Jesus for a friend; but when life's story is told, its joys ended, its fountains of pleasure dried up, its honors faded, its hopes blasted, and the trump of God shall summon us to the judgment,—then we shall need Jesus for our friend, and without him for a friend we perish forever. Therefore let us be his friends now that he may be our friend then. Let not these golden hours of probation pass away unimproved, but secure the friendship of Jesus at the loss of all things, that you may wear the crown of glory that shall never fade away.

II. What are the tests of friendship?

The text requires a practical demonstration of our friendship: "Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you." That is, you will prove the friendship you profess to be true, by your acts in life. We do not prove ourselves to be his friends by our words only, neither by doing one or two things that Jesus commands; but by doing whatsoever he commands. Let us notice some of his commands, and bring the test to bear upon our professions of friendship. "This is my commandment, that ye love one another, as I have loved you."—John 15: 12. We have here not only the command to love, but the required degree of love is stated in language that cannot be mistaken,—"As I have loved you." How did Jesus love us? He loved us in our poverty. He loved us in weaknesses, in our failings and short-comings. He gave a practical demonstration of his love, in acts of benevolence, in suffering, in an interest in our welfare; and, to crown the whole with glory, laid down his life for us.

We pass to notice some tests of our friendship according to the command quoted.

1st. We shall love his servants.

Jesus has commissioned men to go out into the world, to advance his cause and save men. In order to do the work faithfully, they must devote their time to the work, and in order that they may, their wants must be supplied; and he has given command that you love them, and that you give a practical demonstration of that love in supplying their wants. This love should be practical, not only when the preacher has come among you and fed you with the bread of life, and so you gave him money as an equivalent; but you should love him practically, while he leaves his home and friends to go out and break up new ground in the gospel field. The friendship that is manifested to the preacher only when he feeds you, is like the friendship of the world, that bestows favors only as they receive; but the love that is like Christ, springs from a pure fountain of disinterested benevolence, and of love to the cause of Christ at large. If we love as he loved, we shall not have respect to persons in our acts of benevolence. The Lord has some Pauls, and some Johns in the field; and then there are some of those "fishermen" preachers, that have not much eloquence to commend them; but they will do their work just as well, although there may not be that nice finish that others put on; they are friends of Jesus. Feed them, for Jesus says, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my friends, ye have done it unto me." The cause of Christ languishes this day, for the want of true friends to Jesus.

2d. We shall love one another.

This love will be developed practically in our interest for the spiritual welfare of the church, in watching over one another for good. If one member of the family gets cold and backslides, we shall not pounce upon him like a wolf upon a lamb; but we shall approach him in the spirit of meekness and love, and so win him back to the fold. If one errs from the faith, and advocates that which tends to evil, we shall manifest the love of Christ in trying to win such with the manifestation of love for them, and thus prove that we are friends of Jesus.

3d. The friends of Jesus will interest themselves in the prosperity of his cause.

The great end of the gospel is to save men; it is the work of Christ. If we are the friends of Jesus, we shall give a practical demonstration of our friendship in working together with him—in laboring to save men, by sending the gospel into new fields, and by trying to lead men to a knowledge of the truth and by personal effort. If we love as Jesus loved us, we shall use all lawful means to build up the cause, by devising ways and means to unite our strength and work together. Let us prove our friendship by doing whatsoever he commands.

III. The benefit derived from that friendship.

By becoming friends of Jesus, we secure a friend who is true, one who is near to us in all our trials and troubles, and is pleased to bestow blessings that are lasting. We secure a friend able to save us from the evils that surround us in this life. By thus securing him, we become reconciled to God, and find peace to a troubled conscience. We become heirs to a crown of life, which will be given at his coming,—heirs to an everlasting inheritance, incorruptible, undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for those who are kept by the power of God, through faith, unto salvation, ready to be revealed in the last time. We shall be called to the marriage supper of our Friend, and join with the heavenly harpers in singing redemption's song. We shall walk the golden streets of the New Jerusalem, and range the blissful fields of Paradise restored, pluck fruit from Life's fair tree, and drink from Life's healing stream, and reign as kings and priests unto God forevermore. Amen and amen.

For the Crisis.

Plan of Redemption.

One or two things appear evident from nature and reason: That the human family falls in death, and death will hold an eternal dominion over them; or secondly, God, who is infinite in goodness, has introduced a plan of redemption by which man may be redeemed. In relation to the final position, I will briefly state, that infinite wisdom brought "life and immortality to light through the gospel."—2 Tim 1: 10. If so, nature nor reason do not reveal future life. With all of nature's illumination or reason's brightest rays, aside from revelation, all men would exclaim at death's door, like a certain infidel, "It is a leap in the dark."

If our heavenly Father has been so kind as to introduce a plan to give man future life, we may reasonably expect the scheme would meet the demands of our mortal nature, and be adapted to all classes of every age—the infant—the child, by age sufficient, who is accountable—those of riper years, and the aged.

Again I remark, all laws imposed by our great Benefactor we may expect, when complied with, are for our best interest under all circumstances and relations of the present life. True, we may suffer and meet trials—find ourselves in a war, waxing hot—in a race, running hard—on duty that is very wearisome—in difficulties very perplexing—in storms hard to face—in want hard to bear, but this, I apprehend, is not because God's plan is not wisely adapted, or his obligation not in harmony with our best good, even in the present life, but in consequence of man's not complying with God's arrangement. If the whole human family was obedient to God's laws, I need not tell you there would be kind, peaceful and happy families, neighborhoods and communities.

Our heavenly Father introducing a scheme of human redemption, may we not expect all connected with that plan would tend to that object? The objector may say, man's home is to be redeemed as well as men. Grant it, but the home being redeemed, does not depend on its accountability. Not so with man. Man is accountable. He is so recognized in every government of the world; the most monarchical down to the family circle. His Creator, who is infinite in wisdom, thus views him.

We will look at the scheme that our Creator has introduced, and see if man's redemption is kept prominent.

The glorious plan of redemption is revealed to us by the prophets, our Savior and apostles. Their teachings place before the human family the great and all-important object of redemption. The obligations imposed are directly to this end. The exceeding great and precious promises are a great incentive to this object. God's great goodness and forbearance in different ages has been for man's salvation. The threats recorded are to arouse men to escape the judgments impending, and lay hold of the life set before him. The contrast of temporal with eternal things, are strong appeals to man's better judgment to secure the object for which he is placed on earth, here and hereafter. Our Savior's mission to earth only confirms these things; his love for man manifested in his whole life tends to this end; his death demonstrates this fact. The gift of the Holy Ghost has not another object in view, but to give potency to truth to accomplish the design of God's scheme to fallen man. The preachers of the word in all ages are sent out on the same mission—to secure the same object, if sent by God.

The church—her position—the salt of earth, light of the world, is to unite with God the Father, Jesus Christ his Son, Angels, his messengers, Holy Ghost his Spirit, the word its sword, and preachers his servants, in the glorious work of the redemption of man. What a scheme is this! It is worthy of the great God; it elevates man here, suppresses his brutish disposition, enlarges his contracted ideas, destroys contemptible self, makes him meek, not proud, haughty or self-conceited. Makes him righteous, not deceitful, dishonest, hypocritical. Makes him noble and benevolent, not selfish or superstitious. In a word, it makes him a christian,—a pure, holy, devoted, self-sacrificing, God-honoring man.

This scheme not only elevates a man morally here and enables him to carry out the design of his Creator, but gives him a blessed hope of things good and desirable in the world to come. The true riches in contrast to the paltry rust and corrupt riches of earth, honor worthy, instead of petty offices, or a tyrannical monarch's; blooming youth for age, wisdom for ignorance; strength for weakness, glory for shame; happiness for sorrow, life unending, crowns unfading, palms ever waving, rejoicing never ending, love unbounding; a nature never corrupting. O what a royal company this will be, treading earth in its paradisiacal, incorruptible, undefiled and unfading state, singing with immortal beings, sweet angelic voices, the song of redemption—"Worthy is the Lamb that was slain."

Now, as God's plan is to save man, shall we not labor for this object? As revelation was given for man to attain this end, shall we not keep in harmony with revelation? As Christ's mission is, to confirm and carry out this heavenly theme, shall we not unite our efforts with the Lord, and try to save some from destruction? As angels have evinced their interest in men's redemption, shall we be indifferent to the best interest of our children and fellow man? As the Holy Ghost is given for this same object, shall we not put forth a greater effort in this direction? Prophets have given us an example; Christ has given the command, the Holy Spirit is pressing it to our hearts—to go forth weeping bearing precious seed.

Brethren, suffer a word of exhortation. I fear we have, to some extent, lost sight of the great object of man's redemption, which has been and still should be always kept before the mind of believers. It is our specific work. If God has revealed more truth in this age than former ages, it is to make us feel the more for sinners and use that truth with that direct object. Make every truth tell to this end. Alienation and division obtains when we theorize to the expense of man's salvation. I beg of you not to let your idol-theory blind you to this object. Pray before God until you can feel, like Paul, to warn men day and night with tears. Let every sermon be filled with Christ and presented with the express object to save sinners. Do not be satisfied, however well you may preach, unless this object is reached. Let all of our plans be arranged to this end; our prayers earnest for God to help in this work; and if all of the church will turn their minds, with the ministry, to attain this end, while time does last, we shall see better days. For a perishing world, your own interest, and God's sake, do it! Lord Jesus, help!

W. PRATT.

Selections.

Thoughts for the Times.

The events of the times give force to the following remarks, which we quote from a late "Home Missionary." The thoughts expressed will bear to be repeated, and especially urged upon the attention of parents and christians. The importance of establishing "a firm basis of religious principle"—enthroning the commands of our Maker above all law, in the hearts of the rising generation cannot be over-estimated.

Many voices reiterate the uttered and unuttered convictions that the oft-repeated petition of every branch of the christian church is beginning to be answered.

"Arm of the Lord, awake! awake!
Put on thy strength, the nations shake,
And let the world adoring see
Triumphs of mercy wrought by Thee."

There may be dark and stormy waters that shall rise and surge around us, nevertheless the divine promises are sure. His counsel shall stand. And while "He shall turn, overturn, overturn—till He whose right it is shall reign, King of nations"—His people may earnestly watch and pray and wait, doing with their might what their hands find to do.

"A future of appalling greatness is coming fast upon the people of this land. A few generations more, and the world will behold on this western continent, either most terrible catastrophies or a glorious and an eternal triumph. The problem of mankind's destiny for ages to come, is to be solved here. We shall need a great abundance of that heavenly salt and that celestial light which are found only in the [illegible] in corruption, and cloud with premature darkness the bright day which seems to be dawning. We are called upon by the most tender appeals which can be addressed to the human heart, by motives of solemn and overwhelming import, absolutely immense in their grandeur, to be faithful to the duties of our day, and to secure to the next generations, upon whom will probably come some of "the severest trials which have ever visited humanity, the advantage of a firm basis of religious principles. It is necessary for our temporal security, for the permanence of our institutions and the freedom and peace of our homes, that we should thoroughly christianise these communities, enthroning religion above all other law, giving the stated ministrations of christian truth, in some form, to every family, and closing every public school of iniquity. If we neglect to do so, then there is nothing better before us than what we have so often seen on the continent of Europe, corruption, oppression, anarchy, gloom, fear, alternate fury, and despair. Such must be the lot of nations that know not God. And in this social ruin, what devastation of individual souls, thousands and millions spending the day of their probation in sins and bitter woes, and dying under a cloud."—Ex.

Bearing the Cross.

The heavier cross, the nearer heaven;
No cross without, no God within.
Death, judgment from the heart are driven
Amidst the world's false glare and din.
Oh happy he, with all his loss,
Whom God hath set beneath the cross!

The heavier cross, the stronger faith;
The loaded palm strikes deeper root;
The vine-juice sweetly issueth
When men have pressed the clustered fruit;
And courage grows where dangers come,
Like pearls beneath the salt sea foam.

The heavier cross, the heartier prayer,
The bruised herbs most fragrant are.
If wind and sky were always fair,
The sailor would not watch the star,
And David's Psalms had ne'er been sung,
If grief his heart had never wrung.

The heavier cross, the more aspiring;
From vales we climb to mountain crest;
The pilgrim, of the desert tiring,
Longs for the Canaan of his rest.
The dove has here no rest in sight,
And to the ark she wings her flight.

The heavier cross, the easier dying,
Death is a friendlier face to see,
To life's decay one bids defying,—
From life's distress one then is free.
The cross sublimely lifts her faith
To Him who triumphed over death.

Thou Crucified! the cross I carry—
The longer may it dearer be;
And, lest I faint, whilst here I tarry,
Implant thou such a heart in me,
That faith, hope, love may flourish there,
Till for my cross the crown I wear!

Prayer Meeting on a Mountain.

The following is a translation of a communication in a Welsh paper, called Borrer Cymora, of the 21st of August, describing a prayer meeting held near the mine works of Trongoch, Wales:

It was held in the open air, on a high mountain. The masters of the mine-works gave orders that on account of the meeting no work should be done on that day, and they themselves attended. It was the most wonderful prayer meeting I ever witnessed. There were some of every denomination present, and two languages were used. The number of those assembled was more than 3,000. At the meeting at 10 o'clock, nine prayed, and short addresses were given at intervals. Three prayed in succession, two Welshmen and an Englishman between them, and then a verse of a hymn was sung. The vast assembly all knelt at prayer, and I saw two or three on their knees, who, I feel assured, had never been seen before on their knees in prayer, but they knelt down on that day. Heaven poured down its blessings in a powerful and irresistible manner, so that scores were praying, and hundreds were weeping and crying out, "Praised be God." The chief subjects in the prayers were a thanksgiving for that great unparalleled visitation granted us by God, manifested in the conversion of so many thousands in our country, together with a prayer that he would go on to save the world, a supplication for natural rain for the earth, and for the restoration of peace in Italy. At two o'clock thirteen prayed, and short addresses were delivered between the prayers, the whole was finished in two hours, and all returned home. At seven, all went to their separate chapels in the neighborhood, and the holy fire was carried home in their bosoms by many. What a scene! three thousand people on a high mountain in prayer to God! I wish there was an artist present, capable of giving a correct representation of the scene. The subjects of their prayers, what could be more suitable and more interesting?

INSTINCT OF A BIRD.—During a fire last Saturday, a startling was observed in her nest on a tree not far distant from the burning barn. As the flames approached, the maternal anxiety of the poor bird was visible by her uneasy flittings about the nest. The danger became more threatening. At last she was seen to take one of her young ones and remove it to a remote spot. This she repeated five times, and thus succeeded in saving the five nestlings.—Dover Chron.

Hygiene.

"THIS IS FOR YOUR HEALTH."—Paul.

Eating and Sleeping.

Hall's Journal of Health says:—"For persons who eat three times a day, it is amply sufficient to make the last meal of cold bread-and-butter, and a cup of warm drink. No one can starve on it, while a perseverance in the habit soon begets a vigorous appetite for breakfast, so promising of a day of real comfort.

"Yes, yes; and by omitting the third [illegible] night of sound sleep will not find on awakening in the morning a bad taste in his mouth, so indicative of general foulness.

"If one would always have a sweet mouth and a clean tongue, he can secure them both by simply ceasing to overtax his stomach. This frequent eating is an idle, mischievous habit, ruinous of both health and comfort, and it prevents the individual from receiving the great amount of enjoyment which it was intended he should receive from eating, and which is necessary to perfect nutrition.

"Nothing should be eaten between the regular meals, whether these meals are taken either two or three times a day; nor should one eat so that the quantity ingested will induce heaviness or uncomfortable feelings.

"The cook tastes the food she prepares; and by this frequent tasting she destroys both the relish for her meals, and her health. There are many house-keepers who have the same pernicious habit.

"We know farmers who at the close of a long summer day, during which they have eaten heartily five times, and worked hard from four o'clock in the morning to nine in the night, eat freely just before going to bed.

"The stomach, already enfeebled by constant working under disadvantageous circumstances, has now imposed on it an impracticable task, and the men lie down to sleep! Next morning they are nerveless—have scarcely slept all night—feel more wearied than they did when they lay down—and on the whole think a farmer lives a dog's life. So he does, so far as he sinks to mere animalism—living to eat—tasking his digestive apparatus at the expense of health, life and life's enjoyment. So on from day to day, till nature makes a desperate effort to rid the body of the superfluous food introduced into it, burning it up by fever, or expelling it by some different remedial effort.

"Farmers, being so much in the open air, with abundant exercise, should be the healthiest people, but like others who are cursed with 'abundance of bread,' they are rheumatic, billious, and dyspeptic. This is a shame and a sin. Farmers, it is a sin. Your liver complaints, chill-fevers, are as unnecessary as is the plague. Health and sweet sleep will come to you when you need, unless by bad habits you drive them away. 'Go, and sin no more.'"

The Glorious Sunshine.

Dr. Kane and his men, in their arctic voyage, had abundance of exercise, and the purest and most luscious air, nor were they exposed to malarias or miasm; in such a pure cold air there was no cause of noxious exhalations, and yet they had to contend against disease, in consequence of the mischievous effects of the absence of sunshine for many weeks together.

The general reader may be familiar with the observation of an eminent merchant that his book-keepers soon became ill, and some of them died; the office being in a room where no sun-shine ever came; on changing to an upper room, the windows of which faced the sun, there was an immediate and permanent removal of the difficulty.

Dogs kept in dark, damp cellars become tuberculous in a few weeks, and die of consumption.

A New York merchant of wealth purchased a farm out west for a promising son, within a year he became unwell. Inquiries were made as to his sleeping room, the answer was, that he had for his chamber a large upper room, well lighted. His sister paid him a visit, and soon observed that his clothing in his wardrobe was damp, while that in the drawers was actually moulded, when the fact presented itself that the room was on the north side of the house, overlooking an immense flat prairie, and that no ray of sunshine ever entered from one year's end to another. He returned to New York and died of tubercular disease, which, with great certainty, was hastened, if not originated, by the unfortunate position of his chamber. The lesson is, that the family room, the sleeping apartment, the study, in short, any apartment which is occupied for the greater part of each twenty-four hours, should have its windows facing the south, as nearly as possible, so that the glad sunshine may lighten it up, and keep it warm and dry, and pure.—Dr. Hall.

About the Feet.

WATER-PROOF BLACKING NOT USEFUL.

A manufacturer sends us some boxes of "Water-Proof Blacking—warranted to render boots, shoes and all kinds of leather perfectly impervious to moisture," with the request that it should be "favorably noticed in the American Agriculturist, and a long advertisement will be inserted." We cannot oblige the sender for two important reasons. 1st. We never sell "notices," and advertisements are never solicited—at least on any such terms. 2d. We don't believe in these "water-proof blackings," and of course advise people not to use them. As a general thing, blacking of any kind rots leather, and especially is this the case with any thing that stops the pores. The leather is injured, and the feet are [illegible] is kept from escaping by stopping the pores with various compounds, tallow, etc. Not unfrequently a gill of watery vapor escapes from the feet during a day. The amount varies in different persons, and with the age, physical condition, or health, etc. If India rubber boots, or those saturated with oil, grease, or other impervious substances, be worn, this moisture is in a measure retained, though some of it escapes upward along the legs. Every one accustomed to oil or grease their boots all over, must have noticed, that for a day or two after the application the socks get nearly wet enough to wring out.

India rubber over-shoes injure or "rot" leather, as is well known; but it is not the mere contact of the rubber, for that of itself would preserve leather. On the contrary, it is the moisture retained by the rubber which keeps the boots or shoes damp, and eventually destroys them.

Latterly, since we have examined this subject, our practice has been never to grease boots or shoes, even with tallow, except once or twice on the bottoms and around the sides on the soles, and we are sure they wear much longer than formerly. The parts over the tops of the feet are left as open as possible, so that perspiration can freely escape. This leaves the feet dry and comfortable, and the leather rarely rots, but lasts until actually worn through. If from any cause the boots become very dry and stiff, a little tanner's or neat's foot oil is applied only to soften them. When necessary to wade through much water, a thin coat of oil is applied to the upper leather to make the water "slip off," but not enough to saturate the pores. When rubbers are needed, they are removed as soon as circumstances will admit to allow the leather to dry speedily. Nothing adds more to comfort, health, and durability of leather, than a frequent change of socks, two or three times a day, when the feet are continually exposed to much water, or when health is poor. The dry socks absorb the moisture, to the benefit of both feet and leather.

The best protection for the feet is a pair of leather boots or shoes with thick uppers, and especially thick soles,—so thick as not to allow the entrance of water, or the free passage of heat or cold, but the pores so open as to allow moisture to escape. Coarse cow-hide boots and shoes are not only cheap, but philosophical.

Females, and men, or children, who are exposed to the wet ground only part of the day, should keep thick shoes to put on when going out; or have a pair of India rubber sandals, (shoes with straps and openings over the top of the foot,) and put these on only when going upon wet, damp, or cold ground.—American Agriculturist.

EASY METHOD OF EXTRACTING FOREIGN BODIES FROM THE EYELIDS.—Dr. Leon Renard, in a note to the editor of the Union Medicale, describes the following method of extracting small substances which have become lodged in the groove formed by the reflection of the conjunctiva from the upper lid to the sclerotic, and which often cannot be seen, even when the lid is inverted. The lid being seized at its angles between the thumb and forefinger of each hand, is to be gently drawn forward and downward, as far as possible, over the lower lid, and retained there for about a minute. On allowing the upper lid to return to its normal position, the flow of tears will carry off the foreign body, which will usually be found on the lower lid, or on the cheek. The writer states that he has often found this simple method of the greatest utility and convenience.

CURE OF CROUP.—If a child is taken with croup, instantly apply cold water, ice water if possible, suddenly and freely to the neck and chest with a sponge. The breathing will be almost instantly relieved. As soon as possible let the sufferer drink as much as it can; then wipe it dry, cover it up warm, and soon a quiet slumber will relieve the parent's anxiety, and lead the heart in thankfulness to the Power which has given to the pure gushing fountain such medical qualities.

THE CRISIS.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION,

Payable in Advance.

For a single copy one year............$2.00
For a single copy 6 months............1.00
For a single copy 3 months............50
Five copies to one address for 6 months..[illegible]
Ten copies to one address for 6 months..[illegible]
Twenty copies to one address, 6 months..[illegible]
Thirty copies to one address, 6 months..[illegible]

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the paper within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability, when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send as much in addition to their subscriptions as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private. Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. Miles Grant, Boston, Mass.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts, and 26 cents to any other part of the United States.

CANADA [illegible]

The World's Crisis.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 224. BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 28, 1859. VOL. X. NO. [illegible]

The World's Crisis
IS PUBLISHED
EVERY WEDNESDAY MORNING
AT
No. 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
HENRY V. DAVIS, JOHN COUCH, | MILES GRANT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

MILES GRANT, Editor.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially, the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and the final destruction of the wicked.

For terms, see fourth page.

Original Contributions.

For the Crisis.

Musings.

BY S. S. BREWER.

To the Kingdom, the Kingdom, in hope we now steer;
The wrecks of vast empires are strewn in our rear;
By the aid of our Chart, as light comes from above,
We strive to be perfect in faith, hope, and love.

O Eden, fair Eden, the home of the blest,
'Mid thy undying pleasures the ransomed shall rest,
And roll their loud anthems across thy vast plains,
Hosanna to Jesus! forever he reigns!

The River, the River, we'll stand on thy side,
For thy clear crystal stream shall eternally glide;
Upon thy fair margin I hope soon to meet,
With transports of joy, the ransomed to greet.

Thy Highlands, thy Highlands, I long to b hold;
How beauteous they shine as if burnished with gold!
Mid thy bowers so fragrant, perfuming the air,
In the unending future we oft shall repair.

Thy vallies, thy vallies, thy rills and thy bowers,
All teeming with perfect and unfading flowers,
The sweet warblers sing in the evergreen trees,
And their matins chime sweetly in the murmuring breeze.

The Ransomed, the Ransomed, all clad in pure white,
A palm bearing throng, in ecstatic delight,
Are pealing their anthems in jubilant strains—
Hallelujah to Jesus! forever he reigns!

The Judgment, the Judgment is yet to be past;
The trumpet must sound—all hear its dread blast;
Tis then all the blood washed shall stand on that shore,
Where sickness and sorrow molest them no more!

For the Crisis.

The Spiritual Temple.

A DISCOURSE.

"And He shall bring forth the Head-stone thereof with shoutings, crying, Grace, grace unto it."—Zech. 4: 7.

In this chapter, the prophet sets before us the golden symbols, by which are illustrated—the relation existing between "the Lord of the whole earth," his church, and the instrumentalities in use, in the upbuilding of the great spiritual temple.

The text presents us with the spiritual temple completed under the hand of the great Master Builder, and the joys and shoutings of the occasion. I wish to consider,—

1. Who is the Master Builder of this temple?

2. The materials used in its construction.

3. When its foundation was laid; and when the superstructure will be finished.

4. The joy of the occasion of its completion.

On the erection of an important building, one requiring great responsibility and wisdom in its construction, where there are many difficulties to overcome, and constant calculation, diligence, and activity, requisite to complete all the work after the draft and at the specified time; much depends, yea, all depends upon the character and ability of the Master Builder. If he has the fidelity, ability, wisdom, executive skill and power requisite, then there can be no fears as to the issue, and the desired result being attained.

Such is the character and ability of the great Master Builder of the spiritual temple now in process of erection. "Who art thou, oh great mountain?" i. e., what mighty obstacle, hindrance, or embarrassment in the way of its foundation being laid and its superstructure being completed, that He cannot remove and overcome? "I am against thee, oh destroying mountain, saith the Lord." "Before Zerubbabel thou shalt become a plain: and he shall bring forth the head-stone thereof with shoutings, crying, Grace, grace unto it." "The hands of Zerubbabel have laid the foundation of this house; and his hands shall finish it."

Zerubbabel, the governor of Judea, was the appointed overseer, on the rebuilding of the temple at Jerusalem, on the restoration of the children of Israel from the Assyrio-Babylonian captivity. The elders of the Jews with Zerubbabel at their head, builded and finished the temple according to the commandment of the God of Israel, through the prophesying of Haggai the prophet, and Zechariah the son of Iddo.

Zerubbabel, governor of Judea, therefore, becomes the type of our Lord's Christ—the governor, by birth and lineal descent from David, of Judea; and "the Lord of the whole earth." His hands have laid the foundation of the spiritual temple, and His hands shall finish it. Before Him all hindrances give way, and obstacles are removed; "Every valley shall be filled, and every mountain and hill shall be brought low; and the crooked shall be made straight, and the rough ways shall be made smooth; and all flesh shall see the salvation of God." "Who hath despised the day of small things?"—the little beginnings, and the "little flock," or company engaged as laborers on the building?—"for they shall rejoice, and shall see the plummet in the hand of Zerubbabel, with those seven." The "plummet" in the hand, designates the "Judge of all the earth," as the Master Builder; who has said, "Judgment also will I lay to the line, and righteousness to the plummet." "Those seven," are "the eyes of the Lord which run to and fro through the whole earth." Therefore, "the Judge of all the earth," symbolized by the plummet in the hand; and the Omniscient One, symbolized by "those seven." designate the Lord's Christ to be the Master Builder of the spiritual temple.

And "who shall despise the day of small things?" When they see Him of whom it is written:—"And thou, Bethlehem, in the land of Judah, art not the least among the princes of Judah: for out of thee shall come a governor, that shall rule my people Israel." Engaged as the Master Builder of this great work:—"The Lord of the whole earth,"—"the Judge of all the earth,"—the Omniscient One? Who will fear, that the building already begun under His hands, will not go up to its final completion at the time appointed? or that it will fail to be finished after the pattern; or of good material that will endure? Remember that the Almighty and Omniscient One, the Governor of the nations and His people Israel, is the one engaged in this work; and that He will not rest, till His hands have finished it! Be careful, ye builders! how you bring hay, wood, and stubble," to be put into "God's building!" All such material will be but so much rubbish to be burned in the great day; and you suffer the loss of all your labor. Be careful, ye deceived! good and precious stones alone, will stand the purging fires of the final day of trial. Be alarmed, ye unbelievers! lest you be not quarried from earth, and are found unfit to be placed upon the foundation of this beautiful structure that shall stand forever as the temple of God. The overseer of this work is the Lord and Judge of the whole earth! This leads us to consider,—

2. The materials used in its construction.

On the erection of great and important buildings, a corner stone is usually laid first, with considerable care, interest, and ceremony. The date and era of its occurrence, public documents, together with a record of the civil and religious rulers and authorities, are deposited with it. So there has been laid "a corner stone" to the great spiritual building, agreeable to the prediction, "Behold, I lay in Zion for a foundation a stone, a tried stone, a precious corner stone, a sure foundation." This is "the stone of Israel," as predicted by Jacob; and of whom the Apostle says, "Unto you therefore which believe, He is precious; but unto them which be disobedient, the stone which the builders disallowed, the same is made the head of the corner, and a stone of stumbling and a rock of offence, even to them which stumble at the Word, being disobedient: whereunto also they were appointed." Though this "corner stone" was set at naught by Jewish builders, and has been rejected by the disobedient and unbelieving of all ages, yet He has been "laid in Zion, a sure foundation."

"Jesus Christ" is this "chief corner stone." Jesus Christ in his humanity; and when "the Word was made flesh." He is a sure, perfect, sound, tried, and precious, foundation stone. Perfect in obedience; made perfect by suffering; and perfected in His humanity by the resurrection from the dead of His body, which is now made immortal, eternal, and glorious! "Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ." The world of unbelievers who have despised and rejected Him, have attempted and still attempt to lay other foundations; but the Lord upturns them in due time from their beds: as He did the work of the Emperor of Julian the apostate, in his attempt to rebuild the temple at Jerusalem in defiance of the God of heaven.

Amianus Marcellinus, a Latin author of that period, who himself was an enemy of christianity, says, "Alypus of Antioch, set himself to the vigorous execution of his charge, and was assisted by the governor of the province; but horrible balls of fire breaking out near the foundation with repeated attacks, rendered the place inaccessible to the scorched workmen from time to time, and the element resolutely driving them to a distance, the enterprise was dropped."

So it will be with all those who in defiance of the God of Heaven, endeavor to lay "other foundation, than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ." Their work will be abortive; God will destroy it and them. The Roman Catholic church, which arrogates to herself catholicity and infallibility, has laid down Peter's humanity; rejecting his inspired words concerning Christ as the Rock; and claims that he is the rock, or corner stone, upon which the spiritual temple is built! But their whole building is like a leaning tower, and bowing wall, that will soon topple to its fall; and great will be the ruin thereof! It will be "destroyed by the brightness of Christ's coming." And also that other great antichristian temple,—Mohammedanism; founded on Mohammed as the chief corner stone, and towering at one time to heaven, so that its shadow was seen and admired by three-fourths of the people of the globe! It is now however fast crumbling to ruins, and soon it will be thrown down, and not one stone be left upon another. So with Mormonism, this latter day temple, filled with impurity, sighs, cries, and oppression; founded on Joe Smith and his pretended revelation and now under Brigham Young, as the chief guiding star! It shall pass away. And Spiritualism, founded on the pretended marvelous revelations of the spirits of demons; and which boasts great things! This temple will fall, and the folly of its builders will be made manifest to all men, as were the pretended wonders and works of Jannes and Jambres, who withstood Moses. All systems of falsehood and error, founded not on Jesus Christ and his word, are destined to the same end, however "broad" a foundation they lay, and however "broad" a "church" they build! They will be shaken, and crumble to ruins, for "He shall shake the heavens and the earth," and those things only shall endure which cannot be shaken. The church and kingdom of Jesus Christ will stand forever! "There is salvation in no other; for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved."

"Jesus Christ, the chief corner stone," was laid amid the wonder and joy of heavenly spectators; and amid the shouts of the heavenly hosts, saying, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men." Though upon the earth there was but little interest, in comparison to the greatness and glory of the work begun; but little confidence, or expression of joy from among the children of men; yet such was the manner of interest of the heavenly world! This corner stone, too, was laid with records, and documents and lasting memorials of wisdom: for "in Him dwelleth all the fulness of the God-head bodily."

With Him, composing the foundation of the spiritual temple, are laid the apostles and prophets: for we are "built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone; in whom all the building fitly framed together groweth into a holy temple in the Lord." "In whom, YE also are builded together for an habitation of God through the Spirit," I trust. Those who "despised the day of small things," and rejected the Babe of Bethlehem, the holy child Jesus, and apostles and prophets, were they now to see this building as it still goes on towards its final completion, amid the persecuting storms and tempests of the earth, and the rage of human passions and devils, they would be confounded, and even now begin to learn what that meaneth, "Upon this Rock, I will build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it."

The materials built upon the foundation, are Jew and Gentile believers, who become "fellow citizens" and fellow saints in the household of God, and are "builded together for an habitation of God through the Spirit." These are "lively stones, and are built up a spiritual house, to offer up spiritual sacrifices acceptable to God by Jesus Christ." None but good materials are allowed in this building; as the foundation is perfect, so must be the superstructure to its very topmost stone. This building is to be subjected to fire, and to be tried: for it is to stand forever. Many builders bring as materials, "hay, wood, and stubble," made into bricks and burned and hardened in their kilns, as did the Babel builders, and suppose they have made them indestructible; but "the eyes of the Lord which run to and fro through the earth," discover the deception, and when attempted to be placed upon the wall, they are rejected by the Master Builder, who allows only "lively stones," "gold," "silver" and precious materials to be fitted and framed together, and grow into a holy temple in the Lord. Their materials are rejected and remain as rubbish to be consumed in the great conflagration of the last day: for "every man's work shall be made manifest; for the day shall declare it, because it shall be revealed by fire; and the fire shall try every man's work of what sort it is."

The Head, or Cap-stone, which on the final completion of the building is "brought forth with shoutings," is Christ the Lord, in his glorified person. God in Christ,—or "Emmanuel, God with us," is the great Master Builder. Jesus Christ in his suffering humanity is the foundation corner stone. The God-man, now glorified in heaven, is the coping, who at His coming will be brought forth by all the heavenly hosts with shoutings, "Grace, grace unto it."

3. When the foundation was laid; and when the superstructure will be finished.

"The corner stone" was laid, IN FACT, near nineteen centuries ago, when Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judea, the Savior of the world, and when he subsequently died an atoning sacrifice for the sin of the world, and rose again from the dead and became the life of the world. But in the mind and purpose of God, and in the great plan of redemption instituted for the salvation of the world, it was laid "in the beginning," for "in the beginning was the Word;" and He was "the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world." Though in fact "the chief corner stone" was laid between the Testaments, yet in the final results, it will be seen that it was from the beginning, and therefore Jesus "became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey Him" under both Testaments: for He is the Mediator of the New Testament, that by means of death, for the redemption of the transgressors that were under the first Testament, they which are called might receive the promise of eternal inheritance."

Hence the building has been in process of erection from the foundation of the world," and upon "the chief corner stone," have been added the "lively stones,"—or those whose "names were written in the Book of Life from the foundation of the world," under all dispensations:—the Antediluvian, from the days of Adam to Noah;—the Patriarchal, from Noah to Moses;—the Mosaic or law, from Moses to Christ,—and the Christian from Christ to our day, and the end of the world. As this dispensation closes the work of saving men out from the world, and with its end comes the crowning glories of the second coming of Jesus Christ in the clouds of heaven, and the redemption of man, and the final restitution,—then will be the epoch for the completion of the spiritual temple, made up of the righteous of all ages, and by the bringing forward of the Head-stone with shoutings. "The Lord hasten it in his time." Finally, and

4. The joy of the occasion of its completion.

Christ Jesus is at once the corner stone, and cope-stone of the building. He was greeted with shoutings of grace at His first advent; He will be much more so at His second coming, "without sin unto salvation." In this finishing work earth as well as heaven, will join in the shoutings!

First; the whole creation," which "groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now," will then rejoice in its deliverance and ransom from under the curse in a glorious restitution. The prophet says, "Let the heavens rejoice, and let the earth be glad; let the sea roar, and the fulness thereof, let the field be joyful, and all that is therein; then shall all the trees of the wood rejoice before the Lord: for He cometh—for he cometh,—to judge the world in righteousness, and the people with His truth." Creation rejoices because righteousness and truth are again restored to this unjust and false world!

"Then shall we see the cause
Why unassuming worth in secret lived,
And died neglected, why the good man's share
In life was gall and bitterness of soul;
Why the lone widow and her orphans pined
In starving solitude, while luxury,
In palaces, lay straining her low thought
To form unreal wants; why heaven-born truth
And moderation fair, wore the red marks
Of superstition's scourge; why licensed pain,
That cruel spoiler, that embosomed foe,
Imbittered all our bliss. Ye good distrust!
Ye noble few! who here unbending stand
Beneath life's pressure, yet bear up awhile,
And what your bounded view, which only saw
A little part deemed evil, is no more:
The storms of wintry time will quickly pass,
And one unbounded spring encircle all."

Then will God's kingdom come on earth; for "He shall judge the quick and dead at His appearing and kingdom;" and then, "the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea."

Second. There will be shouting from the manifested, resurrected, glorified, and redeemed sons of God. "The stone shall cry out of the wall, and the beam out of the timber shall answer it;" and all the "lively stones," composing the whole spiritual building, shall cry, "with shoutings, saying, Grace, grace unto it;" and they shall cry "with a loud voice; as the voice of a great multitude, and as the voice of mighty thunderings, saying, ALLELUIA, salvation to our God, which sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb forever." "Let us be glad and rejoice and give honor to Him."

In this world we have had joys and sorrows;—mingled prayer and praise;—rest and weariness;—good and evil;—weepings and rejoicings;—meetings and partings;—greetings and farewells;—health and sickness;—life and death! But now,

"O hail! happy day."

Victory has come! The saying is brought to pass that is written,—"Death is swallowed up in victory. O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory? Thanks be to God, which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ." Now, it is all joy with no sorrow, praise with no prayer; rejoicings with no weepings; meetings with no partings, greetings and no farewells; rest without fatigue, good without evil; health without sickness, life without death!

"Saints, lift up your heads, that day is near,
When your Redeemer shall appear,
To take the kingdom and the crown,
And make his ransomed Bride his own.

Shall not his people sing for joy?
Shall not the church her songs employ?
Sing, ye who will, sing while ye may,
And shout for joy the approaching day."

"The Union Movement:"

A MEETING OF THE LAY-MEMBERS OF THE VARIOUS CHURCHES OF THE TOWN OF UNITY ON DEC. 3, 1858.

CHAPTER XI.

Word had been circulated that on New Year's Day, the six ministers and their churches, in the town of Unity, would unite, and henceforth be but one church. As might have been expected, there was a large assembly consisting of all classes, with the six preachers and the members of their churches in attendance. The following was the closing scene:

Pres. Brethren, as we have met on the Lord's day and the first day of the year, to take a very important step, I think it but reasonable, that we give our fellow-citizens a brief outline of the reasons that have led us to this step.

1. I satisfied myself, that the authority of God required us to unite. The Lord prayed that we should be one. The holy apostle commanded us to be perfectly joined together and that there should be no divisions among us. In looking over ancient history, I found that there was but one body—one church, or as we have been wont to say—but one denomination—in the apostolic age, and that when any persons took steps likely to result in a separation, they were condemned as carnal, heretics, schismatics, etc., or as Jude expresses it, "sensual, having not the Spirit." From considerations like these, I have become satisfied, that making and keeping up these divisions, is what the Bible calls heresy, and that we are living in the clearest and most manifest disobedience, and can not expect the blessing of heaven.

2. I inquired for the object of union and found a most forcible answer in the Lord's own words. He prayed that believers might be one, that the world might believe.

* * * * * *

4. I am well satisfied that there is no Scriptural basis for union but the Bible. It was the only law, the only creed, the only basis of union with the first churches. It contains all things necessary to life and godliness, and is able thoroughly to furnish the man of God to every good work. It is the only rule of faith, and we have all, from the beginning, admitted it to be better than all our creeds. We read it to the sick and quote it to comfort the dying. We all admit it to be perfect and the only perfect rule. We all claim that we love our doctrine because it is like it, and that the creed the nearest like it is the nearest right. This could not be the case, only upon the admission which we all make, viz: That the Bible is precisely right. This admission all must make, and no man who does make it can show a good reason why he does not take it as his only creed.

5. I am satisfied that we should abandon all religious names and titles not found in the Bible. No matter what names we have been willing to submit to, we have all the time been willing to be called "Christians," or "Disciples of Christ." We at any time, would have been insulted if any one had declared that we were not Christians, or not Disciples of Christ. But our former circumscribed names are repudiated and rejected by all, except the little party that has adopted each one. No one of these names is venerated, or held in the least regard except by that party that has adopted it. But it is not so with the name Christian. It is held in high esteem by us all, and we all feel that we are dishonored, if any man denies that we are Christians. When we come to die, it will be worth more to be a Christian than everything else. Here we are safe, for we can unite upon that which is equally dear to us all.

6. I am satisfied that nothing is Scriptural, safe, and undeniably baptism, but immersion. I can not deny that sprinkling is doubtful, controverted, and has always been in dispute ever since it existed, and that it leaves a large number of those who receive it, as well as those upon whom it is imposed, in doubt whether they have obeyed the command of the Lord. I have tried to satisfy such that it would do, which I rarely could do. I grant then—I am compelled in honor to grant—that it is right, to practice that invariably which is indisputable, and never fails to satisfy those who receive it. I am weary with controversy, and do not intend to practice that which is always in dispute, and always involving persons in doubt.

7. I saw the unhallowed work that our divisions were making in our beautiful village, in dividing it off into some six parties. I saw the divisions we were making in some families, separating them into three and four parties. I was compelled to confess that our efforts to convert our citizens amounted to a failure, and that we never could succeed in our present attitude.

8. I was compelled to see the intolerable expense we were imposing upon our citizens, in building so many meeting-houses, and supporting such a number of preachers, and I could not avoid confessing upon my knees before the Lord, that we were wasting the Lord's money.

9. I had to admit that we wasted a large amount of our time in combating each other, that would all be saved, if we were all united. For this, I was satisfied, the Lord would call us to an account. I was not willing to continue this.

10. I became satisfied that our peculiarities that separate us, and distinguish us as parties, were not the Gospel, and that we tacitly admitted such to be the fact all the time, because we admitted persons to be Christians who did not believe these peculiarities, which we could not do if those peculiarities were Gospel. They are not the Gospel or Christianity, or no man could be a Christian and not believe them. All that which men may think as they please about, and still be Christians, is no part of Christian faith, and no man should be required to believe it. But here, brethren, [holding up the New Testament], no man can be a Christian and not believe this. I believe this Holy Book and I love its blessed Author, and I love all those who believe on, love, and follow him. I am willing to give myself wholly to him, to obey and serve him forever, and I am ready to unite not only with these brethren, with whom I have had so many profitable meetings, but with all who love Him and will promise to keep his commandments upon this Holy Book.

Meth. Brethren, I never saw my way so fully open before. I can see no reason why we may not invite the whole world to come and go with us. Here we can enjoy the ever blessed God, our glorious Savior, the Holy Spirit, all God has given to us and done for us, with all who love him. Here we can all come with all who are near and dear to us, and engage in one common cause alike dear to us all.

Bap. Brethren, this is a happier day than ever I expected to see in this world. It fills my heart with inexpressible joy, to think of our all being one. Will not all the children of God unite?

Ep. I am fully satisfied on all the matters of our various meetings, and am happy beyond expression, that we are about to consummate so glorious a union.

Lu. I perfectly accord with all that has been said, and am unable to express my gratitude to God for the work accomplishing in our midst.

Chris. Brethren, I can not believe there is a good being in heaven or upon earth, that will not rejoice in the work in which we are now engaged. The benefit resulting from this move in our own town, will be worth the labors of a lifetime. Whenever we meet, from this time forward, we are to meet as brethren, in one common faith. Religion will not be driven from the family circle by division. When we meet as neighbors, the subject of religion will not be kept back, on account of disagreement. When we start for the Lord's house, we shall all go to the same house, to serve the same Lord, and the Lord's prayer, that we may be one, will be answered, so far as we are concerned. May we be [illegible] keep, with the utmost fidelity, the [illegible] covenant upon which we [illegible]. While we sing, let us extend to [illegible] the hand, in token of our [illegible], and pledge that we shall [illegible] it, if possible, from the rivers [illegible] of the earth. Sing the [illegible]

"Blest be the tie that binds
Our hearts in Christian love;
The fellowship of kindred minds
Is like to that above."

When this interesting ceremony was performed, a brother rose and said:

Brethren, we have the means now to give as much to the support of the cause as we did before our union, and I hope the will to give much more. I therefore propose, that we sell all the meeting-houses belonging to us except one, and that the proceeds be constituted a poor fund, and sacredly kept for that object; and, as we have now five preachers more than we need constantly with us, we constitute them Home Missionaries, and sustain them to preach the glorious Gospel throughout the whole land.

This motion was unanimously carried.

For the Crisis.

"The Love of God constraineth us." 2 Cor. 5: 14.

The question may be asked by some, why have you forsaken home and friends, and gone forth into the world to preach the unsearchable riches of Christ? I must answer you, by asking you some questions. What is it that built our hospitals? What is it that prompts that delicate young woman to follow the doctor from room to room, ministering to the wants of those poor afflicted persons? What made Judson go forth into distant lands? Love to God and love to man. The Apostle reasons thus: "If one died for all, then were all dead." Then who among the living can exalt himself, all being dead in trespasses and sin, in the horrible pit of corruption, not one having escaped sin? But Christ is raised from the dead, and has given to us life; not to live unto ourselves but to Him who has died for us.

There are always some persons in the church, who are continually quietly laboring to advance the cause of Christ. You will see them in the prayer meeting, and seemingly the least of all; but now he prays; and see, that old man begins to drop his head between his hands; the rock is smitten with the rod of Jesus' love. The young sob and sigh, and some resolve not to live any longer to themselves, but to live to Him who died for them. These humble disciples of the Lamb, having drank deep at the well of humility, use their one, five, or ten talents, to magnify the name of Him that bought them.

Some may say that Christ only died for the elect. If it be so, see to it that you are among the elect; make your calling sure; go forth scattering the good seed; carry forth your tracts from house to house, now and then pausing to speak comforting words; feed the hungry, clothe the naked, remembering thou art bought with a great price. And when you carry forth your tracts, do not let your hearts swell with pride, thinking you have the most correct theory, and that your arguments are superior to all others. Go not forth merely to enlarge your sect; go not forth to the house of want, rendering to their necessities, only to have it proclaimed about; but go quietly and prayerfully; distribute thy goods to honor the name of Jesus; and when thou shalt appear before the great white Throne, thou shalt hear words like these—"Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."

How I would have liked to have seen those noble apostles preaching from city to city, and from country to country, exhibiting not themselves to the people, and glorying because of their eloquence and marvelous gifts, but ever holding up Jesus, the Christ—the Alpha of every blessing, the Omega of every appeal.

So, my brethren and sisters, let us enter upon our labors of love, with self out of sight, and ever bearing Jesus [illegible] foremost in all our varied undertakings in this present world, striving continually to add one more soul to the [illegible] and cause the hearts of angels to rejoice in the song of [illegible] place a new star in the [illegible] Redeemer, Lord. And may we no longer live to ourselves, but unto Him [illegible]

[illegible]

☞ Man's blood is [illegible]

THE WORLD'S CRISIS. WHOLE NO. 224.

For the Crisis.

[illegible]

Bro. Grant:—On the 22d of [illegible] went to a place called Kelley's school-house, six miles from Manchester, in Delaware Co., where I preached [illegible] and baptised two. From there I went to attend the debate between myself and a disciple preacher, which lasted two days. At the [illegible], a man [illegible] heard four of my [illegible] and wished me to return and baptise him, and his wife, who was, when I went to Kelley's school-house, an avowed infidel. I returned on the 6th of Nov., and buried them with Christ in baptism. On the 16th started for Howard Co., Iowa. Stopped the first night at the pilgrim's home of Bro. Daniel Hoyt and J. Merry, who live at West Union, formerly from Magog, Canada. It was good to find so welcome a home, although their light in a measure is hid by their uniting with the Methodists for a present home. The next night stopped with Bro. Miller, a Baptist, Jacksonville, and on the 18th arrived at my appointment at Howard, or more generally known as Pettebone's. Preached six sermons. Bro. Peter Mitson lives within a few miles of here. I never was better treated since I came to Iowa. Here I removed some scepticism from the minds of those that had well nigh rejected the Bible. I made my home with the merchant of that place, Bro. Potter, and also staid with others who entertained me kindly.

Bro. Hastings sent Bro. Mitson some tracts, which he has scattered in this place. Brethren, if you had been somewhere near, and heard the words of thanksgiving, and seen the tears of rejoicing shed over them, you would still keep the wheel moving. I never saw the need of tract distribution on these western prairies as I have this trip. Truly, there is a famine here to hear the word of God in its purity. I believe we have it. Shall we withhold it? One of my greatest trials is, to have tracts, and see the people anxious to read them, but unable to buy; and I am not able to give them away. I am determined to keep in the field, and wear out, instead of rusting out. May the Lord sustain me.

I see some preachers who have not clothes suitable to go out and preach, but they are called on all sides, and I often think if they had those old garments that are thrown aside in fashionable cities, they would make them and their families comfortable. I recollect when I lived in Illinois, some years ago, the people East boxed up garments they had laid aside, and sent them to the preachers, which were thankfully received.

I took leave of my friends at Howard in company with Bro. Mitson. We started for [illegible], Floyd Co., Nov. 23d. [illegible] evening. In this place we found Bro. L. Hickox, who is trying to spread the true light. He joined our company, and we went to Rock Grove city, where we found our dear Bro. A. J. Cottrell, who is doing all he can for the truth's sake. We have labored together in Michigan. Here we found that a bundle of tracts had got ahead of us, and I found a little band of brethren in gospel order. Friday evening, Bro. Mitson preached, and Saturday, at one o'clock, P. M., we met and organized a quarterly conference, with the following preamble and resolutions:

Voted, that Bro. Mitson act as president pro tem., and he took the chair. The following was passed:

Whereas, the bounds of the Iowa, Minn. and Wis. Christian Conference have so large a territory, and many of the preachers who are pioneers in the West are destitute of means and conveyances to attend the annual conferences,

Resolved, That we organize into a quarterly conference, to meet at the call of the Evangelists, to be composed of ministers and delegates from the churches who are deprived of the privilege of the annual conference.

Resolved, That the object of the quarterly conference will be for the advancement of the cause of Christ, and to act in harmony with the Iowa, Minn. and Wis. Christian Conference.

Resolved, That ministers and churches of the Iowa, Minn. and Wis. Christian Conference shall be entitled to a seat and assist in the transacting of business equal to those that are members of the quarterly conference.

Resolved, That ministers and churches will be expected, to unite with the annual conference at the first opportunity, by their presence or by letter.

Resolved, That ministers and churches will be received into the quarterly conference on the same conditions as the annual conference.

Voted, to receive Elds. A. J. Cottrell and L. G. Hickox, and Rock Grove City church delegate—Bro. L. G. Phelps, and the church receive a letter of recommendation [illegible].

Whereas, The cause of Christ in the West needs a special effort to get the true light before the people, and that tracts and papers are the best medium to spread [illegible]

Ordination.—On Sunday the 27th, Bro. Peter Mitson of Howard Co., was set apart for the work of the gospel ministry in the following order: Prayer by Eld. L. G. Hickox; charge by Eld. Peter S. W. Deyo; the right hand of fellowship by Eld. A. J. Cottrell.

The meeting still increases in interest, and the great prejudice that existed against us, I think, is wearing away. This place very much needs a reform; not a revival merely, but a reformation.

Peter S. W. Deyo.

For the Crisis.

Grieve not the Holy Spirit.

In the life of every person under the enjoyment of Christian privileges, there are times when a great degree of religious interest is felt,—when the individual feels impressed with the weight of his sins, and perhaps is saying to himself, "Would to God that I was a christian!" To such I would now speak. Do you feel one spark of the heavenly fire within your soul? Grieve it not away, but cherish it! Do you begin to feel that there is indeed a reality in the religion of Christ? Cherish that feeling.

Do the solemnities of life—its dangers and its trials—arise before you? does eternity and the judgment day awaken in your heart feelings of seriousness? Cherish such; grieve them not away. These emotions are the faint dawn of a religious life. Quench them not. The Holy Spirit is now striving to win you from the world, its sins and its cares. It is striving to show you a glimpse of the golden future of the christian's life. Be willing to be led by it. Be willing to ground your weapons of rebellion, and seek your Savior's love. Be much in prayer. Pray to God with that living, believing faith, and you will receive his blessing.

True, the powers of darkness will rise before and around you; Satan will try to lead you from the influences of the Holy Spirit; he will try every means to make you resist the holy influences; but do not listen; for, remember that we are told in the word of God, the Spirit shall not always strive with man. Perhaps you have resisted the Holy Spirit many times, and now once more it calls you. Will you refuse, and say as did Felix, "Go thy way, this time, when I have a more convenient season I will call for thee"? This may be the last opportunity. This may be the last call to you; refuse, and you are lost; accept, and eternal life shall be ensured.

I would entreat you to accept—turn away from your idols, and seek the Savior. Accept of proffered mercy. Christ has died for you, and now he asks you to come and believe on his name. The way is clear, the plan is simple. Come to Jesus, with the humble, broken, contrite heart, and believe on his name. Resolve now to forsake your evil ways—to repent. Cherish that spirit, and it will not leave you; open the door to Jesus, he is waiting to receive you. Say, I will be a christian; I will renounce all sin. Say to Satan, depart forever—selfishness, and all the train of sin, depart! I leave all to follow Jesus. Then will a ray of light enter your heart, then will the gloom be dispelled, and the sun of righteousness will shine forth with light divine.

Let the love of God and Jesus dwell forever in your mind. Study the sacred Scriptures. Meditate on the life of Christ. Go with him on the mission of love and mercy. Watch with him amid the mountains. Listen to his prayer for an ungrateful and rebellious world. Go to Calvary's height, and witness there his death; and hear while in the agonies of death his prayer for his murderers:—"Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do." Remember that this blessed Savior now asks your love, your whole consecration, the dedication of your life to him and his service, and holds out as your reward, eternal life.

Think of these things, my dear friend. And now in order that you may be led on step by step, he sends his Holy Spirit to visit you. Will you refuse this loving Spirit?

Refuse, and let the world allure you on. Rush on in the varied sins of the world as long as you choose, as long as life lasts; but forget not that the hour is coming, when you must pass away, down amid the shades of death; and as you feel the cold hand of death upon your brow, where, I ask, will you look for support? To whose arms will you flee? That Savior has been slighted, the Holy Spirit grieved, and where is your hope? Man cannot save you; riches cannot save you. There is but one refuge, one guide, and that has been rejected. My dear friend, if you would shun such despair, flee now while it is an accepted time and the day of salvation. Flee now to Jesus. Listen to the kind, inviting voice of the Savior; listen to the Holy Spirit's gentle wooings,—accept, and live. Hear the words of Jesus:—"Come unto me, all ye that are weary and heavy laden, and I will give you rest." Come all, without any [illegible]

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, DECEMBER 28, 1859.

Relief for the Distressed; or, How we got out of "Doubting Castle."

No. 1.

Several years since, it was our misfortune to spend some time in "Doubting Castle," where our dear Bro. Burnham is now confined. Having escaped from that dismal abode, after thoroughly exploring its intricate windings, it affords us much pleasure to assist our Bro. in escaping from his unpleasant situation. In his endeavors to rescue himself, he seems to have gone in the wrong direction, till he is like a man lost in the old Grecian labyrinth, or a vast forest shade, and knows not which way to turn. Let earnest prayer be offered in his behalf, that success may attend our effort in endeavoring to conduct him out into the plain way of truth, illumined by the word of the Lord, which, David says, "is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path." We think our Bro. erred, as we did, after he entered "Doubting Castle," by taking the most frequented path. After learning the fact that nearly every body was in "Doubting Castle," and that but few ever got out after they once entered, we concluded to take the way least frequented, which was to let the Bible be our only guide, without any regard to the opinions of men; and we soon found our way out of darkness into glorious light, which is continually shining brighter and brighter, and so clear is the light now, that we can truly say, we are not within the shadow, or even in sight, of "Doubting Castle." In the strength of Jesus, we would say, farewell, farewell, forever, to its dark and gloomy windings. A man in "Doubting Castle" is like a ship at sea in cloudy weather, with compass lost, and helm torn away, drifting no one knows where, at the mercy of the wind and waves. Such is a dangerous position; and the fact that the majority are in this situation, makes it no more safe. But we must hasten to the rescue of our brother. We will let him describe the various apartments of "Doubting Castle" in his own graphic style. Under the heading of "Doubting Castle" he says:

Bro Grant:—I thank you for your kind invitation to me to express my doubts in relation to the unconsciousness of man in death, through the Crisis. All nations, during their entire history, have received the doctrine of the conscious existence of the human spirit after the death of the body. (1.) No historian will deny this. This belief originated either, 1, by divine revelation, or 2, by the intuition of human reason, or 3, by a universal consciousness of its truth, or 4, by the speculation of some person or persons at random. If it originated by divine revelation, then it must be true. (2) If it originated by the intuition of human reason, then it is in harmony with reason; and whatever is in real harmony with reason must be right. (3.) If it originated by universal consciousness of its truth, then it must be true; for God would not plant a law of universal consciousness of truth in our nature to mock and bewilder us! (4) If it originated by the speculations of some person or persons at random, then why have not such random speculations been corrected by the learned of divers ages and nations? (5) and what could have been the data or foundation of such speculations originally? (6) The ancient nations, until the age of Gallileo, all judged, in matters connected with the general existence of our world, from the appearance of things—that the earth stood still and the sun went round—and if the true state of matters had not been discovered, so they would have continued to judge, and so we should judge. But when a human being dies, the entire appearance of the event is in favor of extinction of being. How is it then that all nations of the world entirely ignore the appearance of this event, and judge directly opposite? (7)

In our endeavors to help our Bro. out of this part of "Doubting Castle," we will state the manner of our deliverance.

(1.) In apartment No. 1, we found authentic documents, left by those who had escaped from the gloomy abode, somewhat contradictory to the blazing card put up to attract the first attention of all who enter "Doubting Castle." Instead of "all nations, during their entire history" believing in "the conscious existence of the human spirit after the death of the body," these documents state as follows:—

"If we turn from Persia, Egypt, and Hindostan to Arabia, to the fragrant groves and learned shades of Dedan and Teman, from which it is certain that Persia, and highly probable that Hindostan, derived its first polite literature, we shall find the subject" (of the conscious state of the spirit,) "left in as blank and barren a silence as the deserts by which they are surrounded; or, if touched upon, only touched upon to betray doubt, and sometimes disbelief. The tradition, indeed, of a future state of retributive justice seems to have reached the schools of this part of the world, and to have been generally, though perhaps not universally, accredited; but the future existence it alludes to is that of a resurrection of the body, AND NOT OF A SURVIVAL OF THE SOUL AFTER THE BODY'S DISSOLUTION."

This is from Dr. John Mason Good's lectures before the Surry Institute, London. Let it be remembered that Dr. Good believed in the conscious existence of the spirit after death, but in his lecture on the immortality of the soul, he is compelled to make the foregoing admission. Dr. Good's lectures were delivered, probably, before [illegible]

Job dwelt, and taught, the subject of the conscious state of the spirit is left entirely "blank and barren." If this doctrine were in harmony with the belief of Job, who had communion with his Creator, why did his people believe the opposite?

Dr. Good, in speaking of Job, goes on to say:—

"Yet in this sublime and magnificent poem, replete with all the learning and wisdom of the age, the doctrine upon the subject before us is merely as I have stated it, a patriarchal or traditionary belief of a future state of retributive justice, NOT BY THE NATURAL IMMORTALITY OF THE SOUL, BUT BY A RESURRECTION OF THE BODY."

Dr. Good remarks:—

"The Hindoo philosophers TOTALLY and UNIVERSALLY denying a resurrection of the body, and supporting the doctrine (of future existence) alone upon the NATURAL IMMORTALITY of the soul, and the Arabian philosophers, (among whom was Job) passing over the immortality of the soul, and resting it alone upon a RESURRECTION OF THE BODY."

After looking over these, and many kindred facts, we came to the full conclusion, that the card posted in the first apartment of "Doubting Castle" was not reliable, when it stated that "All nations, during their entire history, have believed in the conscious existence of the spirit after death."

2. In apartment No. 2, we found some very specious reasoning posted up, which, from its connection with the first apartment, led us to think we were all right, and on the track of truth; but since our delivery, the fallacy in the argument is very apparent. We were compelled to admit, of course, that every belief in existence had its origin somewhere, and further, if the nations which believed in "the conscious existence of the human spirit after the death of the body," received it "by divine revelation, then it must be true." But when we looked over the writings of Moses and the prophets, and compared them with the teachings of the heathen nations around them, we found only the latter teaching the consciousness of the spirit after death, while they denied the resurrection of the dead. These heathen nations taught that the spirit went to the infernal regions, or hades, under the direction of the god Pluto. They taught that human spirits were conscious in hades, the good being in one part and the wicked in another. The place where the good were they called Elysian, or paradise, a place of fruits, pleasant groves, and other delightful scenery, while the part assigned to the wicked was exceedingly gloomy and horrid.

One thing we saw was certain, i. e., these heathen did not get their belief directly from the Bible, because they had none. In order to ascertain whether they got it indirectly from the Scriptures, by tradition, we compared the Bible hades with that of the heathen, and found them entirely opposite on the point of consciousness. Instead of hades being a place of consciousness, weeping and wailing, as the heathen taught, we found the Holy Spirit had moved the prophet to write, that the wicked are "silent in (sheol or hades) the grave," and, that "There is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom in (sheol) the grave, whither thou goest." Soon as we saw this, the point was perfectly clear that the heathen nations did not obtain their belief of a hades filled with intelligent spirits, either directly or indirectly, from the Bible; hence the doctrine did not originate "by divine revelation." When this truth appeared, a flood of light burst upon our minds, and we felt confident we should get out of "Doubting Castle."

3. We now pass to room No. 3. Here we found another very plausible argument conspicuously posted, which read as follows:—

If the doctrine of the conscious existence of the human spirit originated by the intuition of human reason, then it is in harmony with reason, and what is in real harmony with reason must be right.

After a little reflection, we saw that this argument was worthless, as nothing could be in harmony with sound reason that is opposed to the Bible. And besides, when we came to look at the idea that an immaterial part of man was praising the Lord when the man was dead, we saw it was most unreasonable. We knew a man could be made unconscious by a blow upon his head; and again we were led to exclaim, it is very unreasonable to suppose that a second and heavier blow which should scatter his brains about, would make him conscious in hades, or any where else.

4. We pass to the fourth section of "Doubting Castle." Here we find another imposing and plausible argument. We see it has the same effect on our brother's mind that it did upon ours, before we discovered its fallacy. It reads thus:—

If the belief, that the human spirit is conscious after the death of the body, originated by universal consciousness of its truth, then it must be true; for God would not plant a law of universal consciousness of truth in our minds, to mock us.

After we had given this argument a careful consideration, we found the "IF" too large to get through the gate of truth, or in other words, that the proposition is opposed to facts. Our own consciousness, and that of thousands of other christians, [illegible] man; but on the contrary, has taught us to "seek for . . . immortality," "by patient continuance in well doing." We were satisfied, on a moment's reflection, that the Lord is not so unreasonable as to move a holy apostle to exhort us to seek for what we have already. Again, so far from this being a universal law in men, we find the Sadducees had no such consciousness in them, neither is there an intimation that any Bible writer had any such feeling in him.

Herodotus, the oldest historian whose writings are extant, who wrote over four hundred years B. C., says:—"The Egyptians were the FIRST who asserted the doctrine that the soul is immortal. Some of the Greeks have adopted this opinion."—Herodotus, p. 144. It appears evident then, that the Egyptians first had the "consciousness" that they were immortal; and "SOME of the Greeks" had adopted this belief in the days of Herodotus. Hence it follows, that the Greeks did not begin to adopt this "law" till more than three thousand years from creation. We asked ourselves, how is this, if it is a universal law of consciousness established in every man by his Creator? Why did he wait over three thousand years before he implanted this "consciousness" in man, and then give it first to the heathen philosophers, and use them to teach the doctrine to his children?

After thus looking over this point, we rejected it as a false proposition, and passed on with a firmer step, thankful for our delivery from this part of "Doubting Castle."

"The Christian Lyre."

We wish to say a word concerning our new music and hymn book. It is a rare treasure. We are delighted with it. We have examined a host of music books, and collections of hymns, but this is emphatically the best of them all. We really think there is not another book that contains so much beautiful music and so many choice hymns in so small a compass, as the Christian Lyre. It contains three hundred and fifty pages, between five and six hundred hymns, and nearly three hundred and fifty very choice tunes, and all these are in a neat pocket edition.

It is just the book we need. We find in it the favorite tunes and hymns of our fathers and mothers, and those especially that have cheered us in our heavenly meetings for the last eighteen years, while we have been watching and waiting for the coming of Jesus. It is a real Bible companion.

For the Crisis.

New Work.

A new book, with the cheering title, "Forever with the Lord," from the pen of H. L. Hastings, will soon go to press. I bespeak for this work a candid and careful reading on both sides of our house. Its ability we think will be unquestioned. Its research is very extensive, and its expositions, criticisms and philological matter, will prove amply worth the price of the book. And the style is clear, forcible, smooth, logical and inimitable. But its doctrines—will they prove true and scriptural? Judge ye. I give it as my humble opinion that H—— has settled forever the meaning of Luke 23: 43 and Phil. 1: 21–23. It is just the work we need on these and other passages of a kindred nature. I have read, and heard read, the proof sheets with real delight. The proof is presented overwhelmingly that the just begin to be forever with the Lord only at the First resurrection. Amen. Look out for a masterly book that will perhaps "save the union."

D. T. T.

Worcester, Mass., Dec. 24th, 1859.

For the Crisis.

Reflections for the Season.

Eighteen hundred and fifty-nine is just drawing to its end. O what a time for reflection! One more of the years of my pilgrimage closing, and I a pilgrim stranger. Thanks to my God and his dear Son, for the many mercies received during its brief existence.

These are moments of serious meditation. O what a change has a few short days wrought on the face of nature! I look from the window on the surrounding landscape, and it seems but yesterday I hasted to screen my feeble frame from the scorching rays of the midsummer sun, beneath the pendant branches of the trees clad in their beautiful foliage. The insects were humming, and the feathered choir warbled their sweetest notes. The flocks grazed in the meadow. The farmer in his thin garb rolled his [illegible] and plied his stalwart arm to cultivate the soil, as the sweat coursed freely from every pore. Gossamer-like, the water-fowl floated on the surface of the beautiful Connecticut; and ere the sun came peering from the east, the gentle twitter of the swallow could be heard in concert with robin redbreast in sweet matins of praise, to hail the new day. O, how sweet this hour,—the still, calm moment, as the day begins to break, darkness recedes, and the balmy breath of morn is perfumed with fragrance, and the fields glittering with dew! O, what a change appears! I now draw nigh the storm; [illegible]

Old mother earth, whose bosom appeared so warm and genial a few months since, is now frigid and hidden beneath a snowy mantle. The groves and forests are all bare, and Boreas is piping all manner of tunes. I hear him as he gathers his force on the distant mountain, swaying the stately pine and the sturdy oak 'neath his mighty prowess. Down the mountain side he sweeps on; moans in the chimney top, and sighs in every nook and crevice.

> Drear winter, how I dread thy reign,
> Thy chilling blasts, snow, sleet and rain.

O what a change! The air is chilling, numbing, freezing. All the summer beauties are dead. On yonder tree top, amid the wintry gloom, for hours sits the crow, at times doleing out its monotonous cawing to its mate. The summer songsters are all, all, fled to warmer climes.

> Their cheerful carols all are o'er,
> With summer beauties past;
> The little snow-bird yet remains,
> And chirps amid the blast.

O what a change has taken place in many circles since the advent of this departing year! Alas, how numerous are the grief-stricken ones, whose hearts are burdened with sorrow at the fond memories of the mouldering dead! The heart once so tender, the ear so intent, the tongue so responsive with words of comfort and tenderness, lie cold in yonder valley. Stern winter's icy mantle lies frigid on the dear lamented ones; no raging storm nor rude alarm breaks on the dull, cold ear of death. 'Tis sweet to burdened hearts, when o'erflowing grief courses in warm, pearly drops, to strew them as mementoes on the spot where loved ones sleep. The age of sin, sickness, sorrow and death is almost ended. The night of lamentation and weeping is now rapidly drawing to its end.

O what a change has taken place in the world at large! Many from poverty have arisen to affluence. Others from exaltation of riches and power, have been reduced to poverty. Some whose talents and supposed integrity entitled them to great weight and influence in society, have sunk into worse than obscurity. Some whose standing in our midst was the joy and rejoicing of our hearts, with whom we walked and sung of the joys of the coming kingdom, are now the greatest obstacles in the way of the truth, and Satan's most potent instruments in hedging up the success of the last solemn message of dispensational truth to perishing sinners.

Reader, where are you? What is your own personal character in the sight of God? What is your influence in your own community—in your family—in your shop—in intimate relationship with those you are by necessity urged to mingle with? Remember, there is a day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men coming. If God be God, serve him. Keep clear from the spirit of the world. Separate yourself from the spirit and pleasures of the world.

Alas, what a year of rapid transitions it has been. Crowned despots, with adamantine hearts and garments gory with the blood of thousands, have made them reek with the blood of additional victims. The tocsin of war has sounded, mailed warriors have met the terrific roar of the brazen mouthed cannon, and the rattling of musketry has announced the raging strife. Fragments of mangled carcasses of fathers, brothers and friends, have been thrown in trenches to fester in their gore, and Magenta and Solferino have been enrolled on the historic page, forming a part and parcel of military glory and renown.

O, what a change is soon to take place! Thanks, praise and adoration! the period decreed upon in the immutable counsels of Infinite Wisdom,—to the eye of faith visibly approaches.

Dearly beloved, our long expected Lord is now about to come down and marry his bride. Those dates are just expiring; all the broad outlines of prophecy have long since been completed. The jots and tittles are swiftly filling out. The quick transitions from one extreme to another is full of meaning to the eye of faith. The sudden, astonishing development of character should alarm us, should humble us, should be incentives to diligence in all our religious duties,—in secret prayer, without which no person on earth, no matter how strong his faith, will lose the enjoyment of religion, confidence in God, and backslide.

O, what a time we live in! Perils of multifarious characters surround, multiply, press and threaten us. Child of God, awake! now is the power and hour of darkness; iniquity abounds; vice, immorality, oppression, hypocrisy and a God-dishonoring religion, prevail. Truly—

> The Serpent's brood increase,
> The powers of hell grow bold,
> The conflict thickens, faith is low,
> And love is growing cold;
> Come, then, Lord Jesus, come.

O, what a change is coming! Sudden, quick, as in the days of Lot and Noah—as a thief in the night. 'Tis near; it hasteth greatly; it rushes on, and on we haste to meet the terrors and the glories of that day. O, sinner, backslider, formalist, theorist,—prepare to meet your God. O what a day is this for personal effort! Make every object, aim, motive, tell on your [illegible] must confess; and all within me joins in the prayer—"Thy kingdom come." Even so, come, Lord Jesus. Amen.

S. S. Brewer.

South Glastenbury, Ct.

Correspondence.

From Sr. H. Harris.

(FROM A PRIVATE LETTER.)

Bro. Grant:—According to your request, I write some of Charles' last sayings for your perusal, as I had not much time to tell you when you were here. He bore his sickness with remarkable fortitude and patience, though it was severe; not a murmuring word escaped his lips; although he expressed a desire to live if it could be God's will, for the purpose of doing good, but committed all to Him in sweet submission.

He loved the truths which you have preached here very much, especially the literal and personal reign of Christ on earth; and rejoiced in the belief that the time was near at hand when he would come the second time, not as an offering for sin, but to give eternal life to all them that obey him. At one time he said, "I would like to live till the Lord comes; But if I die, I shall not have long to lie in the dust." At another time he said, "How can any one be a christian and not love the appearing of the Son of God?" "How I would rejoice to see him coming in the clouds." "If he would come before morning, I should be glad with exceeding joy."

A few days before he died he said, "I think I cannot live much longer." I think not, I replied. How would you like to have it now, Charlie; that the dead are conscious or unconscious? "I would like to have it the Lord's way," he replied; "and he has plainly told us that 'the dead know not any thing,' that they 'praise not the Lord,' that they are silent in the grave,' that 'they shall not awake nor be raised out of their sleep, till the heavens be no more.' I am content to have immortality and eternal life through Jesus Christ alone. He who is our life will shortly appear and ransom his saints from the power of the grave."

The day but one before he died he said, "I am glad that the time of Bro. Grant's coming is so near. I would like to see him very much, but the probability is, that I shall not live till he comes; if I do not, tell him that I am not sorry that I embraced the doctrine of the Bible. I have examined the Scriptures carefully, and I am convinced of their truth. I love them; they are a comfort to me now! I see a beauty and a harmony in the teachings of divine truth, more than I ever saw before. Tell the brethren and sisters that I shall not be with them at the table of the Lord any more in this life, but I shall be with them at the marriage supper of the Lamb, and eat bread with them in my Father's kingdom. Tell them all to be faithful."

He was conscious of the approach of death, and knew that his hour was come. He said he was ready and willing to die. His pulse ceased to beat, and we thought life would soon be extinct; sent for Bro. Cook to come and assist in laying him out. When Bro. Cook came, he had revived, and consciousness returned, so that he knew him, and placing his eyes on him, with love beaming in his countenance he said; "Good Bro. Cook! we will meet in the kingdom." Bro. Cook answered, "yes." Yes, said I, Charlie, you will see Bro. Cook and your mother, and surviving brother and sister in the kingdom, I trust. He spoke to each of us individually, and said, "Be good, meet me in the kingdom." He was asked if he wanted anything. "Only to die," he replied. I laid my warm hand upon his: "Don't warm it," said he, let me die." "Don't cry," said he, "we will soon meet in the kingdom." He then requested us to set him in his chair. We did so. Having called for drink, we gave it to him. Very soon his consciousness was gone; he breathed shorter and shorter, till the lamp of life went out.

What should we do in this land where death reigns, were it not for the consolations of the gospel? Death shall not always have dominion! Our friends will come again from the land of the enemy! "The dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God, and they that hear shall live."

> "Let this glorious hope revive our courage by the way, > While we in expectation live, and long to see that day."

Paultney, Dec. 17th, '59.

From C. W. Baker.

Dearly Beloved of the Lord:—We read in Acts 1: 11, "This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." These are the words of inspiration, and recorded for all (who desire) to read and understand. But who believes the record? Many profess to believe it. Do all that profess, believe that this same Jesus will come literally, bodily, in the same manner as he went into heaven? These, to me, are questions of great importance, [illegible] terity, sooner or later will receive the penalty, unless Jesus comes to destroy the enemy, to put an end to dying, and change those that remain and are alive at his coming. Then we see, in order to be redeemed from the curse and dominion of death, the dead must be raised, the living changed; and as Christ has the keys of death and hades, he must come and unlock and let the captive free.

But when will he come? At the end of the world. Some say, how do you know when that will be? By the sure word of prophecy, which tells us by unmistakable signs; and as these signs have been witnessed by an innumerable company and recorded in history, I am led to think that all who sincerely believe the word of the Lord will be found watching with the armor on. The coming of the Lord has been proclaimed as near, yea, very near, from north to south, from east to west; and shall any now in these last moments of time be led through the deceptions that are abroad in the world, to say my Lord delayeth his coming, and begin to smite his or her fellow servant, and eat and drink with the drunken, and that day overtake them as a thief? O that all that have named the name of Christ would depart from iniquity. Let us love as brethren; and I think if we do truly love the Lord Jesus Christ and expect his speedy coming, there will be no bickerings, no evil surmisings, no backbitings, or railings against the weak, but in honor preferring one another, our love will much more abound as we see the day approaching.

Brethren and sisters of like precious faith, and all that read these lines, are we ready to hear the trump of God, and behold the heavens parting, the Son of man coming, the dead rising? Could we joyfully hail his advent, and say, "This is our God, we have waited for him"? May our heavenly Father give us grace in these days of peril, and while he shines into our hearts by his Spirit, may we have grace (to humble us if need be) that we may let it shine out, that others, seeing our good works, may be led to glorify our Father which is in heaven.

Our Father has been kind to us in ways without number, he hath blessed us all along our pilgrimage, through trials, temptations, and afflictions, though they have met us at every step. We have had blessed seasons, while we have confessed and tried to have our lives accord with the confession, that we are pilgrims and strangers here, as all our fathers were, and that we seek a country where sin can never enter, where the redeemed shall live eternally with their Savior, being changed and made like him, and to enjoy his presence forever, yea, forevermore. Then in view of what he has done, and is still doing, and while signs tell of his near approach, let us seek to be baptized with the Holy Ghost, that love may abound and govern all our actions.

"Then we'll watch, and we'll pray, as our vessel bears away,
And we ne'er shall be disheartened any more;
For the port is getting nearer, and I hear the Leader say,
We soon shall reach the harbor and the shore."

Rockville, Ct., Dec. 4th, 1859.

From J. McLellan.

Bro. Grant:—I am a stranger to you, but being interested in reading your paper, The Crisis, I take the liberty of conversing with you in writing you a few lines in my imperfect way, hoping it may interest you and your readers, to learn the state of the cause with us in Canada. There is a small church of Adventists in this place numbering about thirty-five. We are striving to hold fast our confidence in Christ, who will impart immortality to his waiting ones at his appearing. We have built a commodious little chapel on my farm, which was opened on the 29th of last May. We have had regular preaching once every First Day, by H. Stevens. We are much scattered; do not get together oftener than Sunday. We have much opposition from various quarters, the people being under M. E. influence to a great extent. Notwithstanding the opposition, the cause of truth is on the advance. Bro. Stevenson, the author of the chart, has worshiped with us for the last year or more. He is a worthy brother, and much beloved by the churches generally.

I would say to my brethren scattered abroad, let us be awake in our Master's service, and strive to win souls to Christ; for it will not be long before the Master will rise up and shut to the door. O, let us see to ourselves, that we have on the wedding garment, that we may enter into life.

I remain yours truly, waiting for immortality at the appearing of Jesus.

Port Robinson, C. W.

From R. V. Lyon.

Brethren and Sisters:—I am in my feeble way trying to do what I can to enlighten the minds of my fellow-men upon the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of his Anointed. My spirit is bright,—my health is good—my confidence in the near coming of Jesus, to bring about the promised restitution, was never stronger. My prospects were never brighter for the kingdom of God. And had I an angel's tongue, I could not describe my love for the truth, as revealed to us in the Living Oracles! And I am willing to become a fool in the eye of the world for the [illegible]

Beloved, I feel that if I had ten thousand tongues, I could not praise the Lord enough for what the truth has done for me. Not that I have done anything for the truth; no, no! But it has done everything for me. Beloved, a few more gales from the throne of the Eternal to fill our sails, and gently will we be borne over life's rugged waves, into the harbor of eternal repose.

This is a hard field to labor in, owing to the fact, that bigotry, superstition and ignorance, is esteemed by the majority of the people, the mother of devotion! But truth is taking effect among the intelligent. I have baptized six intelligent believers in the one faith—into Christ, for the remission of sins, since our Campmeeting at Wilbraham; and fourteen during the past season. Others I expect will soon obey the gospel.

No. Augusta, C. W., Nov. 1859.

From J. W. Nute.

Dear Children:—Though we may have line upon line, and precept upon precept, we do not get tired of talking and writing about Jesus' coming, and kindred doctrines. And well we may not, for it is a glorious theme. When he comes, mourning will be changed to joy for the cross-bearing company. Glory be to God! And as we are nearing the port, may God forbid that any of us should be lulled to sleep in the cradle of carnal security. If we think we stand, we should take heed lest we fall. We have the world, the flesh, and the devil, to contend with, therefore we are commanded to gird on the whole armor of God, and fight manfully the good fight. If we fight in the strength of the Lord, and endure unto the end, we shall sing the victor's song. God grant that we may. Amen.

Sandwich, N. H.

From A. B. Pilcher.

Bro. Grant:—As time is passing away, I felt inclined to write a few lines to the dear children, who are striving to enter in at the strait gate, who feel themselves indeed friends of Jesus, who have borne the scoffs and frowns of the world, and suffered many things for the sake of their blessed Lord. Be not discouraged, dear pilgrims, we find that the apostles rejoiced that they were counted worthy to be beaten, and to suffer shame for the sake of their Lord. Our Savior says, "Blessed are ye when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake. Rejoice, and be exceeding glad; for great is your reward in heaven, for so persecuted they the prophets which were before you."

Brethren and sisters, let us run the whole race with patience, and gird up the loins of our minds, be sober, and hope to the end for the grace that is to be brought unto us at the revelation of Jesus Christ. I believe the time is very near, when all the tried and faithful ones, who are waiting for the kingdom,—yes, and all the beloved ones who sleep in Jesus,—will be gathered into that glorious kingdom, where sickness and death will not afflict the inhabitants, where the parting hand will not be taken, the bitter tear be shed. Although some of my friends have long been hidden from my sight, yet the tears are fresh in my eyes even to day.

O yes! the sorrow of my heart,
I feel it every day;
I know how hard it was to part,
And see them forced away.

I know that they will rise again,
Although the time seems long,
O, may I ever watch and pray,
And wait for that glad morn!

I praise the Lord for the christian's hope; a hope of an inheritance, incorruptible, undefiled, and that fadeth not away.

When I am looking over the Crisis, I often see where the brethren and friends have good meetings, and refreshing seasons, in different places. It fills my heart with joy; and oh how gladly I would unite with them, in some of their feasts of love! But I am far removed from them, and where there are but few that love the appearing of Jesus, and where we seldom have any preaching. Will the readers of this letter remember the few of this place that love the appearing of Jesus, and pray for us, that our faith fail us not in these last days of peril? May the Lord grant his children a spirit to watch and pray, is the prayer of your unworthy sister.

Elizabeth, Jo Davis Co., Ill.

From M. E. Potter.

Brothers and Sisters:—I can say from a full heart, dear Savior, come quickly! O that Jesus, as Rutherford has said, would take long steps, and cause the time for him to come, and destroy the enemy. And I would anxiously inquire how long, blessed Master, ere thou art to come? How small the things of this world are! But how glorious, how blessed, is life, eternal life! To die no more, no more to be separated from those we love; no more sick to watch over. Blessed be God, he will wipe away every tear; and best of all, Jesus himself will be there.

What then, can murmur at anything he [illegible] if we can only be fitted for his kingdom, and be permitted to dwell with him, an unbroken family, where death cannot [illegible] the whole armor of God, that we may fight the battle aright.

Blessed Master, give us grace to bear up under all that is necessary to fit us for a home with thee, and to say from a full heart, the Master's will, not mine, be done!

Vergennes, Vt.

From J. Kellogg.

Bro. Grant:—I am still striving for the faith which was once delivered to the saints. Our little church in this place is on the advance; perhaps not quite as much as in some other places; still God is adding to its numbers such as shall be saved. Eld. David Ross, of Hebron, N. Y., labors one half of the time with us, and his labors have not been in vain. He is a man of God's own choice, and is a workman that needeth not to be ashamed in the work God has called him to perform. We love him much; still, I think we have learned to look beyond the watchman. We learned, long ago, that Paul may plant, and Apollos water; but it is God that must give the increase.

For the Crisis.

The New Lyre.

Having examined the new Lyre, I must say that is is, in my judgment, one of the finest collections of music ever made. Let it come into general use in our churches, and stir up the gift of song among all who wait for the coming King. D. T. T.

Seeing We Look for Such Things.

BY H. L. H.

"We look for"—something. Who does not look ahead? Surely the men are few that can contentedly sit down without turning one glance to the future. Is it to them a scene of cloudless splendor? they look forward. Or is it but a scene of starless night? Still men will look forward. Men are prone to contemplation, and what can furnish material for contemplation like the dim, shadowy, unknown and impenetrable future? Men look—but alas! how often when they reach the looked for, longed for object—"'tis gone." It seemed a substance—'t was a shade.

It seemed a marble column, firm and high,
'Twas but a fleecy cloud that swept the sky.

Thus men are deceived. Still they run their ceaseless race, hurrying on to pluck the withered roses and the lasting thorns. Thus are men disappointed, while they "look" for "earthly wealth," careless about "treasures in heaven;"—for earthly glory, regardless of the eternal glory that awaits the saint; for worldly honor, forgetful of that which cometh from God only. And as they weep over blighted hopes, and curse their helpless lot, well for them would it be could they uncover their blinded eyes and see, that "passing away is written on the world, and all the world contains."

We look, but not for things like these. O, no! we have chased earth's phantoms and flowers, till we can say: All, all is vanity; and to it we would no longer be subject, for it we would no longer seek. Still we look! How can we avoid it? It is an element of our being. We could not eradicate it. But while the principle of hope in the worldling's hearts is twining around this world, with us it is not so: our anchor has been heaved up from the muddy bed where once it dragged, and cast on better anchorage ground, far within the vail. Our cable is not wet by the heaving billows, not chafed by the sunken rocks. It is far beyond their reach, twining around the pillars of Jehovah's throne!

We look for things that God hath spoken of—"things surpassing fable, and yet true,"—visions, before whose brightness mortal eyes are blind—before whose glory all of earth is dimmed. "We look" beyond the blasting of every earthly hope, the ruin of every earthly treasure; beyond the howl of the rich and the wail of the mighty; beyond the passing heavens and the melting earth; and lo! what glories greet our joyful eyes! From that conflagrant mass, nature's vast wreck, another, nobler, purer earth comes forth. Jehovah speaks, and heaven and earth are new!

O! how all things will then be changed! how glorious that change will be! Where earth once groaned and sighed, glad hills shall sing and forests clap their hands! Where toils were endured, triumphs shall be enjoyed! Where sighs burst forth, songs shall forever swell! Where gloom once gathered, glory now shall gild!

Where thorns once grew, fir trees shall cast their shade;
Where briars stood, the myrtle's boughs shall spread;
Where pale now riots, pleasure shall bear a sway—
Darkness shall pass and yield to perfect day.
Where curse doth wither and where sin doth stain,
God shall restore, and righteousness shall reign.

"We look," and oh, what deep solemnity! what spotless purity—what constant watchfulness—what perfect love—what holy joy, should prospects like ours inspire! God has ever had a faithful race of "pilgrims and strangers" of whom this blighted earth was never worthy; (Heb. 11: 38); but when that brighter, holier, worthier world shall [illegible], shall we be worthy of it? Shall we join the blood-washed band, who come through tribulation's depths to Zion's glory-gilded summit?

"Seeing we look for such things, be diligent, that ye may be found of Him in peace, without spot and blameless."

For the Crisis.

"Watchman, What of the Night?"

Isa. 21: 11.

We see by this passage that God's ministers are watchmen placed upon the walls of Zion, and that when the reasonable inquiry comes from the little flock, "Watchman, what of the night"? he should be prepared to say, "Behold the morning cometh"! for it is the watchman that gives the hour of the night. Should the watchman heed the inquiry? The answer is, yes. For while the sure word of God tells him what of the night, he should be ready at any time to give the answer and tell us where on the stream of time we are. And now while event comes thundering upon event, it plainly shows us that something great is about to transpire, and while some expect that Republicanism is about to prevail, others think that Spiritualism is soon to triumph; and others are looking for a temporal Millennium.

But how shall we decide on this point? The blessed Bible comes to our aid, and tells us that an awful state of distress is coming; such a time as never was. Let us take the Bible for our standard and see if the world is growing better or worse. Go back to the time of Noah, and see if men were wicked then. Surely the Lord will do nothing but he revealeth it by his prophets. Peter says, "We have also a more sure word of prophecy, whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn and the day star arise in your hearts, knowing this first that no prophecy of the Scriptures is of any private interpretation." Go back to Gen. 6: 5, and see what God says about it. "And God saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth, and that every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually." Turn to Daniel. Those wicked persecutors cast him into the lions' den, because he prayed to the God of heaven. And who was it that sought the life of Jesus when but a babe? and who was it that led him up the Mount Calvary and nailed him to the rugged wood? It was the wicked Jews, his own chosen people. Think for a moment of the ignominious death of Paul, Stephen, and Peter, and many others, too numerous to mention, who have died in the cause of Christ. Does this show that the world is growing better? No, is the answer. Jesus told his disciples that Jerusalem should be trodden down by the Gentiles until the times of the Gentiles should be fulfilled. And have we not many signs that come along in their regular order? Has not the sun been darkened? Have not the stars fallen from heaven, as the fig-tree casts her untimely figs? And have not the powers of heaven been shaken? Have we not abundant evidence that the sixth seal has already been broken? This is a point on which the learned commentators of the present day agree with us. Where are we standing on the stream of time? In the last end of time, when we should be looking for the coming of Jesus, the resurrection, and the establishment of his kingdom, and immortality to be given to the sleeping millions.

Now, while thinking of these blessed truths, and on being asked, what of the night, watchman? our answer is—"The morning cometh, and also the night." Then, brethren and sisters, let us be faithful, watchful and prayerful, that we may at last gain the everlasting kingdom.

O. L. C.

Yarmouth, Dec. 21.

Obituary Notice.

Died, at Seneca Falls, N. Y., on Monday, Dec. 12th, 1859, Sister Maria E. Sisler, wife of Bro. Jerome H. Sisler, and eldest daughter of Bro. John C. Thayer, aged 22 years, after a short but very painful sickness, leaving two young children to mourn her loss.

Sister Maria, "from her youth up," exhibited a strictly moral and upright deportment, and was theoretically a Bible-truth believer and admirer, beloved by her acquaintances. Sometime in February last, her mind became greatly exercised on the subject of being wholly consecrated to the Lord, and of enjoying his sweet smile and approbation, when she determined to give herself up to do his will, and prepare for his glorious kingdom. On profession of her faith, she was "buried with him in baptism" by Bro. Silas Hewitt. Since that time she has been looking for the "kingdom of God," with her face thitherward. Eight days before her death, she was with us at the Lord's table, and spoke of her hope of meeting us all at the "marriage supper of the Lamb." This was unexpectedly her last meeting with us. But, praise the Lord, we "sorrow not even as others which have no hope;" for we confidently anticipate the glorious time of meeting again in the kingdom of our Father.

"O, glorious hour! O, blest abode!
I shall be there and like my Lord—
We'll all rise together in the morning."

Bro. C. F. Sweet, of Albion, preached the funeral discourse in the Wesleyan Church, from Job 14: 14. "If a man die, shall he live again?" and pressed home the truth of a resurrection.

To the bereaved husband and relations we would say, "Toil on! fight on!" for to us is still appointed the "work of faith and labor of love." The time has not yet come for us to put off the armor and lay it by. We must fight manfully the "good fight of faith"—[illegible] end, in order to merit the crown of life and inherit the kingdom!

"We'll be there, we'll be there, in a little while;
We'll join the pure and the blest,
We'll have the palm, the robe, the crown,
And forever be at rest."

Thos. G. Newman.

Herald and Expositor will please copy.

ITEMS.

Politics in Rome.—A letter from Rome of Nov. 27th, says: "All is quiet here. The Pope will reform when the moon falls. Louis Napoleon is his sole support, and if that charlatan does not look out, he will humble himself at last. I am quite tranquil as to final results here. The dukes cannot come back. Romagna will never return under the Pope's dominion, and every day of the present condition is a day gained. The people are learning that they can take care of themselves without a king. Meanwhile the finances of Rome are in a ruinous state. Now that the Romagna is gone, Rome cannot support herself, and everything is going behind-hand. There are no strangers here, and much suffering among the people exists in consequence. The streets are full of thieves, and the shopkeepers, servants and padroni of apartments are wringing their hands in despair."—N. Y. Post.

☞ A remarkable incident in the religious world transpired in New York on Saturday. A Mrs. Silberman, who was brought up as a Presbyterian, made public profession of the Jewish faith at a Jewish synagogue, and was received into the Israelitish fold.

☞ It is common, says Tacitus, to esteem most what is most unknown.

Notices, &c.

Notice.

The next session of the Western Central Quarterly Conference will be holden in Rome, Me., Town House, commencing Thursday, P. M., 2 o'clock, January 5th, and continue over the Sabbath. We especially desire that all our ministers connected with this quarterly conference be in attendance, and as many other brethren and sisters as can come conveniently. Come in the spirit and love of Christ, prepared to labor for the salvation of sinners.

We cordially invite ministers and others from all other places, to come and worship and work with us. Let those who cannot come, pray that God may make this effort a special blessing to the community. Brethren will call on Bro. N. Martin, David Watson, John Fletcher, or call at Bro. Ira Bland's store, near the Town House, who will direct them where to go.

H. B. Savey, Chairman.
I. C. Wellcome, Secretary.

Mt. Vernon, Me., Dec. 15th, 1859.

N. B. Should there be a severe storm on the first day of the meeting, we shall adjourn one week.

Notice to Eastern Friends.

You must be patient, and I will answer all letters as I have time. And if any think they are forgotten, I would be glad to have them remind me of my promise by dropping me a letter at Earlville, Ill. Western friends do the same. W. Pratt.

☞ There will be a quarterly conference at "The Standish" in Fairfield, Huron Co., Ohio, commencing Saturday, one o'clock, P. M., Dec. 31st, and continue over Lord's day. A general attendance of the brethren and sisters in the Lord is prayed for. We are notified that Bro. J. B. Cook, of Rochester, N. Y., will be present, (the Lord willing) and speak to us of "the like precious faith" and "the good things to come," from 2 Pet. 1: 1 and Heb. 9: 11, at 6 1-2 o'clock, P. M., and 10 1-2 A. M. Lord's day. He will also preach at the "Burgh" 6 1-2 P. M. Lord's day, provided the brethren there make arrangements for the same, otherwise at the "Standish."

By request, Geo. W. Stetson.

Olena, Dec. 12th, 1859.

Conference.

Notice is hereby given that the first quarterly conference of Buchanan district will be held at Buchanan, Mich., and will commence on Thursday, Jan. 5th, at half past 6 o'clock, P. M., and continue over the following Sabbath. We hope to see a general rally at this conference, as no possible pains will be spared in making arrangements for preaching in destitute places. Come one, come all. Bro. P. B. Morgan is expected to be present to assist in preaching the Word.

For the church. D. R. Mansfield.

Conference.

In Earlville, Ill., will commence on Wednesday, Jan. 4th, 1860, and continue over the Lord's day following. One and all, come and pray the Lord to give us a feast.

W. Pratt.

☞ I will hold a conference in Elizabeth, Joe Davis Co., Ill., Wednesday, Jan. 18th, and continue over Lord's day following. The brethren must write me if they wish the above named meeting, and name where (what depot) they will meet me. Direct Muscatine, Iowa, care of J. Covell.

Walter Pratt.

Appointments.

Bro. D. T. Taylor will preach in Boston, Chapman Hall .... Sunday, Jan. 1st.

I will preach as follows:—
Prospect, Ct. .... Dec. 31st and Jan. 1st
Pine Swamp .... Jan. 8th
Pawling, N. Y. .... Jan. 15th
Hazel Plains, Ct. .... Jan. 22d

The intermediate time subject to the order of brethren in the same or adjacent places.

T. S. Canfield.

J. G. Smith will preach in Wolcott, Vt. .... Jan. 1st

Bro. Geo. Otis is requested to meet me there.

By request, I appoint to preach as follows:—
Newfield .... Jan. 1st
Winsted .... Jan. 2d
Pleasant Valley .... Jan. 3d
Bakerville, (Bro. Burr, please arrange) .... Jan. 4th
Wolcottville, (Bro. will arrange) .... Jan. 5th
Litchfield Station .... Jan. 6th
Plymouth Hollow .... Jan. 6th
Northfield, (where Bro. Humphreyville may appoint) .... Jan. 8th
Harwinton, (Bro. Elliott's) .... Jan. 10th
Waterbury, (Bro. Deany's) .... Jan. 11th
Bristol, (Bro. Hough's) .... Jan. 12th
New Britain .... Jan. 13th
Wallingford .... Jan. 15th

L. S. Ludington.

The Lord willing, Bro. J. W. Crabtree will preach in Winsted .... Friday evening, Dec. 30th
Pleasant Valley, Lord's day .... Jan. 1st
Winsted .... Tuesday evening, Jan. 3d
Unionville .... Thursday and Friday evenings, Jan. 5th and 6th.
[illegible]

Bro. Champlin appoints to preach in Bristol, Ct. .... Jan. 8th
Bro. [illegible] .... Jan. 22d

John M. Sutliff.

J. W. Crabtree appoints to preach in Unionville Thursday and Friday evenings, Jan. 5th and 6th.

Bro. J. K. Bellows will meet with the brethren at Hattertown, Ct. .... Jan. 1st

Eld. Wm. Shepherd appoints to preach in
Springfield, Mass. .... Jan. 1st
Chester Factories, Mass. .... Jan. 2d
Palmer, Mass. .... Jan. 3d
Springfield, Mass. .... Jan. 4th, 5th, 6th and 8th
Hartford, Conn. .... Feb. 8th and 15th
New Britain .... Feb. 17th

J. B. Cook will preach, Lord willing, at the Quarterly Meeting near Norwalk, Ohio, as Bro. Alling shall appoint, Jan. 1st, 1860. Will preach on about ten days, as brethren may arrange.

Eld. C. F. Sweet appoints to preach in Canesus .... Jan. 10th to the 15th

Business Matters.

To Correspondents.

☞ Will the Sister who sent us a communication from Goshen, Mass., send us her name?

☞ Sr. Mary Mathews.—It has been forwarded according to your request. Will answer your letter soon.

B. Perkins.—The money was received. You will see it was credited in the issue of Nov. 16th.

S. G. Clark's P. O. address is Freeport, Ill.

M. D. W.—Hubbardston is in Mass.

Jas. W. Nute.—You can obtain the "Union Movement" by addressing the publisher, R. S. Bosworth, Cincinnati, Ohio. Price ten cents.

Cash Receipts.

Preachers' Aid Society.—Isaac Ewell $5.00. To Dec. 26th, $94.00.

Saml Dodge 260, H C Keith 250, Danl. Hogarth p. p. 244, J Annable 234, Geo. A Barker 260, J C Finley 250, J C Young 247, A Hopkins 249, J W Gove 249, F A Dikeman 234, A P Chaney 249, S N Langley 234, S G Clark 250, Jas. Strang 250, L Barnaba 250, G Wheeler 234, L A Lang 263, C Gilmore 251, J R Savage 249, P Richards 249, A Yarde 249, H Babcock 251, Wm. Collins 246, S C Smith 242, S F Mudget 215, L M Colburn 234, W Lees 237—$1.00 each.

H T Miller 295, J O Griswold 276, P J Pilcher 234, S E Waterbury 234, R Knight 234, S Marsh 226, A Westcott 242, H Pratt 260, R A Sherman 234, J Bemis 241, C Goodwin 275, S C Bailey 234, A Bellows, D Harker 260, W Cross 253, Jno. Oldershaw 260, S Brackett 260, I Kinney 234, I Clowley 234, D Merrill 234.—$2.00 each.

N C Jerome 234, $1.40, E S Matheeson 244, $1.29, Benj. Hill 250, $1.13, A B Flanders 227, $1.50, Jos. Hunt 260, $3.00, M Glines 233, $1.62, do for poor 18 cts., M A Packard 21 cts., G Barrows 24 cts., M Day 234, p. p. $1.44, J A Lawton 237, 50 cts., G L Wade 236, 50 cts.

Books and Tracts.—S G Mathewson $3.71, J M Gove 36 cts., S J Burwell 10 cts., J M Jennes 30 cts., G P Hill 6 cts., J Haresign 12 cts., E Hodsin $2.00, B Hill 18 cts., Jer. Hill 09 cts., J Brooks $11.05, B Perkins $4.00, J Parry $10.00, J Billings $3.46, C W Dight $5.00, W B Wilson $1.00, J T Ongley 25 cts., D T Ross $10.00, M W Russel 9 cts., G W Green 70 cts., S B Howard $1.00, A P Allen $4.00, N Orcutt $6.00, A S Brown 6 cts., H Pratt $1.00, G L Hastings 11 cts., P I Pitcher $1.00, D Harker $1.34, B H Taylor 11 cts., Flor. Bliss $2.30, F A Baker $4.66, N Bailey 25 cts.

Books and Tracts.

Law requires all transient publications shall be pre-paid, hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on TRACTS is only one half cent per ounce, if sent in packages of eight ounces or more. books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for ANY of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the Crisis, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

The Rich Man and Lazarus, Thief on the Cross, and the Souls under the Altar; an exposition of Matt. 10: 28, Gen. 2: 17, with other interesting matter. By Miles Grant. Price, single, 5 cents; $3.00 per hundred; 1-4 off per dozen. Postage 1 cent.

The Soul—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words nephesh and psuche as employed in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant, Boston. 32 pp.; 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. They weigh about one ounce each. A valuable tract for the times. Get one.

The Spirit—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words ruach and pneuma as found in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant. 32 pp., price 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. A valuable aid in the study of the Scriptures.

The Parable of the Rich Man and Lazarus; does it imply eternal future suffering? By C. F. Hudson. 24 pp. Price, 3 cts. single. $2.00 per hundred.

The Doctrine of Everlasting Punishment: a discussion of the question, "Do the Scriptures teach the doctrine of the eternal conscious suffering of the wicked?" Between Dr. J. Litch and Eld. Miles Grant. Price, single, 25 cts. Postage 3 cts. 1-4 off per dozen.

What is Man? A Bible view of his creation. The meaning of soul, spirit, death and hell, by Miles Grant. Price, single copy 5 cts; $3.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

"The Speechless Guest at the Marriage Feast," by John F. Cotton, being a short review of the parable, with statistical remarks of its illustration in the destruction of Jerusalem; and its positive negation of the doctrine of election and reprobation. Price 5 cts. single, postage 1 ct. $3.00 per hundred.

Anti-Eternal Torment. By Edwin Burnham. Price 1 cent, single, 75 cts. per hundred. Postage 1 ct.

Death not Life: or the Destruction of the Wicked scripturally Established. By J. Blain, Baptist minister. Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cents single; postage 5 cents. Bound, 40 cents; postage 8 cents.

Church Debts. By W. Ramsey, D. D. A rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cts—postage 9 cts.

The Rights of Wrong, or, Is Evil Eternal? By C. F. Hudson. Price 5 cts. single. 5 copies for 20 cts. Mailed post paid. $3.00 per hundred. Sold by G. W. Young, 138 William St., New York; Truman and Spafford, Cincinnati, and S. C. Griggs & Co., Chicago.

Cruden's Condensed Concordance. Every Bible student should have a copy. Price, postpaid, $1.50.

Son of God, by H. Grew, 10 cts. single; postage 1 cent.

Bible meaning of the word Hell. Price 3 cts. single; [illegible]

The [illegible] $6.00.

The [illegible] designed for [illegible] by J. V. Himes. [illegible]

Words of Warning [illegible] postage 1 ct.; $1.50 per [illegible]

English Bibles.—We have [illegible] than they can be bought at any [illegible] city.

Life and Religious Experience of [illegible] Munger, including [illegible] connected with campmeetings and [illegible] ten by himself. This is a very [illegible] and will be read with interest by all. [illegible]—postage 10 cents.

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed; or Christ the promised Messiah. By Mrs. Mary A. Seymour. An excellent tract to throw light upon the Scriptures, and upon the [illegible] of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $3.00 per hundred,—5 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

200 Stories for Children, compiled by T. M. Preble. An excellent collection of interesting incidents, well calculated to benefit the young. Price 40 cents; postage 7 cents.

Foster's Letter and Tract on Hell, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, [illegible] $1., postage paid.

An Appeal to Pious Trinitarians. By H. Grew. Price 2 cts., postage 1 ct.

The Wicked not Immortal. Two hundred texts quoted to prove the destruction of the wicked. By Eld. Jacob Blain. Price 1 cent single; $1.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

The Great Error Exposed; or, Endless Misery not a Bible Doctrine. In this tract all texts relied on to prove endless misery are explained, and two hundred for destruction quoted. By Eld. Jacob Blain. Price 2 cents single, $2.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

We also have the following works, published and for sale by H. L. Hastings, Providence R. I.

1.—The Voice of the Church on the Coming and kingdom of the Redeemer, or a history of the Reign of Christ on Earth, by D. T. Taylor, edited with a preface by H. L. Hastings. [illegible] pp. 420, price $1, postage 18 cents.

2.—The Great Controversy between God and Man. Its origin, progress and termination, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. pp. 167, neatly bound in cloth, price 60 cents—postage 10c.

3.—Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion, and a Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. Edited with a preface, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. 12mo. pp. 122. Price, in paper covers, 30 cts.—postage 5 cts., cloth gilt, 40 cts.—post 8 cts.

4.—The Fate of Infidelity: or the Dealings of Providence with Modern Infidels; together with an appendix, containing a brief account of the special judgments visited upon the early opposers of Christianity; by a converted Infidel. 1 vol. 18 mo. pp. 175, cloth gilt, 25 cents—post-paid.

5.—Future Punishment: an Argument in two parts, from Reason and Scripture, by H. H. Dobney, Baptist minister of England; with an appendix on the State of the Dead, by John Milton. This work is one of patient thought and calm and christian argument. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 312, price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

6.—Debt and Grace: or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C. F. Hudson. A most learned and valuable work, exhibiting great candor, ability and research, containing quotations from some four hundred writers of all ages and languages, and showing conclusively that eternal life is the peculiar privilege of the believer in Jesus Christ. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 480, price $1.25—post paid.

7.—Pauline Theology: or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. A convincing argument, deduced from a careful examination of every passage on the subject of Future Punishment in Paul's fourteen epistles. 12mo. pp. 84, 15 cts. single, $10 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

8.—The Old Paths: or the Primitive Doctrine of a Future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolic fathers, with comments and remarks by H. L. Hastings. pp. 87 12mo. 15 cts. single, $12 per hundred—post. 3c.

Important Questions—8 Nos., 4 pp. each. Price, per sett, 3 cts. single; $1.50 per hundred.

Fables of Infidelity, and Facts of Faith. By R. Patterson. 12mo. Price, postpaid, 75 cts.; $6 per dozen.

Tracts on Prophecy, (bound,) 294 pp. Price, postpaid, 60 cts.

Tracts on Immortality, (bound,) 230 pp. Price, postpaid, 60 cts. Both volumes mailed for $1.

Tracts of 24 pages. Price, 5 cts. single copy; $3 per hundred: postage 1 ct. each, or half a cent per ounce if ordered to the amount of eight ounces or upwards.

1—Church not in Darkness; 2—The Three Worlds; 3—The Last Days; 4—Plain Truths, by Hastings. 5—Noah, his Age and Ours; 6—Doom of all Nations; 7—It is Done; by [illegible] 8—A Voice of Warning; 9—New Heavens and Earth; by D. T. Taylor. 10—[illegible] 11—State of the Dead; by Milton. 12—Intermediate State; by Grew.

Tracts at 3 cents single copy; $1.50 per hundred: postage 1 ct. each, or half cent an ounce for packages of eight or more ounces.

1—Future Punishment; by Grew; [illegible] tract number one, Destiny of the Wicked; 3—Outline of the coast of Man; [illegible] Key of Truth; 5—Man's Future State, by Sheldon. —6 Olive Leaves, by the sett.

Tracts at 2 cents single copy; $1 per hundred.

1—The Night Cometh; by J. Adey. 2—The Day of Judgment; by St. Cyril.

Tracts at 1 cent single copy; 50 cents per hundred.

1—Olive Leaves, separate; 2—[illegible] separate; 3—Forty Questions on [illegible] 4—Scripture Searchers, one, two, three, four, five and six.

The above Tracts are on hand, and orders can be filled at once. [illegible] Orders with the CASH are solicited. Persons ordering tracts should order as much as [illegible] cents worth, as packages of [illegible] ounces or more go cheaper than [illegible] Those who buy books [illegible] liberal discount. The poor can have them, free by sending stamps to pay the postage,—and those that FEEL poor also.

Address H. L. Hastings, Providence, R. I.

For sale also by N. Branch, Moline, Ill.; G. W. Young, 138 William St., New York.

* The Landmarks are issued in a series of six Nos. which can be separated for distribution. The sett contains, The Coming and Kingdom of Christ, [illegible] 20,000 Baptists; the Duration of the Earth, by A. Clarke; Hope and Duty of the Church [illegible] ry; Restitution, by Cyril; Warning [illegible] Mather; Loving Christ's Appearing [illegible]

† The Olive Leaves are three [illegible] that can be separated for distribution. [illegible] Little Children, Love one Another, [illegible] Resting Place; three, My Friend; [illegible] Love; five, Abundant Grace; six, [illegible] Hastings. Just the thing to [illegible] classes of saints and sinners.

Glad Tidings: or Bible [illegible] and [illegible] struction of [illegible] ment. All [illegible] and [illegible] 1 cent.

The Three Kingdoms: or, [illegible] God the Father, the [illegible] of the Lord Jesus Christ, [illegible] as it was, as it is, and as it [illegible] Preble. Price [illegible] 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

[illegible]

Sacred Pathways in Palestine.

The pathways of Thy land are little changed
Since thou wert there;
The busy world through other ways has ranged,
And left these bare.

The rocky path still climbs the glowing steep
Of Olivet;
Though rains of two millenniums wear it deep,
Men tread it yet.

Still to the gardens o'er the brook it leads,
Quiet and low;
Before his sheep the shepherd on it treads,
His voice they know.

The wild fig throws broad shadows o'er it still,
As once o'er Thee;
Peasants go home at evening up that hill
To Bethany.

And, as when gazing Thou didst weep o'er them,
From height to height
The white roofs of discrowned Jerusalem
Burst on our sight.

These ways were strewed with garments once, and palm,
Which we tread thus;
Here through Thy triumph on Thou passedst, calm,—
On to Thy cross.

The waves have washed fresh sands upon the shore of Galilee;
But chiseled in the hillsides evermore
Thy paths we see.

Man has not changed them in that slumb'ring land,
Nor time effaced:
Where Thy feet trod to bless, we still may stand,
All can be traced.

Yet we have traces of Thy footsteps far
Truer than these:
Where'er the poor, and tried, and suffering are,
Thy steps faith sees.

Nor with fond sad regrets Thy steps we trace;—
Thou art not dead!
Our path is onward, till we see Thy face,
And hear Thy tread.

And now, wherever meets Thy lowliest band
In praise and prayer,
There is Thy presence, there Thy holy land,—
Thou, Thou, art there!

—The Three Wakings.

For the Crisis.

Religion.—No. 4.

IS IT PROGRESSIVE IN PRINCIPLE?

The most mighty and imposing forces of progress are often long silent; and to the ignorant may offer no thought of the power which will afterward be developed. Long have the dormant energies of principle slept in past ages, till some fortunate change in the condition of human affairs, or the uprising of some gigantic mind, has thrown open the gates of light—the thunder-roll of distant clouds then signals the departure of ancient and absorbing doubt, and error in broken fragments gathers away from the heaven of intelligence.

The river across an elevated plain runs slowly; sluggishly it pursues its lazy course through swamp and marsh; but there is power in it; the elements of strength are incorporated and represented, though its glassy surface seems only intended for the play of the ripple and the dip of the fish-hawk's wing, or the plash of the fisherman's oar. There is life in it: death is in it too. Beyond is the splendid cascade, the sublime waterfall, over which comes rushing the foaming flood. Nature has here prepared scenes and sent forward the actor. Nature applies her force, sounds gratify the ear, sights please the eye, health rises on etherial wings, and by the skill of man, the rolling torrent forces into action and applies to the practical purpose of man's will, the machines that serve millions. A city has arisen; but the wild duck flies over the cataract as before; the plover plays over the solitary lake of the morass; the trout and pike dart, as before, from shade to sheen, and the halloo of the huntsman rings along the margin.

Latent forces need direction and application. Once bring the dull and stagnant waters of past theology into full play, and by the action, a force upon mind secures the working of intellect. This is the foundation of ideas. They are the fabrics. The raw material of truth has been submitted to an action of mental mechanism: the power is but the application of the latent force of true theologic element in the right direction. The beautiful fine-textured, strong and useful garment, is the result. Ideas are the most powerful existences in the whole world of human existence and action. The thought once secured, from whatever cause, and the soul entrenches itself. The beleaguered heart will offer unshrinking defence within the fortifications of its own conceived ideas. Besides, it is well nigh impregnable. His citadel around him is thrown outward, by himself, as the preparation of his indomitable exhibition of bravery, and every breach repaired on the instant; because rock and iron, timber and tools, are with him, as well as batteries and ammunition. The sword, the prison, the faggot, the rack; the long ascendency of despotism; the confiscation of estates; the sacrifice of human victims, in untold [illegible] all the diabolical paraphernalia of persecution have failed to dethrone the distinct thought—the great idea of a people [illegible] in ideas, the soul finds her [illegible]. The ascendency of ideas is the [illegible].

[illegible] and [illegible] of the past [illegible]

and glade, paddling the light canoe over lake and river; and hunting game in the grand, natural and majestic parks of a continent, with council fires and predatory excursions; or the savage yell of the warrior; the death-wail of the mangled white men; the shriek of the captive matron and maiden; burnings, pillage, scalping; screechings of infant victims rending the forest air,—we are not in that life now! That was a transition state. The presence of an old fact will not necessarily cause us to live in the olden day; nor should it be expected to give us the olden life. A live Indian in New England, does not imply the tomahawk, the scalping knife and torture. Once it did. The land, once in peril and fear, has not forgotten the historical facts of the past; it has prevented their continuance.

The observation of an old theological truth may create excitement, give interest or pleasure; but it is not the necessary chain that, binding us within its own folds, would link us to the past conception. The direction and application are demanded; and they begin to appear. The progressive inquiry of man secures results here as well as in philosophical research. The great facts in theological science of the past should not be forgotten; but they do not carry us back centuries. They cannot. They should not be ignored; but they do not place us under absolute obligations. They do not bind us. The mind will obtain ideas in theology and eternally guard its gains.

To obtain the idea by our own discovery—which may indeed have been known by others—is nevertheless a new and interesting fact for us. An inhabitant of Saturn coming to the earth would see an oak tree—its leaves—a hard substance on its stems. This is a wonder; how is it produced? He looks, and on the ground he will find the same thing he has seen on the tree. One he will find in the moist earth. It is broken, it is sprouted; and he will see another in which leaves, like those on the tree, appear—another with a stem and larger leaves. This is the way the oak arises.

One of the greatest truths in nature is, the reacting and recuperative forces of the natural elements, when allowed their play. Fruit compensating growth; result compensating labor. The oak bears the acorn; the acorn produces the oak. We knew the fact long before. To him it is a new truth. If he calls it any thing else but oak and acorn, it makes no difference in the truth.

To some, discoveries in truth are easy, the mind rests not without a further view of the principle and foundation of the thing. Such are always ahead of their time; they are the radical revulsionists of every time—the Iconoclasts of each century. They produce the new and beautiful tree, while the old oak decays. The masses are most happy in discovering the improved result—the system—the religion—regardless of the labor required to eventuate; unmindful of the improved condition of the principle, careful only of its action. Such are conservatives, while the first must of necessity take in the greatest minds within the range of advanced position; the last secures some of the smallest, within the narrow limits of the trailing path.

Protestantism, I am told, is the great progression in the principle of religion. Doubtless it should be; it will admit of it; but Protestantism is likely to be outdone and overmastered. One half the effort may be deprecated; the other must be admired; for the connectional application secures liberty of ideas, with the improved principles philosophically arranged, and the system thus constructed. Alas that this should become Rationalism! Rather alas, that Rationalism should leave the ground of theological inculcation for the lone, freezing sentimentalship of philosophy!

The National Church of England is Protestant! Is progress exhausted there? Is conscience ever enslaved? Is the heavy taxation to support the establishment never complained of?

In Prussia a Protestant Evangelical church is established. Could not the principle on which the worship of that country is founded be vastly improved? And soon it must be improved. Germany boasts of a Protestantism; it is a formal State religion. Innovation is nearly impossible, and as dangerous as in Catholic countries, and as much so now as before 1848.

A minister of the gospel, a few years ago, in one of the German cities, announced that Jesus Christ was the greatest Republican that ever lived! He filled up his sermon with quotations from the language of Christ, to prove his assertions. The next time of service, four constables prevented the assembling of the people. If a man will not have his child christened by the time it is two weeks old, he will be fined or imprisoned. The clergy of that establishment will defend the reigning prince, even in the violation of his oath.

Protestantism has free play in America; yet the entire religion of large portions of the land is conventional. We change in some localities our religion, as our politics, at the call of an imperious vox populi.

W. A. C.

☞ The hypocrite may spin so fair a thread as to deceive his own eye; he may [illegible] himself, and not know himself to be the spider.

For the Crisis.

The Last Roman "Head."

IS IT NOT NAPOLEON III.?

We find no instance in the entire history of human affairs, in which the combined agencies of earth have united, at any revealed crisis, to exalt the wrong man. The overruling providence of God, holds, or lets loose the wayward passions of men, so as to justify the strong language of the prophet: "He maketh the wrath of man to praise Him; and the remainder of wrath He will restrain."—Ps. 76.

Augustus Cæsar, the Roman; Alexander, the Grecian; Cyrus, the Persian; and Nebuchadnezzar, the Babylonian conqueror, each found their way opened before them by Providence; and their plans were directly and indirectly sustained by all classes of men. Taking this great fact, that there is such an overruling Providence, as the basis of our argument, I remark,

I. That Napoleon has been aided by the most antagonistic nationalities, Romish and Protestant; Royalist and Republican; Russian, Austrian, and Mohammedan! No other man of our time has been so sustained. Protestant England has given him her material and moral support, in wounding Russia and avenging his uncle's defeat in 1812—in which the Grand Turk concurred with all the power of his empire!

Again, Russia, though humbled, has become his ally; and has aided him by holding Germany in check during his Italian war, and now in proposing the European Congress. Nay, Austria, his late rival, relieved him of the fearful responsibility of declaring war; and then joined him in making "peace" just when his interests demanded it, in order to confound Germany as she was rushing to arms, and compel her to feel her folly!

The word and providence of God point out Napoleon as the ruling sovereign of the prophetic earth

II. He is at the head of France. France is the frog power of Rev. 16: 12, that is to take the lead in the mighty war of the great day! Therefore, he is the last head—because,

III. There is no number for the Napoleonic Dynasty, save the 7th. Five had fallen in the apostle's time. One was then existent, the Imperial, which style and title were worn by Justinian and Phocas when the Popedom was set up; as well as by Francis II. of the house of Hapsburg in Austria, when it was abolished in 1804. Then Napoleon adopted a new title, appropriate to a new headship—Emperor of France and King of Italy.

IV. This dynasty fills the prophetic picture—"Was, is not, and yet is!" Napoleon III. has revived the dynasty of Napoleon I., after the lapse of over forty years, during which it was "not", by consequence, all the leading agencies in European politics are constrained to concur in setting up the right man—the man of prophecy. Hence he is the last head. Providence points to him.

V. He sustains the symbolic woman—the Romish church. No power has been owned and felt, supreme in Rome for about ten years, save that of Napoleon III.—Therefore he is the last headship, though perhaps not to be fully developed till after the Second Advent.

VI. He has started the new Italian nationality—of which no one dares to be the head, as yet. The Pope is afraid to accept it; and no one can accept it save Napoleon III. (or his appointee.) Thus geography and history concur with prophecy and the providence of God, to point out Napoleon III. as the last head of the Roman Empire. In this relation he has no rival! No one else can claim such and so many proofs of being "the man of prophecy"—at this important crisis.

The grand outline periods are ending. The seventh and "last trump" is about sounding. An awful crisis in the world's affairs is now just opening, and events big with destiny, crowd on events still more startling! Surely, the Lord is coming. Amen.

J. B. C.

For the Crisis

We Love His Appearing.

First, because upon that event hangs the veracity of that God who is glorious in holiness, fearful in praises, a God doing wonders. Secondly, because our blessed Lord and Savior Jesus Christ will then take the position for which he was born, and for which cause he came into the world; namely, King of kings and Lord of lords, having the sea for his inheritance and the uttermost parts of the earth for his possession; for not until then will, or can he, see of the travail of his soul and be satisfied. The seat of mediation at the Father's right hand must be occupied until the day when judgment shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, and the time come that the saints shall take the kingdom under the whole heaven and possess it forever and ever. Thus will he then be glorified in his saints, and under his millennial reign will saints go forth with him from the cleansed sanctuary to share his final conquest in yielding the balance of the Abrahamic territory, which will then be in the hands of its legitimate heir, and on his vesture may be read, King of Kings and Lord of lords. For this honor have all the saints; and he will not fail until he has set judgment in the earth.

We love His appearing, thirdly, because we long to see the day break and the shadows flee away. We long to behold the long line of holy martyrs, from a righteous Abel down to the dawning of this day, in their immortal constellation, from which they can die no more, wearing the uniform of heaven's choicest sons, raising the song, "Thou art worthy, for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every nation and kindred and tongue and people." We love it, because it will be an eternal cure for slavery; the long down-trodden slave will be loosed from his manacles, and the poor galley from his oar; for in it shall be no galley with oars; the gallant ships shall not pass that way laden with bodies and souls of men. We love it, because the earth shall then cast out its dead and no longer cover its slain, and its final groan produce the unheard of event of a nation born at once.

We love it the more ardently as we see the day approaching, because the church for the space of about six thousand years, even in its most tranquil state, has been subject to a conquering foe, which has reigned supreme and laid its captives lifeless in dust at its feet, and because this event destroys death, and him that had the power of death, and delivers them who through fear of death were all their life time subject to bondage. Hence we pray, "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven." These are some of the many reasons why we love his blessed appearing. PETER H. LAWRENCE.

Lawrenceville, C. E.

Selections.

Immortality of Goodness.

Extracts from a sermon by H. W. BEECHER, on Isa. 55: 10, 11

"Can any man imagine a greater difference between cause and effect than that to which we are accustomed in the survey of nature? Who can imagine a greater difference than exists between the rain-drop when it falls, and the rain-drop when it reappears speedily in vegetable growths—in the grass, the flower, the stalwart tree? It comes upon the cloud, and rests upon the earth; but speedily it is caught up, and set to work in the strange enginery of nature. It finds its way into life, and in that life it makes acquaintance through the leaves with the sun. And how different is it from the rain-drop that fell in the late shower, when it shakes itself in the grass, or forms a part of those luscious juices of the fruit that tempt the eye and the palate! It fell rain: it comes forth a leaf. It fell a liquid, transparent drop: it rises in varied forms of beauty and use. Who, looking upon the leaves of to-day, would dream that they are those drops that fell last week in that haze and that gray storm? And yet they are! You cannot tell by the way a cause strikes the earth, what is the form of the effect it shall produce when it enters the laboratory where God is the chemist and the worker."

* * * * * * *

"The power of goodness, even in its least forms, in this world, is never lost. And it was with reference to this very thing that this whole passage was spoken:

'Seek ye the Lord while he may be found, call ye upon him while he is near: let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts, and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon. For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith the Lord. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts. For as the rain cometh down, and the snow from heaven, and returneth not thither, but watereth the earth, and maketh it bring forth and bud, that it may give seed to the sower, and bread to the eater: so shall my word be that goeth out of my mouth, and it shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it.'

It is the continuity, the certain preservation, and the final efficiency, of every moral influence for good that issues from the lips or mind of God, that is here taught, and guarded against skepticism. We, divinely instructed, borrow these same influences from God, who broods over us. And as there shall not be one single influence for good let forth from the mind of God that shall dare to report itself an empty-handed servant, as every such influence shall do the errand whereto it is sent, so likewise every single influence for good that we borrow from God, in the lowest as well as the highest spheres, shall not return unto us void. Like the rain, it may be hidden; like the snow, it may dissolve out of our sight; but it shall not fail to accomplish its legitimate result.

There has not been one single good enthusiasm that has set on fire some heart, there has not been one single breath of love that has touched the higher feelings of some soul, there has not been one single volition or power that has been followed by appropriate action, in all the periods of time, that has failed to do its appointed work. Seeds perish by the thousand; ten thousand things in the vegetable world seem to be cut short in the initial stage of their growth; but I take it that there has not been one influence for good, for purity, for justice, for mercy, for integrity, for spirituality, in the world, that has come to nothing. Such influences have in every case accomplished the thing whereto they were sent, and prospered in their errand, though we may not have been able to trace them to their final issues. However much good you may do, you may be sure that none of it will be done in vain, although the effects which it produces may be hidden from your view. You are not to know by the registering of the eye, or the measuring of the senses, all the results of the good you do.

Some men seem to themselves to be useful only when they can measure the effects of their conduct; but these things have been hidden from the eyes of men. Besides [illegible] men, who lived before the days of Christ—noble old prophet souls—longed to behold the light of coming glory to hasten which their deeds had contributed; but they died without that sight. They could not trace those deeds to their consequences. But all the stripes and persecutions that men have borne for the sake of goodness; all the sympathy that they have treasured up in their hearts for their fellow-men; all the blood that they have poured out for the cause of truth and righteousness—all this has been garnered and placed to their account: not in the books of men—God has taken care of it; and he stands saying, for the encouragement of his fainting children, 'As the rain and the snow which come down about you to day shall not return without accomplishing that whereto it is sent, so not the slightest thing put forth for goodness, and usefulness, and purity shall perish. Though it disappear, though it be hidden, it is that it may do its office-work.'

Do not work when you are in the sunshine alone. Do not count only those things useful the effects of which you can see. The results of ten thousand things of usefulness are covered up. It is well that it is so; for man cannot bear success, because it is so intoxicating. Pride and vanity easily get drunk on the wine of success. From those, therefore, that do the most, is hidden much that they do. It is not best that they should know it all. But God knows it; and there comes a registering day, and a reaping day, an exhibition day, a day of welcoming and gratulation, when good men go home to heaven to be surprised with the harvest of which they only sowed the seed;—the much that has come from the little."

* * * * * * *

"It is God that presides over all things and all men. He shapes our courses. He loves the world, and bears it in his arms as a mother carries her child in her bosom. He watches over it. He smiles at the fantasies of tyranny, and mocks the airs of oppressors. He knows in his heart that the day is coming when every man shall make him afraid.

There is to me promise in the rain-drops of to-day, now that I have learned to read them. I hear the voice of God saying to to my heart, 'As the rain cometh down from heaven, and returneth not thither, but watereth the earth, and maketh it bring forth and bud, that it may give seed to the sower, and bread to the eater; so shall my word be that goeth out of my mouth, it shall not return to me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it.' Even so: thy word is for religion, for love, for liberty, for justice; and thy word shall abide for ever!"

Meditation of Dr. Cotton Mather, born 1662.

"The thoughts of Christ are become exceedingly frequent with me, I meditate on his glorious person, as the eternal and the incarnate Son of God: and I behold the infinite God as coming to me, and meeting with me in this blessed meditation. I fly to him on multitudes of occasions every day, and am impatient if many minutes have passed without some recourse to him. Every now and then I rebuke myself for having been so long without any thoughts of my Savior; how can I bear to keep at such a distance from him? I then look up to him, and say, O, my Savior, draw near unto me! O, come to dwell in my soul, and help me to cherish some thoughts wherein I shall enjoy thee; and upon this I set myself to think of what he has done, (is doing,) and what he will do, for me: I find the subject inexhaustible, and after I have been thus employed in the day, I fall asleep at night in the midst of some meditation on the glory of my Savior; so I fall asleep in Jesus, and when I awake in the night, I do on my bed 'seek him whom my soul loveth,' (on awaking) the desires of my soul still carry me to him who was last in my thoughts when I fell asleep."

Sunshine.

O, for more of it! We need it in our hearts, lives, homes, churches—everywhere. God causes his sun to rise upon the evil and good. So let us scatter sunshine on our way as far as we can. Away with this eternal scowling, this everlasting blue-light. Let us have sunshine, warm, mellow, rich, and cheering. "Ye were some time darkness, but now are ye light in the Lord. Walk as children of the light." "Ye brethren are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief. Ye are all the children of the day." Walk, then, in the light, and scatter it far and wide. "Neither be ye sorry; for the joy of the Lord is your strength:" not the joy of the world, but "of the Lord." O, be full of this holy joy, and then reflect the divine sunshine on all around. Do not go groping in darkness longer. Heaven's brightness is but just before you. The Master cometh, "And unto you who fear his name shall the sun of righteousness arise, with healing in his wings." Ah! there shall be sunshine, and that sun shall no more go down. Reader, will you bask in that sunshine?—H. L. H.—Ex.

A Woman's True Life.

To most women, how rarely occurs the opportunity of accomplishing great things, and making great conquests, as the on-looking world estimates greatness. But in every relation of life, and in almost every day's and hour's experience, there are laid in her pathway little crosses to take up and bear, little lessons to learn of patience and forbearance, little sacrifices which may seem as nothing to the looker-on, but which, from peculiarity of temperament, may in reality be costly ones; little victories over nameless developments of selfishness, the culture of many a little hope, and feeling, and principle, and suppression of many desires, repinings, or exactions, which make the feeble woman sometimes greater and stronger, in the eyes of Him who looks into the soul's innermost recesses, than the mighty man who takes a city.

To the most of women the great warfare of this probationary life must be a warfare known best by its result—the enemies they would vanquish meet them in the little hidden nooks of every-day life, and the victories they gain in the warfare are recorded, not on the scroll of earthly fame, but by watching angels in God's book on high.

Then how greatly important is each day's result in the discipline of domestic life, if here it is we are to achieve holy victories, and then to receive the plaudit, "Well done!"—or at the last to find inscribed upon our course, "Defeat—failure—irretrievable loss."

Loss and Gain.

Thou hast done well to kneel and say,
Since he who gave can take away
And bid me suffer—I obey.

And also well to tell thy heart
That good lies in the bitterest part,
And thou wilt profit by her smart.

But bitter hours come to all;
When even truths like these will pall,
Sick hearts for humbler comfort call.

Then I would have thee strive to see
That good and evil come to thee
As one of a great family.

And as material life is planned,
That even the loneliest one must stand,
Dependent on his brother's hand;

So links more subtle and more fine
Bind every other soul to thine,
In one great brotherhood divine.

Nor with thy share of work be vext;
Though incomplete, and even perplext,
It fits exactly to the next.

What seems so dark to thy dim sight
May be a shadow, seen aright,
Making some brightness doubly bright.

The flash that struck thy tree—no more
To shelter thee—lets heaven's blue floor
Shine where it never shone before.

Thy life, that has been dropped aside
Into Time's stream, may stir the tide
In rippled circles spreading wide.

The cry wrung from thy spirit's pain
May echo on some far-off plain,
And guide a wanderer home again.

Fail—yet rejoice. Because no less
The failure that makes thy distress
May teach another full success.

It may be that in some great need
Thy life's poor fragments are decreed
To help build up a lofty deed.

Thy heart might throb in vast content,
Thus knowing that it was but meant
As chord in one great instrument;

That even the discord in thy soul
May make completer music roll
From out the great harmonious whole,

It may be, that when all is light,
Deep-set within that deep delight
Will be to know why all was right;

To hear life's perfect music rise,
And, while it floods the happy skies,
Thy feeble voice to recognize.

Then strive more gladly to fulfill
Thy little part. This darkness still
Is light to every loving will.

And trust—as if already plain
How just thy share of loss and pain
Is for another fuller gain.

I dare not limit time or place
Touched by thy life; nor dare I trace
Its far vibrations into space.

ONE only knows. Yet if the fret
Of thy weak heart, in weak regret,
Needs a more tender comfort yet,

Then thou mayst take thy loneliest fears,
The bitterest drops of all thy tears,
The dreariest hours of all thy years,

And, through thy anguish there outspread,
May ask that God's great love would shed
Blessings on one beloved head

And thus thy soul shall learn to draw
Sweetness from out that loving law
That sees no failure and no flaw

Where all is good. And life is good,
Were the one lesson understood
Of its most sacred brotherhood.

—Adelaide A. Proctor.

BE PREPARED.—No man knows what a day may bring forth; what miseries, what good or what evil, what afflictions, what temptations, what liberty, what bonds, what good success, or what bad success, a day may bring forth; and, therefore, a man need every day be in the closet with God, that he may be prepared and fitted to entertain and improve all the occurrences, successes, and emergencies which may attend him in the course of his life.—Thomas Brooks.

Reading for Youth.

The Secret.

A STORY FOR BOYS.

(Concluded.)

For a full hour the agony of the mother lasted, she then lay motionless from utter exhaustion, and finally fell into a profound slumber. A portion of the gold piece yet remained, and Clarence tendered to the doctor the usual fee. A smile stole over the face of the wealthy Dr. S—— (for so it happened that one of the first physicians in the city had by chance, been summoned,) and there was a tear in his eye as he looked at him earnestly.

"God bless you, my noble fellow," and he laid his hand upon his head. "No, keep your money for other good deeds—but tell me who are you?

Clarence looked up at him and smiled, after a moment's pause.

"Only my father's son."

"Well, well, you choose to do your good deeds under a veil, I see; any father should be proud of such a son. I never saw you before, but I think we shall meet again. You have a heart, my boy, too large for that manly little frame."

He laid his hand kindly upon his head, shook him warmly by the hand, and disappeared.

Clarence went also, but returned in an hour, bringing with him a pair of new shoes for each of the two eldest children. These exhausted the money he then had with him, but his charity box was at home, and on that fund he determined to draw in behalf of the sufferers. While deliberating on what they most needed, his good intentions were forestalled by the appearance of the doctor's carriage before the door, and the doctor sprang out hastily with numerous packages of clothing, provisions, etc.—an ample supply for their present wants.

"Here," he said to the eldest girl, a child of six years, "dress your brothers and sisters in these clothes, and see if your little hands cannot make the room comfortable."

The child's eyes brightened, for the food had strengthened, and his kind words encouraged her, and she was at once busily employed. He smiled cordially as he discovered Clarence, and said—

"I told you we should meet again."

He hastened away to other engagements, but a supply of fuel came by his orders immediately after, and Clarence remained to aid the helpless children; nor did he leave until he saw them warm and comfortable.

The doctor visited the family until the poor and grateful widow was perfectly restored, and able again to take care of her little ones; then his wife provided employment for her, and she required no further assistance. One more visit revealed all this to Clarence, and he and the doctor never met again.

* * * * * *

Four weeks had passed. Clarence's good deed was still his own secret, when his father encountered Dr. S.——

"Mr. Mitchell, what a noble specimen of humanity you have in that son of yours, I congratulate you on being his father.

"Which one, doctor?

"Why, the dark hair and the dark eyes. He does not tell his name."

"What do you mean, doctor? I hope he is not ashamed to own it?"

"Then he has not told you of his recent encounter with me?"

"Not a word."

"Is it possible? Let me tell you, you have reason to be proud of that boy, he is a noble little fellow."

Then relating to Mr. Mitchell every circumstance of that day connected with Clarence—delicately withholding his own part in the proceedings, which did not, however, long remain a secret.

With a full heart overflowing with thankfulness for such a son, Mr. Mitchell returned home that night and related all to his wife. As soon as Clarence came in he took him by the hand. "My son, I know the history of the twenty shilling piece."

Clarence looked up in wonder.

"Dr. S—— is an old friend, though we do not meet often. He would not rest until he had traced you out; and now, my boy, receive your father's blessing." He bent down and kissed his forehead: then he led him to his mother. "There," said he, "take to your heart the noblest son that God ever gave to a mother—take him, and say God bless him."

She did fold him to her heart in silence, and the mother's feeling was too deep for words. Edward came in. "My son, you have done well in the purchase of your Bible; your brother has done well in the practice of its precepts. Emulate his noble example. I am proud of you both."

Mrs. Mitchell withdrew with Edward into the library, and there related to him the story. Scarcely had she concluded it when he rushed back and threw himself in tears on his brother's neck. "Oh, Clarence! I must be good like you."

Clarence wept. "Why it is but a little that I have done. I had everything that I required; it was no sacrifice."

"But you lost the skating party. Clarence, you know that you wanted a new riding whip, you said so when father was giving us lessons on Pony, in the last vacation,"

"No matter for that," said Clarence.

"My boy," said his father, "why did you keep it so secret? Did you not suppose that we would approve and commend it?"

"Yes, father, but I remembered what you read to us that morning, in the lesson for the day:—

"Take heed that ye do not your alms before men, to be seen of men; otherwise ye have no reward of your Father which is in Heaven."

Children, be Prompt.

Never say, when told to do anything, "In a minute," or "by and by." This leads to a bad habit, which, if not overcome, will prevent all confidence in you as you grow up. You will then put off duties you owe to your neighbor in the same way, and lose his confidence. Many men lose the respect of their neighbors, not so much because they mean to do wrong, as through carelessness. "By-and-by," and "to-morrow," have ruined thousands, robbed them of their character, and made them anything but blessings in a neighborhood. Little confidence can be placed in their word, not because they mean to tell falsehoods, but because of their carelessness. No obligation is fulfilled when it should be. And it is sometimes so in their own affairs. They lose days and weeks because business is not attended to when it ought to be. A tool is lost, because not promptly put back when done with. Fulfill promptly every promise made. Put off not an hour.

THE CRISIS.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION,

Payable in Advance.

For a single copy one year............$2.00
For a single copy 6 months............1.00
For a single copy 3 months............50
Five copies to one address for 6 months...4.00
Ten copies to one address for 6 months...8.00
Twenty copies to one address, 6 months...15.00
Thirty copies to one address, 6 months...22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the paper within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability, when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send as much in addition to their subscriptions as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to ELD. MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts, and 26 cents to any other part of the United States.

CANADA SUBSCRIBERS have to prepay the postage on their papers, 26 cents a year, in addition to the above: i. e., $1 will pay for twenty-three numbers, or $2.26 a year. The same [illegible]